PREFACE.

In addition to the statistical and other information concerning international, national, state and local affairs usually given in The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book, this issue contains details of many matters of more than ordinary significance. Mention of all of them cannot be made here, but the following may be noted:

Decisions of the United States Supreme court in the Standard Oil and Tobacco trust cases, together with the dissenting opinions of the late Justice John M. Harlan. The text of these exceedingly weighty utterances is reproduced in full.

Effort of the United States and Canada to establish reciprocal trade relations. The failure of the reciprocity plan does not lessen its importance from a political, economic or historic point of view and for that reason considerable space is devoted to it.

Negotiation of general arbitration treaties between the United States on the one hand and Great Britain and France on the other. This has been regarded by many on both sides of the Atlantic as a long step toward universal peace.

Revolution in Mexico resulting in the deposition of President Diaz and his flight to Europe.

Revolution in China against the Manchu regime and efforts to establish a modern constitutional form of government. The sudden awakening of the people of this ancient empire is thought to be of the utmost importance in the history of the far east.

Outbreak of hostilities between Italy and Turkey over the seizure by the former of Tripoli, in northern Africa.

Other subjects concerning which information is given in this volume include electoral and legislative reforms of the day, pensions in the United States, alien contract labor laws, admission of New Mexico and Arizona into the union, with a digest of the constitution of each; workmen's compensation acts in various states and countries, congressional reapportionment, national and state legislation, and political data for the coming presidential campaign in the United States.

In conclusion it may also be noted that an increase in the size of the book has again been found necessary in order to maintain its standard as a reference work.

ERAS OF TIME.

The Gregorian year 1912 corresponds to the following eras:

- The latter part of the 136th and the beginning of the 137th year of the independence of the United States of America.
- The year 1330 of the Mohammedan era, beginning Dec. 22, 1911; the year 1331 begins Dec. 11, 1912.
- The year A. M. 8021 of the Greek church, beginning Jan. 14.
- The year 4609 (nearly) of the Chinese era, beginning Feb. 18.
- The year 5672-73 (nearly) of the Jewish era; year 5673 begins at sunset Sept. 11.
- The year 2572 of the Japanese era, beginning Feb. 18.
- The year 6625 of the Julian period.
- The year 7420-21 of the Byzantine era, beginning Sept. 1.
- The first day of January is the 2,419,403d day since the beginning of the Julian period.

CHRONOLOGICAL CYCLES.

Dominical letters.....G. F.	Solar cycle.....	17	Dionysian period.....	241
Epact (moon's age Jan. 1).... 11	Roman Indiction.....	10	Jewish lunar cycle.....	10
Lunar cycle (golden number).. 13

EXPLANATORY NOTE—The Dominical letter or letters (two for leap year), or Sunday letters, indicate the day of the year on which the first Sunday occurs, the first seven letters of the alphabet being used. Thus, for 1910, the Dominical letter is B, the second letter of the alphabet, and hence the second day of the year will be the first Sunday of the year. In leap years two letters are used, the first being for January and February, and the latter, being the preceding letter, answers for the last ten months, in order to maintain the cycle. The rule for obtaining the Dominical letter for any year is somewhat complicated and for that reason is omitted here. The Golden Number is that number of a cycle of nineteen years which shows how many years have elapsed since the new moon fell on Jan. 1, for in nearly nineteen years the solar and lunar years nearly come together. The chief use of this cycle is in fixing the date of Easter, and in this same connection is used the Epact. The Solar Cycle is the number of years that have elapsed since the days of the week fell on the same days of the year, or when there will, therefore, be a recurrence of the Dominical or Sunday Letter. This would be the case every seven years but for leap year, hence four times seven is the cycle, or twenty-eight years. It is the remainder found by adding nine to the year and dividing the sum by twenty-eight. The Roman Indiction is a cycle of fifteen years and is of no utility except to chronologers. It is the remainder found by adding three to the year and dividing by fifteen. The Julian Period is a cycle of 7,980 years and is the product of the three cycles. Golden Number (19), Solar Cycle (28) and Roman Indiction (15), and hence shows the time when these cycles will coincide, or begin at the same time. The first of this cycle will be completed in the year 2267; it is the year + 4713. The Dionysian Period is a cycle of 532 years and is called the great Paschal cycle, being the product of a completed solar and lunar cycle (28×19). It is the remainder found by adding 457 to the year and dividing by 532, and with the Julian Period is chiefly used by chronologers. The Jewish Lunar Cycle is always three less than the Golden Number and is used by the Jews in fixing the time of their festivals.

NOTE—To ascertain any day of the week first look in the table for the year required and under the months are figures which refer to the corresponding figures at the head of the columns of days below. For example: To know on what day of the week July 4 was in the year 1895, in the table of years look for 1895, and in a parallel line, under July, is figure 1, which directs to column 1, in which it will be seen that July 4 falls on Thursday.

*1752 same as 1772 from Jan. 1 to Sept. 2. From Sept. 14 to Dec. 31 same as 1780 (Sept. 3-13 were omitted).—This Calendar is from Whitaker's London Almanac, with some revisions.

THE PLANETS.

MERCURY (♿) will be brightest:

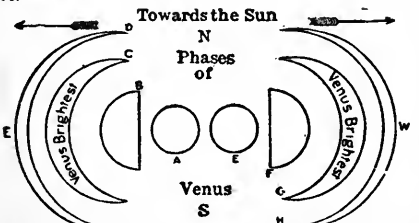

(1) As an evening star March 16-24, in κ , and Nov. 20-27 in η , setting about 1 hour 15 minutes after the sun. On Nov. 20 α will be $2^{\circ} 47'$ north of η and on March 19 the moon will be $1^{\circ} 47'$ south of him.

(2) As a morning star Jan. 6-12 in η , Sept. 12-18 in α with the Sickle and Regulus $10'$ above or west of him, and Dec. 27-31, in η , and with the red star Antares $10'$ to $15'$ above or west of him and rising about 1 hour 15 minutes before the sun.

Watch for him within the limits of the dates given, looking near the sunrise point of the horizon in the morning, when he is a morning star, and near the sunset point when he is an evening star. The brightest and reddest star will surely be this planet. At all other times it will be invisible. It is worth while to be certain of seeing this planet, as it is the one nearest the sun and the smallest of our planetary family, except those of the group of planet-like bodies or asteroids, which move in orbits between Mars and Jupiter and of which only one (Vesta) is ever visible to the naked eye.

VENUS (♀), the most beautiful and attractive of all the planets, will not reach her maximum degree of brilliancy possible this year, as may be seen by an inspection of the chart "Visibility of the Planets." She will be best seen at the beginning and close of the year. She will gradually fade in brightness as a morning star in the east, at the beginning of the year, to invisibility about July 1, being at superior conjunction with the sun and rising with the sun July 5, after which she will be an evening star.

In the different parts of her orbit Venus presents to us all the phases of the moon and with a far greater change in apparent size and degree of brilliancy than any other of the heavenly bodies. In the annexed figure these phases and changes in apparent diameter are shown, only the concave margins (always on the side away from the sun) will show, when viewed with a small telescope, an irregular outline, due to mountains, etc.

As seen in the morning west of sun.

As seen in the evening east of sun.

Explanation:

- A—Fifteen days before superior conjunction with the sun, or June 18, 1912.
 B—At greatest elongation west of the sun, Nov. 26, 1911, and about July 1, 1913.
 C—When brightest as a morning star Oct. 21-25, 1911, and about May 25, 1913.
 D—Just after inferior conjunction with the sun, or about April 28, 1913.
 E—Fifteen days after superior conjunction with the sun, July 20, 1912.
 F—At greatest elongation east of the sun, or about Feb. 10, 1913.
 G—When brightest as an evening star, or about March 15, 1913.
 H—Just before inferior conjunction with the sun, about April 13, 1913.

Venus' place in the zodiac at the beginning of the year will be in ϵ on the eastern margin of the four sided figure of the brightest stars of that constellation. See Table of the Rising, Setting and Southing of the Planets; also Star Table and Chart of the Heavens. She is advancing or moving eastward past the stars and on Jan. 9 will be 5° N. of Antares, the noted red star in η , and $10^{\circ} 38'$ N. of α . At this time η , α and Antares will be in a straight N. and S. line, in the eastern morning sky, with the moon high up toward the meridian from them. On Jan. 15 the η will overtake and pass $6'$ to the N. of η . During the last week of Jan. and first one of Feb. she will be passing just north of the Milkmaid's Dipper in the milky way; Feb. 14, 6° N. of η ; Feb. 24, $30'$ N. of η ; and 25° S. of Job's Coffin; March 16, $30'$ N. of η ; April 15, occulted by the η ; April 27, $10'$ S. of η ; May 15 in τ 3° S. of η and 10° N. of Menkar, the brightest star in the head of the Whale; May 27 still in τ , $1^{\circ} 7'$ N. of η and 5° S. of the Pleiades or 7 stars low in the S. E. at dawn; June 12 in ν , 10° N. E. of Aldebaran and $26'$ N. of ν ; and June 14, 4° S. of ν . July 5 at superior σ with σ , rising with him, and for some days before and after that date she will be rendered invisible by the overpowering light of the sun. When next seen she will be E. of the σ as an EVENING STAR. See Chart. July 14 she will be in κ , 10° S. of Castor and Pollux and 4° S. of the η ; Aug. 13, 2° S. of η ; Aug. 14, close to Regulus in α at the end of the Handle of the Sickle and $6'$ N. of ν ; Sept. 9 on Equator of the Heavens 20° W. of Spica Virginis, in η and $30'$ N. of σ ; Sept. 12 very close to and N. of η ; 4° N. of Spica Sept. 21-23 and $1^{\circ} 43'$ S. of α ; near Alpha Librae Oct. 7 and $2^{\circ} 52'$ N. of σ Oct. 12, near where she was at the beginning of the year; rising on Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, still in η , 3° N. of η , and pointed at by the three lower stars of the Milkmaid's Dipper, near the bottom (upper side of bowl) of which she will pass Nov. 20-23; $1^{\circ} 36'$ S. of δ Dec. 13, when on the boundary between δ and ϵ , and at the close of the year she will be near the boundary between δ and ϵ and about 10° S. of the λ -shaped figure which marks δ and through which the Equator of the Heavens passes. At the close of the year she will be about as bright as at its beginning.

MARS (♂) will not attain his maximum degree of brightness this year but will be most favorably situated for visibility early in the year, shining about equally in the morning and evening hours. After Mars has been in τ on Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, until his σ with the σ Nov. 4. During October and November he will be too near the sun to be well observed, being, of course, absolutely INVISIBLE for some days before and after Nov. 4. When next seen he will be on the other (west) side of the sun as a MORNING STAR in the east, continuing such to the end of the year. His movements past the stars will be as follows: At the opening of the year in τ close to and S. W. of the Pleiades; occulted by the τ Jan. 1; $30'$ N. of τ Jan. 28, when on a line joining the Hyades (Aldebaran) and the Pleiades; $1^{\circ} 43'$ S. of τ Feb. 23 and 2° S. March 25. Through February and March to April 5 he will be advancing past the stars of ν and about March 25 he will be on a line joining the two bright stars which mark the tips of the horns of the Bull. Here he will be surrounded by the brightest stars of the firmament, being midway between Capella on the N. and Betelge use on the S; Procyon S. E., Orion below (south) and Sirius S. E. He will be 3° S. of ν April 22 in ν , 5° S. of ν , May 12, being N. of ν ; $3^{\circ} 49'$ of ν May 20, below Castor and Pollux; 3° S. in southern portion of dense cluster of small stars called Praesepe; 3° N. of ν June 18 in σ ; 2° S. of ν July 16 with Regulus 5° W. of him; close to ν Aug. 20, in ν and $30'$ S. of ν Sept. 9.

JUPITER (♃) will be at his brightest the latter part of May and first of June, when he will shine at night, rising with the setting of the sun. He will be exclusively a morning star at the first of the year, rising about 4 a. m. in η , 5° above (north of) Antares; σ with σ Jan. 9, being $1^{\circ} 38'$ S. of her, and again on Oct. 7, when σ will be $1^{\circ} 43'$ N. of ν ; at W. σ or 90° W. of σ March 4, when he will begin to shine in the evening hours also. He will be in conjunction with the η as follows: Jan. 15, Feb. 11, March 10, April 6, May 3 and 30, June 26, July 24, Aug. 20, Sept. 16, Oct. 14, Nov. 11, and Dec. 9. In all the foregoing cases the moon will be to the S. of α from 5° to 6° . He will be in ν with the σ Dec. 18 and therefore practically invisible throughout December. He will be 90° W. of σ (W. σ) Aug. 30, when he will cease to shine in the morning hours and become exclusively an evening star to the end of the year or to invisibility in December.

SATURN (♄) will be brightest in November-December, being invisible in May. At the beginning of the year he will be 15° W. of the Pleiades and Hyades in τ , setting about 3 a. m.; at E. σ Feb. 3, when he will cease to shine in the morning and become strictly an evening star; ♄ 7° S. of ♀ May 27; 27° S. of ♀ June 2 and in ♄ with ♀ May 14. His conjunctions with the ♀ are as follows: Jan. 27, Feb. 24, March 22 and April 13, in all of which he will be about 4° S. of the ♀; also June 13, July 10, Aug. 7, Sept. 3, Oct. 1 and 28, Nov. 24 and Dec. 21, in all of which he will be about 6° S. of the ♀. His wonderful ring system will be most observed the latter part of the year.

URANUS (♅) will be at ♄ to the sun and brightest July 24. On or about that time very good eyes may see him, in the absence of the ♀. In the head of the Goat (♈), about 4° S. of the brightest stars of that constellation and in line with them. When at or near his brightest he will appear about as the dimmest star the unaided eye can see.

NEPTUNE (♆) will be brightest Jan. 13 in ✕ just below Castor and Pollux. None of the other planets will pass near enough to him at or near the time of his greatest brightness to aid in identifying this, the dimmest and most distant member of our planetary family. Nor will it be near enough to any bright or well known star to serve as a guide to his place. Hence the amateur, even with a good telescope, will be uncertain whether he has seen this planet, unless his instrument is a large one and astronomically mounted so that it can be directed to the exact spot.

The near approaches of the moon to Uranus and Neptune are here disregarded, as the great light of the moon would render these planets invisible even with telescopes.

Explanation of signs: ♈ Aries. ♉ Taurus. ♊ Gemini. ♋ Cancer. ♌ Leo. ♍ Virgo. ♎ Libra. ♏ Scorpio. ♐ Sagittarius. ♑ Capricornus. ♒ Aquarius. ♓ Pisces. The place indicated for the planets is for the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th and 5th Sundays of each month, in the order of the planets. The other signs used are as follows: ♄, conjunction or near approach; ♀, opposition or 180° from the Sun; ♁, quadrature or 90° from the Sun; ♀ Sun; ♁ Earth; ♀ Mercury; ♀ Venus; ♀ Mars; ♃ Jupiter; ♆ Saturn; ♅ Uranus; ♆ Neptune; ♁ Ascending Node; ♁ Descending Node; ♁ Moon, generally.

Note—The moon will run "high" from "lowest" to "highest," and run "low" from "highest" to "lowest." The full moon will be highest of the year at meridian passage Dec. 16 and lowest June 22. She will begin to run lower March 31 and decrease in altitude until June 22 and then increase (run higher) until Dec. 21, after which she will gradually get lower until June 22. This is because the full moon must always be on the opposite side of the earth from the sun, and hence when the sun is lowest in declination the moon must be highest and when the sun is highest the moon must be lowest. The inclination of the earth's axis to the plane of the ecliptic (sun's apparent path), being 23½°, and that of the moon being 5° to the ecliptic it follows that the total swing from highest to lowest must be (23½+5) X 2=57°.

THE SIGNS AND CONSTELLATIONS OF THE ZODIAC.

Until recently it was taken for granted that the present relationship between signs and constellations of the zodiac was generally understood, as all astronomical textbooks mention their disagreement and explain the cause. The numerous letters of inquiry concerning differences between this data in this almanac and certain others show the necessity for this note of explanation.

Thousands of years ago when the zodiac, that belt of the heavens about 16° in width within which move the moon and planets, was formed and divided into twelve parts or seasons called signs, each containing certain star groups called constellations, each was given the name of an object or animal which never did bear any relationship to the configuration of the stars in that group or division, but which did or is supposed to have reference to certain astronomical or other facts. Thus Libra, ♎, the scales or balance, comes at the autumnal equinox when there is an equilibrium or balance between the length of day and night the world over. Aquarius, ♒, the water-bearer, and whose sign is the Egyptian sign for running water, comes at the season of greatest rains in Egypt, and so on.

Since the time when these divisions were made and named, owing to the precession of the equinoxes, resulting from the differing polar and equatorial diameters of the earth, the signs have moved back west nearly a whole division or constellation and where ♈ was the first, ♋ now is. Hence, though the sun now enters the sign ♈ March 20, it is a month later when he enters the constellation ♈. It must be apparent, therefore, that any supposed influence or relationship which early astrologers attributed to the position of the sun, moon or planets when in certain of these divisions can no longer exist, as the sign now only represents that space or division of the zodiac where the controlling constellation was 2,000 or more years ago, but is not now. Nevertheless some almanacs still give the signs for the moon's place, which is very misleading to those who attempt to follow her in her course among the stars. Hence, this almanac gives the constellation and discards the ancient picture of the disemboweled man as relics of the age of superstition. The sign is retained for sun's place in connection with the seasons and sun's path through the zodiac each month because of its relationship to the equinoxes and solstices.

HARVEST MOON AND HUNTER'S MOON.

The full moon in September that falls near the autumnal equinox (Sept. 23) is called the harvest moon. Because at that time it is in that part of its orbit where it makes the smallest angle with the horizon it appears to rise at nearly the same hour for several nights in succession, thus giving an unusual number of moonlight evenluntings. The same thing occurs to a slightly less degree at the time of the first full moon after the equinox, when it is called the hunter's moon. "It is true," says Prof. George C. Comstock in his "Text-Book of Astronomy," "that on the average the moon rises and sets fifty-one minutes later each day than on the day before. But there is a good deal of irregularity in the retardation of the time of moonrise and moonset, since the time of rising depends largely upon the particular point of the horizon at which the moon appears, and between two days this point may change so much as to make the retardation considerably greater or less than its average value. In northern latitudes this effect is particularly marked in the month of September, when the eastern horizon is nearly parallel with the moon's apparent path in the sky, and near the time of full moon in that month the moon rises on several successive nights at nearly the same hour, and in a less degree the same is true for October. This highly convenient arrangement of moonlight has caused the full moons of these two months to be christened respectively the harvest moon and the hunter's moon."

NOTE—The distance apart is between centers as seen from center of earth. It should be borne in mind that the bodies are not always nearest when in ♂, but the above data will enable the absolute identification of these planets on or near those dates and when the ♂ occurs in the daytime. The planets ♀, ♃ and ♄ are ignored in this connection as usually the ♃'s light will render the last two invisible and generally ♄ will be too near the sun to be seen.

VISIBILITY OF THE PLANETS, 1912.

Copyright, 1909, by Berlin H. Wright, De Land, Fla.

Explanation: The light portions show the position of the planet with respect to the sun—whether east or west of the sun and the approximate distance from the sun in both hours and degrees of arc. The width of the light space also indicates the relative degree of brilliancy. Each of the small divisions represents approximately one hour of time or 15° of arc. Thus Venus at the beginning of the year will be 3-hours or 45° west of the sun and will rise that much before the sun as a morning star. Mars will be in conjunction with the sun Nov. 4, when he changes from an evening to a morning star, and Jupiter will rise with the setting of the sun or 15° or 12 hours from the sun the last of May, shining all night.

FACTS ABOUT THE SUN AND PLANETS.

The sun's surface is 12,000 and its volume 1,300,000 times that of the earth, but the mass is only 332,000 times as great and its density about one-quarter that of the earth. The force of gravity at the surface of the sun is twenty-seven times greater than that at the surface of the earth. The sun rotates on its axis once in 25.3 days at the equator, but the time is longer at the higher latitudes, from which fact it is presumed that the sun is not solid, at least as to its surface.

THE EARTH AND THE MOON.

Earth—The equatorial diameter of the earth is 7,926.5 miles and the polar diameter 7,899.5 miles; equatorial circumference, 25,000. The linear velocity of the rotation of the earth on its axis at the equator is 24,840 miles a day, or 1,440 feet a second; its velocity in its orbit around the sun is approximately nineteen miles per second, the length of the orbit being about 560,000,000 miles. The superficial area of the earth according to Encke, the astronomer, is 197,108,580 square miles, of which two-thirds is water and one-third land. The planetary mass is about 256,000,000 cubic miles.

Moon—The moon has a diameter of 2,162 miles, a circumference of about 6,800 miles and a surface area of 14,685,000 square miles. Her mean distance from the earth is 238,840 miles. The volume of the moon is about 1/40th that of the earth and the density about 3-2-5 that of water. The time from new moon to new moon is 29 days 12 hours 44.05 minutes. The moon has no atmosphere and no water and is a dead world.

VELOCITY OF LIGHT.

Light travels at the rate of 186,300 miles per second. It requires 8 minutes and 8 seconds for light to come from the sun to the earth.

ECLIPSES IN 1912.

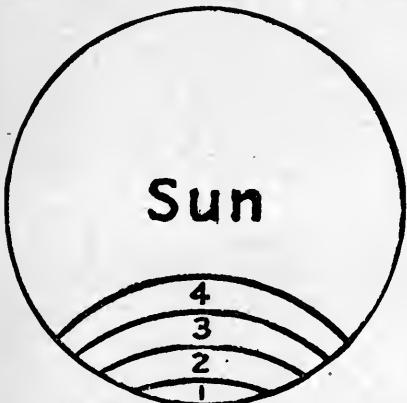

There will be four eclipses in 1912, two of the sun and two of the moon, as follows:

I. Partial of the moon April 1, invisible in the United States; visible quite generally in Europe, Africa, part of Asia and South America. This eclipse will recur April 12, 1930, which will be its last return.

II. Central and total of the sun April 17. The partial phase will be visible in eastern United States. The sun will rise more or less eclipsed after the first small one on one limb, then follows, at intervals of eighteen years eleven days, the other partial, total and partial again, to the last small one on the opposite limb from the one where the series started, covering a period of over 1,000 years.

III. Partial of the moon Sept. 26. In eastern United States the moon will be setting as the eclipse begins and hence invisible there. Visible as follows:

The figure shows 1, 2, 3 and 4 digits cut off from the sun's southern limb.

throughout most of the southern, middle and eastern states. Invisible west of a line from near Pensacola, Fla., through Memphis, Tenn., to Winipeg. East of a line from near Sag Harbor through Albany to Clayton, N. Y., the eclipse will be wholly visible, but very small and on the southern limb of the sun. Throughout New England the eclipse will begin a few minutes after sunrise and end about 7 a. m. At Chicago the eclipse will be decreasing at sunrise and will end at 5:45 a. m. Only about two digits will be eclipsed in the great lakes region and that on the southern limb of the sun, as shown in the figure annexed. In the southeastern states about four digits will be eclipsed.

The last preceding eclipse of the series to which this one belongs was April 5, 1894, and the next succeeding one will be April 27, 1930, when it will be total and visible in the United States. An eclipse of the sun recurs sixty or seventy times

Size of the eclipse 1.46 digits, as shown in the annexed figure, where the arrow shows the course of the moon through the southern portion of the great dark shadow of the earth from west to east. One more eclipse of this series, only, remains, Oct. 6, 1930. This series began 847 years ago, since which time it has recurred forty-seven times.

IV. Total of the sun Oct. 10. Visible in the southeastern portion of the United States as a very small eclipse on the sun's southern limb. In the gulf states the sun will rise with the eclipse on. Throughout most of North and South Carolina the whole of the eclipse will be visible, just after the rising of the sun, but it will be very small—only about one digit—see figure 1.

This eclipse will recur Oct. 21, 1930, when it will again be total.

NUMBER OF THE STARS.

According to the best astronomers the number of stars that can be seen by a person of average eyesight is only about 7,090. The number visible through the telescope has been estimated by J. E. Gore at 70,000,000 and by Profs. Newcomb and Young at 100,000,000.

CHART OF THE HEAVENS.

EXPLANATION—The chart of the heavens shows all the bright stars and groups visible in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Cuba and Hawaii. Stars of the third magnitude are sometimes shown in order to complete a figure.

If a bright uncharted body be seen near the "ecliptic circle" it must be a planet. To locate the planets or moon, refer to the tables "position of planets" and "moon's place" in the almanac pages, find the proper signs on the chart on the "ecliptic circle" and an inspection of that part of the heavens, comparing with the chart, will serve to identify the planet and all the surrounding objects.

Because of the earth's motion from west to east (opposite to the direction of the arrow in the chart), the stars rise 4m. earlier each day or 30m. per week, or 2h. a month. The chart shows the position at 9 p. m. Then if the position for any other hour be desired, as for 7 p. m. count back one month, or ahead one month for 11 p. m., and so on for any hour of the night.

A circle described from the zenith on the "zenith circle" for the desired latitude with a radius of 90° (see graduated meridian) will show what stars are above the horizon. Thus Capella is near the overhead (zenith) point on latitude 40° north Jan. 15, 9 p. m., as will be Algenib in the handle of the Big Dipper at 3 a. m. Then from Capella or Algenib all the surrounding visible groups can be identified. The "pointers" being 5° apart and always in sight may be used as a convenient unit of measure; also when visible the Belt of Orion, 3°, or the sides of the square of Pegasus. The observer is always supposed to stand under the overhead point and to face south and north alternately.

Explanation: By the absolute scale of magnitudes stars brighter than Aldebaran and Altair are indicated by fractional or negative quantities, thus Vega 0.2 and Sirius -1.4. As the magnitudes increase the brilliancy decreases, each increase of a unit being equal to a decrease of about two and one-half in brightness.

To ascertain when any star or constellation will be on the upper meridian add the number opposite in the column "For Meridian Passage" to the figures in the following table "Sidereal Noon," taking note whether such figures be "Morn." or "Eve." if Morn. and the sun is more than 12h. the result will be Eve. of same day; if Eve. and the sun is more than 12h. the result will be Morn. of the next day. Having found the time of meridian passage, for the rising subtract and for the setting add the numbers opposite the star in the column headed "For Rising and Setting" and observe the direction as to Morn. and Eve. given for the meridian passage. Those marked (.....) in the last column are circumpolar and do not rise or set in the latitude of New York city. Stars having an asterisk (*) in the last column are only to be seen in the far south and then when near the meridian, as the vapors of the horizon will prevent seeing them when they rise or set. To tell how high from the nearest point of the horizon a star will be at its meridian passage, subtract the star's declination from 90° and if the result is less than the latitude of the place of the observer that star will neither rise nor set, but is circumpolar, and the difference between that result and the latitude shows the star's altitude above the north point of the horizon or below the southern horizon. Or (90°-Dec.)-lat., = alt. or elevation of the star above the nearest point of the horizon at meridian passage for stars of south. dec. Examples:

Sidereal noon, Oct. 30,	9:28 p. m.
Fomalhaut "In Merid." col.,	22:48
	32:16
Subtract,	24:00
	8:16 p. m. of the 31st, time of meridian passage.
Fomalhaut ris. and set. col.,	4:00
	12:16 = 0:16 a. m. of
	Nov. 1, the time of setting.

Fomalhaut dec., 20° s. 90°-30° = 60°-40° = 20°. Altitude of Fomalhaut in latitude 40° at its meridian passage. To measure celestial distances with the eye keep in mind that one-third of the distance from the zenith to the horizon is 30°. For smaller measurements use the "pointers" in the "big dipper," which are nearly 5° apart—a convenient celestial yardstick because always to be seen. In the case of a star whose dec. is such as to bring it nearer to the zenith than to a horizon at meridian passage, it will be more convenient to use its zenith distance as a means of locating it. The difference between the latitude and dec. is this zenith distance. If the dec. is greater than the latitude then such difference is to be counted northward, otherwise southward from the zenith.

UNITED STATES PASSPORT REGULATIONS.

Passports are issued to citizens of the United States upon application to the state department in Washington. The application must be accompanied by an affidavit, attested by a notary public or other officer empowered to administer oaths, stating that the applicant is a citizen and giving the place of birth and age, and it must be accompanied by the certificate of one other citizen to whom he is personally known that the declaration made by the applicant is true. The application must also be accompanied by a description of the person, particularly as to age, height, complexion, forehead, eyes, nose, mouth, chin, hair and face.

Blank forms are furnished by the state department upon application. The fee for each passport is $1. Citizens traveling abroad may also in some cases obtain passports by applying to United States ambassadors and ministers. Where any person has made a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States and has resided in the United States for three years a passport valid for six months may be issued to him. This passport is not renewable and does not entitle the holder to the protection of this government in the country of which he was originally a citizen.

THE CAPITOL IN WASHINGTON.

The corner stone of the original capitol building was laid by President Washington Sept. 18, 1793. The north wing was finished in 1810 and the south wing in 1811, a wooden passageway connecting them. The original designs of the structure were made by Dr. William Thornton. The two wings were burned by the British in 1814, but were immediately restored. In 1827 the original building was completed at a cost of $2,433,844.13. Extensions of the wings were begun in 1851 and completed in 1859. The dome, which is 287 feet 5 inches in height, was completed in 1865. The capitol stands in latitude 38 degrees 53 minutes 20.4 seconds north and longitude 77 degrees 00 minutes 35.7 seconds west from Greenwich. The area covered by the building is 153,112 square feet.

TIME AND STANDARDS OF TIME.

Various kinds of time are in use in this country:

1. Astronomical Time or Mean Solar Time—This is reckoned from noon through the twenty-four hours of the day and is used mainly by astronomical observatories and in official astronomical publications. It is the legal time of the Dominion of Canada, though "standard" and "mean" time are in general use there as in this country.

2. Mean Local Time—This is the kind that was in almost universal use prior to the introduction of standard time. This time is based upon the time when the mean sun^{*} crosses the meridian and the day begins at midnight. When divided into civil divisions—years, months, weeks, days, etc.—it is sometimes called civil time.

3. Standard Time—For the convenience of the railroads and business in general a standard of time was established by mutual agreement in 1883 and by this calculation trains are now run and local time is regulated. By this system the United States, extending from 65° to 125° west longitude, is divided into four time sections, each of 15° of longitude, exactly equivalent to one hour (7½° or 30m. on each side of a meridian), commencing with the 75th meridian. The first or eastern section includes all territory between the Atlantic coast and an irregular line drawn from Buffalo to Charleston, S. C. the latter city being its southernmost point. The second or central section includes all the territory between this eastern line and another irregular line extending from Bismarck, N. D., to the mouth of the Rio Grande. The third or mountain section includes all the territory between the last-named line and nearly the western borders of Idaho, Nevada and Arizona. The fourth or Pacific section includes all the territory of the United States between the boundary of the mountain section and the Pacific coast. Inside of each of these sections standard time is uniform and the time of each section differs from that next to it by exactly one hour, as shown on the map.

*Owing to the eccentricity of the earth's orbit and the inclination of the equator to the ecliptic, the apparent motion of the sun is retarded or accelerated according to the earth's place in its orbit. Hence, to take the actual sun as a guide would necessitate years, days and their subdivisions of unequal length. Therefore an imaginary or "mean sun" was invented. The difference between apparent and mean time is called the "equation of time" and may amount to a quarter of an hour in twenty-four hours. It is the difference between the figures in "Sun at noon mark" column in calendar and twelve hours. The figures on a correct sun dial give the apparent time.

STANDARDS OF TIME.

The following is the table of times, based upon the meridians used by the United States and Canada:

NAME OF TIME.	Degrees.	Central meridian from Greenwich.	Nearest place.
Interecolonial or Atlantic.....	60	4 hours west.....	About 3¼ degrees east of Halifax, N.S.
Eastern.....	75	5 hours west.....	Between New York and Philadelphia
Central.....	90	6 hours west.....	St. Louis and New Orleans.
Mountain.....	105	7 hours west.....	Denver, Col.
Pacific.....	120	8 hours west.....	1¼ degrees east of Sacramento, Cal.
.....	135	9 hours west.....	1 degree east of Sitka, Alaska.
Tahiti.....	150	10 hours west.....	¼ degree west of the island of Tahiti.
Hawaiian.....	157½	10 hrs. 31 min. west.	Near center of Molokai.

It is obvious that to express the time of rising and setting of the sun and moon in standard time would limit the usefulness of such data to the single point or place for which it was computed, while in mean time it is practically correct for places as widely separated as the width of the continent (see note at bottom of February calendar), and persons having obtained the mean time by the rising or setting of the sun or moon may easily ascertain the correct standard time of any event by making use of the following table and map:

All the calculations in The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book are based upon mean or clock time unless otherwise stated. The sun's rising and setting are for the upper limb corrected for parallax and refraction. In the case of the moon no correction is needed, as in the sun, for "parallax and refraction"; with her they are of an opposite nature and just balance each other. The figures given, therefore, are for the moon's center on a true horizon such as the ocean affords.

The calculations in each of the geographical divisions of each calendar page will apply with sufficient accuracy to all places in the contiguous

North American zones indicated by the headings of the divisions.

The heavy dotted lines show the arbitrary (standard) divisions of time in the United States. The plus and minus marks on either side of the meridian lines show whether it is necessary to add to or subtract from the mean time of points east or west of these lines to arrive at actual standard time. Example: Chicago is $2\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ east of the 90th meridian, therefore Chicago local time $- 2\frac{1}{2} \times 4 = 10$ to be subtracted from mean time to = standard time, and for Boston standard (eastern) time, 16m. must be subtracted from mean time.

SUPREME COURT DECISION IN STANDARD OIL CASE.

SUMMARY OF PROCEEDINGS.

Suit begun in St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 15, 1906.

Circuit court of United States decides that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey is an illegal combination, Nov. 20, 1909.

Decision of Circuit court sustained by United States Supreme court May 15, 1911.

Nov. 15, 1906, the attorney-general of the United States began proceedings against the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey under the Sherman anti-trust act by filing in the United States Circuit court in St. Louis a petition in equity against the company and its twenty constituent corporations and partnerships and seven individual persons asking that the combination be declared unlawful and in restraint of interstate trade. Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul was appointed special prosecutor, assisted by Charles B. Morrison of Chicago, Frank H. Poole and J. H. Graves of the department of justice, W. H. Higgins of Minneapolis and C. A. Severance of St. Paul. The defense was led by John G. Milburn of New York. The decision in the case was announced in St. Louis and St. Paul Nov. 20, 1909, the government winning a complete victory. In an opinion written by Judge Walter H. Sarnborn of St. Paul and concurred in by Judges Vandeventer, Hook and Adams, with a special concurring opinion by Judge Hook, the United States Circuit court for the eastern district of Missouri declared the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey an illegal combination, operating in restraint of trade, and ordered its dissolution within thirty days. The decree, unless suspended by an appeal to the United States Supreme court, was to be followed by an injunction restraining the company from further continuance of its business under its existing formation.

The defendant company carried the case to the Supreme court of the United States, which, in an elaborate decision rendered May 15, 1911, sustained the decree of the lower court except as to the time of its execution, which was extended to six months. The court further held that in view of the possible injury which might result to the public through the cessation of interstate commerce in the products of the corporation pending dissolution that portion of the decree should not stand.

In effect the decision of the Supreme court, as announced by Mr. Chief Justice White, was that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and its nineteen subsidiary companies formed a combination in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. The dissolution of the combination was therefore ordered to take place within six months.

Following is the complete official text of the decision:

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.
No. 398—October term, 1910.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey et al., appellants, vs. the United States.

Appeal from the Circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Missouri.

[May 15, 1911.]

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and thirty-three other corporations, John D. Rockefeller, William Rockefeller and five other individual defendants prosecute this appeal to reverse a decree of the court below. Such decree was entered upon a bill filed by the United States under authority of section 4 of the act of July 2, 1890, known as the antitrust act, and had for its object the enforcement of the provisions of that act. The record is inordinately voluminous, consisting of twenty-three volumes of printed matter, aggregating about 12,000 pages, containing a vast amount of confusing and conflicting testimony relating to innumerable, complex and varied business transactions extending over a period of nearly forty years. In an effort to pave the way to reach the subjects which we are called upon to consider, we propose at the outset, following the order of the bill, to give the merest possible outline of its contents, to summarize the answer, to indicate the course of the trial and point out briefly the decision below rendered.

The bill and exhibits, covering 170 pages of the printed record, was filed on Nov. 15, 1906. Corporations known as Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, Standard Oil Company of California, Standard Oil Company of Indiana, Standard Oil Company of Iowa, Standard Oil Company of Kansas, Standard Oil Company of Kentucky, Standard Oil Company of Nebraska, Standard Oil Company of New York, Standard Oil Company of Ohio and sixty-two other corporations and partnerships, as also seven individuals, were named as defendants. The bill was divided into thirty numbered sections and sought relief upon the theory that the various defendants were engaged in conspiring "to restrain the trade and commerce in petroleum, commonly called 'crude oil,' in refined oil and in the other products of petroleum, among the several states and territories of the United States and the District of Columbia and with foreign nations, and to monopolize the said commerce." The conspiracy was alleged to have been formed in or about the year 1870 by three of the individual defendants, viz., John D. Rockefeller, William Rockefeller and Henry M. Flagler. The detailed averments concerning the alleged conspiracy were arranged with reference to three periods; the first from 1870 to 1882, the second from 1882 to 1899 and the third from 1899 to the time of the filing of the bill.

The general charge concerning the period from 1870 to 1882 was as follows:

"That during said first period the said individual defendants, in connection with the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, purchased and obtained interests through stock ownership and otherwise in, and entered into agreements with, various persons, firms, corporations and limited partnerships engaged in purchasing, shipping, refining and selling petroleum and its products among the various states for the purpose of fixing the price of crude and refined oil and the products thereof, limiting the production thereof and controlling the transportation therein, and thereby restraining trade and commerce among the several states and monopolizing the said commerce."

To establish this charge it was averred that John D. and William Rockefeller and several other named individuals, who, prior to 1870, composed three separate partnerships engaged in the business of refining crude oil and shipping its products in interstate commerce, organized in the year 1870 a corporation known as the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, and transferred to that company the business of the said partnerships, the members thereof becoming, in proportion to their prior ownership, stockholders in the corporation. It was averred that the other individual defendants soon afterward became participants in the illegal combination and either transferred property to the corporation or to individuals to be held for the benefit of all parties in interest in proportion to their respective interests in the combination; that is, in proportion to their stock ownership in the Standard Oil Company of Ohio. By the means thus stated, it was charged that by the year 1872 the combination had acquired substantially all but three or four of the thirty-five or forty oil refineries located in Cleveland, O. By reason of the power thus obtained and in further execution of the intent and purpose to restrain trade and to monopolize the commerce, interstate as well as intrastate, in petroleum and its products, the bill alleged that the combination and its members obtained large preferential rates and rebates in many and diverse ways over their competitors from various railroad companies, and that by means of the advantage thus obtained many, if not virtually all, competitors were forced either to become members of the combination or were driven out of business; and thus, it was alleged, during the period in question the following results were brought about: (a) That the combination, in addition to the refineries in Cleveland, which it had acquired as previously stated and which it had either dismantled to limit production or continued to operate, also from time to time acquired a large number of refineries of crude petroleum situated in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and elsewhere. The properties thus acquired, like those previously obtained, although belonging to and being held for the benefit of the combination, were ostensibly divergently controlled, some of them being put in the name of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, some in the name of corporations or limited partnerships affiliated therewith, or some being left in the name of the original owners, who had become stockholders in the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, and thus members of the alleged illegal combination.

(b) That the combination had obtained control of the pipe lines available for transporting oil from the oil fields to the refineries in Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Titusville, Philadelphia, New York and New Jersey. (c) That the combination during the period named had obtained a complete mastery over the oil industry, controlling 90 per cent of the business of producing, shipping, refining and selling petroleum and its products, and thus was able to fix the price of crude and refined petroleum and to restrain and monopolize all interstate commerce in those products.

The averments bearing upon the second period (1882 to 1899) had relation to the claim:

"That during the said second period of conspiracy the defendants entered into a contract and trust agreement, by which various independent firms, corporations, limited partnerships and individuals engaged in purchasing, transporting, refining, shipping and selling oil and the products thereof among the various states turned over the management of their said business, corporations and limited partnerships to nine trustees, composed chiefly of certain individuals defendant herein, which said trust agreement was in restraint of trade and commerce and in violation of law, as hereinafter more particularly alleged."

The trust agreement thus referred to was set out in the bill. It was made in January, 1882. By its terms the stock of forty corporations, including the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, and a large quantity of various properties which had been previously acquired by the alleged combination and which was held in diverse forms, as we have previously indicated, for the benefit of the members of the combination, was vested in the trustees and their successors, "to be held for all parties in interest jointly." In the body of the trust agreement was contained a list of the various individuals and corporations and limited partnerships whose stockholders and members, or a portion thereof, became parties to the agreement. This list is in the margin.*

*First. All the stockholders and members of the following corporations and limited partnerships, to wit: Acme Oil company, New York; Acme Oil company, Pennsylvania; Atlantic Refining Company of Philadelphia; Bush & Co. (Ltd.); Camden Consolidated Oil company; Elizabethport acid works; Imperial Refining company (Ltd.); Charles Pratt & Co.; Paine, Albiet & Co.; Standard Oil Company, Ohio; Standard Oil company, Pittsburgh; Smiths Ferry Oil Transportation company; Solar Oil company (Ltd.); Stone & Fleming Manufacturing company (Ltd.). Also all the stockholders and members of such other corporations and limited partnerships as may hereafter join in this agreement at the request of the trustees herein provided for.

Second. The following individuals, to wit: W. C. Andrews, John D. Archbold, Lide K. Arter, J. A. Bostwick, Benjamin Brewster, D. Bushnell, Thomas C. Bushnell, J. N. Camden, Henry L. Davis, H. M. Flagler, Mrs. H. M. Flagler, John Huntington, H. A. Hutchins, Charles F. G. Heye, A. B. Jennings, Charles Lockhart, A. M. McGregor, William H. Macy, William H. Macy, Jr., estate of Josiah Macy, William H. Macy, Jr., executor; O. H. Payne, A. J. Pouch, John D. Rockefeller, William Rockefeller, Henry H. Rogers, W. P. Thompson, J. J. Vandergrift, William T. Wardell, W. G. Warden, Joseph L. Warden, T. Warden, Frew & Co., Louise C. Wheaton, H. M. Hanna and George W. Chapin, D. M. Harkness, D. M. Harkness, trustee; V. Harkness, O. H. Payne, trustee; Charles Pratt, Horace C. Pratt, O. M. Pratt, Julia H. York, George H. Vilas, M. R. Keith, trustees; George F. Chester. Also all such individuals as may hereafter join in the

The agreement made provision for the method of controlling and managing the property by the trustees, for the formation of additional manufacturing, etc., corporations in various states, and the trust, unless terminated by a mode specified, was to continue "during the lives of the survivors and survivor of the trustees named in the agreement and for twenty-one years thereafter." The agreement provided for the issue of Standard Oil trust certificates to represent the interest arising under the trust in the properties affected by the trust, which, of course, in view of the provisions of the agreement and the subject to which it related, caused the interest in the certificates to be coincident with and the exact representative of the interest in the combination, that is, in the Standard Oil Company of Ohio. Soon afterward it was alleged the trustees organized the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the Standard Oil Company of New York, the former having a capital stock of $3,000,000 and the latter a capital stock of $5,000,000, subsequently increased to $10,000,000 and $15,000,000, respectively. The bill alleged "that pursuant to said trust agreement the said trustees caused to be transferred to themselves the stocks of all corporations and limited partnerships named in said trust agreement, and caused various of the individuals and copartnerships, who owned apparently independent refineries and other properties employed in the business of refining and transporting and selling oil in and among said various states and territories of the United States as aforesaid, to transfer their property situated in said several states to the respective Standard Oil companies of said states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio and other corporations organized or acquired by said trustees from time to time * * *." For the stocks and property so acquired the trustees issued trust certificates. It was alleged that in 1888 the trustees "unlawfully controlled the stock and ownership of various corporations and limited partnerships engaged in such purchase and transportation, refining, selling and shipping of oil," as per a list which is excerpted in the margin.†

agreement at the request of the trustees herein provided for.

A portion of the stockholders and members of the following corporations and limited partnerships, to wit: American Lubricating Oil company, Baltimore United Oil company, Beacon Oil company, Bush & Denslow Manufacturing company, Central Refining company of Pittsburgh, Chesebrough Manufacturing company, Chess Carley company Consolidated Tank Lin. company, Inland Oil company, Keystone Refining company, Maverick Oil company, National Transit company, Portland Kerosene Oil company, Producers' Consolidated Land & Petroleum company, Signal oil works (Ltd.), Thompson & Bedford company (Ltd.), Devco Manufacturing company, Eclipse Lubricating Oil company (Ltd.), Empire Refining company (Ltd.), Franklin Pipe company (Ltd.), Galena oil works (Ltd.), Galena Farm Oil company (Ltd.), Germania Mining company, Vacuum Oil company, H. C. Van Tine & Co. (Ltd.), Waters-Pierce Oil company. Also stockholders and members (not being all thereof) of other corporations and limited partnerships who may hereafter join in this agreement at the request of the trustees herein provided for.

In the entry by the Supreme court of Ohio, on March 2, 1892, of a decree adjudging the trust agreement to be void, not only because the Standard Oil Company of Ohio was a party to the same, but also because the agreement in and of itself was in restraint of trade and amounted to the creation of an unlawful monopoly. It was alleged that shortly after this decision, seemingly for the purpose of complying therewith, voluntary proceedings were had apparently to dissolve the trust, but that these proceedings were a subterfuge and a sham because they simply amounted to a transfer of the stock held by the trust in sixty-four of the companies which it controlled to some of the remaining twenty companies, it having controlled before the decree eighty-four in all, thereby, while seemingly in part giving up its dominion, yet in reality preserving the same by means of the control of the companies as to which it had retained complete authority. It was charged that especially was this the case, as the stock in the companies selected for transfer was virtually owned by the nine trustees or the members of their immediate families or associates. The bill further alleged that in 1897 the attorney-general of Ohio instituted contempt proceedings in the quo warranto case based upon the claim that the trust had not been dissolved as required by the decree in that case. About the same time also proceedings in quo warranto were commenced to forfeit the charter of a pipe line known as the Buckeye Pipe Line company, an Ohio corporation, whose stock, it was alleged, was owned by the members of the combination, on the ground of its connection with the trust which had been held to be illegal.

The result of these proceedings, the bill charged, caused a resort to the alleged wrongful acts asserted to have been committed during the third period, as follows:

"That during the third period of said conspiracy and its pursuance thereof the said individual defendants operated through the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, as a holding corporation, which corporation obtained and acquired the majority of the stocks of the various corporations engaged in purchasing, transporting, refining, shipping and selling oil lito and among the various states and territories of the United States and the District of Columbia and with foreign nations, and thereby managed and controlled the same, in violation of the laws of the United States, as hereinafter more particularly alleged."

It was alleged that in or about the month of January, 1899, the individual defendants caused the charter of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey to be amended:

"So that the business and objects of said company were stated as follows, to wit: 'To do all kinds of mining, manufacturing and trading business; transporting goods and merchandise by land or water in any manner; to buy, sell, lease and improve land; build houses, structures, vessels, cars, wharves, docks and piers; to lay and operate pipe lines; to erect lines for conducting electricity; to enter into and carry out contracts of every kind pertaining to its business; to acquire, use, sell and grant licenses under patent rights; to purchase or otherwise acquire, hold, sell, assign and transfer shares of capital stock and bonds or other evidences of indebtedness of corporations and to exercise all the privileges of ownership, including voting upon the stock so held; to carry on its business and have offices and agencies therefor in all parts of the world, and to hold, purchase, mortgage and convey real estate and personal property outside the state of New Jersey.'

The capital stock of the company—which since March 19, 1892, had been $10,000,000—was increased to $110,000,000, and the individual defendants, as theretofore, continued to be a majority of the board of directors.

Without going into detail it suffices to say that it was alleged in the bill that shortly after these proceedings the trust came to an end, the stock of the various corporations which had been controlled by it being transferred by its holders to the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, which corporation issued therefor certificates of its common stock to the amount of $97,250,000. The bill contained allegations referring to the development of new oil fields, for example, in California, southeastern Kansas, northern Indian Territory and northern Oklahoma and made reference to the building or otherwise acquiring by the combination of refineries and pipe lines in the new fields for the purpose of restraining and monopolizing the interstate trade in petroleum and its products.

Reiterating in substance the averments that both the Standard Oil trust from 1852 to 1899 and the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey since 1899 had monopolized and restrained interstate commerce in petroleum and its products, the bill at great length additionally sets forth various means by which during the second and third periods, in addition to the effect occasioned by the combination of alleged previously independent concerns, the monopoly and restraint complained of was continued. Without attempting to follow the elaborate averments on these subjects, spread over fifty-seven pages of the printed record, it suffices to say that such averments may properly be grouped under the following heads: Rebates, preferences and other discriminatory practices in favor of the combination by railroad companies; restraint and monopolization by control of pipe lines and unfair practices against competing pipe lines; contracts with competitors in restraint of trade; unfair methods of competition, such as local price cutting at the points where necessary to suppress competition; espionage of the business of competitors, the operation of bogus independent companies and payment of rebates on oil, with the like intent; the division of the United States into districts and the limiting of the operations of the various subsidiary corporations as to such districts so that competition in the sale of petroleum products between such corporations had been entirely eliminated and destroyed, and finally reference was made to what was alleged to be the "enormous and unreasonable profits" earned by the Standard Oil trust and the Standard Oil company as a result of the alleged monopoly, which presumably was averred as a means of reflexly inferring the scope and power acquired by the alleged combination.

Coming to the prayer of the bill, it suffices to say that in general terms the substantial relief asked was, first, that the combination in restraint of interstate trade and commerce and which had monopolized the same, as alleged in the bill, be found to have existence and that the parties thereto be perpetually enjoined from doing any further act to give effect to it; second, that the transfer of the stocks of the various corporations to the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, as alleged in the bill, be held to be in violation of the first and second sections of the antitrust act, and that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey be enjoined and restrained from in any manner continuing to exert control over the subsidiary corporations by means of ownership of said stock or otherwise; third, that specific relief by injunction be awarded against further violation of the statute by any of the acts specifically complained of in the bill. There was also a prayer for general relief.

Of the numerous defendants named in the bill the Waters-Pierce Oil company was the only resident of the district in which the suit was commenced and the only defendant served with process therein. Contemporaneous with the filing of the bill the court made an order, under section 5 of the antitrust act, for the service of process upon all the other defendants wherever they could be found. Thereafter the various defendants unsuccessfully moved to vacate the order for service on nonresident defendants or filed pleas to the jurisdiction. Joint exceptions were likewise unsuccessfully filed, upon the ground of impertinence, to many of the averments of the bill of complaint, particularly those which related to acts alleged to have been done by the combination prior to the passage of the antitrust act and prior to the year 1899.

Certain of the defendants filed separate answers and a joint answer was filed on behalf of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and numerous of the other defendants. The scope of the answers will be adequately indicated by quoting a summary on the subject made in the brief for the appellants.

"It is sufficient to say that, whilst admitting many of the alleged acquisitions of property, the formation of the so-called trust of 1882, its dissolution in 1892 and the acquisition by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey of the stocks of the various corporations in 1899, they deny all the allegations respecting combinations or conspiracies to restrain or monopolize the oil trade, and particularly that the so-called trust of 1882, or the acquisition of the shares of the defendant companies by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey in 1899, was a combination of independent or competing concerns or corporations. The averments of the petitions respecting the use of means adopted to monopolize the oil trade are traversed either by a denial of the acts alleged or of their purpose, intent or effect."

On June 24, 1907, the cause being at issue, a special examiner was appointed to take the evidence and his report was filed March 22, 1909. It was heard on April 5 to 10, 1909, under the expediting act of Feb. 11, 1906, before a Circuit court consisting of four judges.

The court decided in favor of the United States. In the opinion delivered all the multitude of acts of wrongdoing charged in the bill were put aside, in so far as they were alleged to have been committed prior to the passage of the antitrust act, "except as evidence of their (the defendants') purpose, of their continuing conduct and of its effect." (173 fed. rep., 177.)

By the decree which was entered it was adjudged that the combining of the stocks of various companies in the hands of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey in 1899 constituted a combination in restraint of trade and also an attempt to monopolize and a monopolization under section 2 of the antitrust act. The decree was against seven individual defendants, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, thirty-six domestic companies and one foreign company, which the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey controls by stock ownership; these thirty-eight corporate defendants being held to be parties to the combination found to exist.*

The bill was dismissed as to all other corporate defendants, thirty-three in number, it being adjudged by section 3 of the decree that they "have not been proved to be engaged in the operation or carrying out of the combination."†

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey was enjoined from voting the stocks or exerting any control over the said thirty-seven subsidiary companies and the subsidiary companies were enjoined from paying any dividends as to the Standard company, or permitting it to exercise any control over them by virtue of the stock ownership or power acquired by means of the combination. The individuals and corporations were also enjoined from entering into or carrying into effect any like combination which would evade the decree. Further, the individual defendants, the Standard company and the thirty-seven subsidiary corporations were enjoined from engaging or continuing in interstate commerce in petroleum or its products during the continuance of the illegal combination.

*Counsel for appellants says: "Of the thirty-eight (thirty-seven) corporate defendants named in section 2 of the decree and as to which the judgment of the court applies, four have not appeared, to wit: Corsicana Refining company, Manhattan Oil company, Security Oil company, Waters-Pierce Oil company and one, the Standard Oil Company of Iowa, has been liquidated and no longer exists."

†Of the dismissed defendants sixteen were natural gas companies and ten were companies which were liquidated and ceased to exist before the filing of the petition. The other dismissed defendants, seven in number, were: Florence Oil Refining company, United Oil company, Tidewater Oil company, Tidewater Pipe company (Ltd.), Platt & Washburn Refining company, Franklin Pipe company and Pennsylvania Oil company.

At the outset a question of jurisdiction requires consideration, and we shall also as a preliminary dispose of another question to the end that our attention may be completely concentrated upon the merits of the controversy when we come to consider them.

First. We are of opinion that in consequence of the presence within the district of the Waters-Pierce Oil company the court, under the authority of section 5 of the antitrust act, rightly took jurisdiction over the cause and properly ordered notice to be served upon the nonresident defendants.

Second. The overruling of the exceptions taken to so much of the bill as counted upon facts occurring prior to the passage of the antitrust act—whatever may be the view as an original question of the duty to restrict the controversy to a much narrower area than that propounded by the bill—we think by no possibility in the present stage of the case can the action of the court be treated as prejudicial error justifying reversal. We say this because the court, as we shall do, gave no weight to the testimony adduced under the averments complained of except in so far as it tended to throw light upon the acts done after the passage of the antitrust act and the results of which it was charged were being participated in and enjoyed by the alleged combination at the time of the filing of the bill.

We are thus brought face to face with the merits of the controversy.

Both as to the law and as to the facts the opposing contentions pressed in the argument are numerous and in all their aspects are so irreconcilable that it is difficult to reduce them to some fundamental generalization, which by being disposed of would decide them all. For instance, as to the law. While both sides agree that the determination of the controversy rests upon the correct construction and application of the first and second sections of the antitrust act, yet the views as to the meaning of the act are as wide apart as the poles, since there is no real point of agreement on any view of the act. And this also is the case as to the scope and effect of authorities relied upon, even although in some instances one and the same authority is asserted to be controlling.

So also is it as to the facts. Thus, on one hand, with relentless pertinacity and minuteness of analysis, it is insisted that the facts establish that the assailed combination took its birth in a purpose to unlawfully acquire wealth by oppressing the public and destroying the just rights of others, and that its entire career exemplifies an inexorable carrying out of such wrongful intents, since, it is asserted, the pathway of the combination from the beginning to the time of the filing of the bill is marked with constant proofs of wrong inflicted upon the public and is strewn with the wrecks resulting from crushing out, without regard to law, the individual rights of others. Indeed, so conclusive, it is urged, is the proof on these subjects that it is asserted that the existence of the principal corporate defendant—the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey—with the vast accumulation of property which it owns or controls, because of its infinite potency for harm and the dangerous example which its continued existence affords, is an open and enduring menace to all freedom of trade and is a byword and reproach to modern economic methods. On the other hand, in a powerful analysis of the facts, it is insisted that they demonstrate that the origin and development of the vast business which the defendants control was but the result of lawful competitive methods, guided by economic genius of the highest order, sustained by courage, by a keen insight into commercial situations, resulting in the acquisition of great wealth, but at the same time serving to stimulate and increase production, to widely extend the distribution of the products of petroleum at a cost largely below that which would have otherwise prevailed, thus proving to be at one and the same time a benefaction to the general public as well as of enormous advantage to individuals. It is not denied that in the enormous volume of proof contained in the record in the period of almost a lifetime, to which that proof is addressed, there may be found acts of wrongdoing, but the insistence is that they were rather the exception than the rule and in most cases were either the result of too great individual zeal in the keen rivalries of business or of the methods and habits of dealing which, even if wrong, were commonly practiced at the time. And to discover and state the truth concerning these contentions both arguments call for the analysis and weighing, as we have said at the outset, of a jumble of conflicting testimony covering a period of forty years, a duty difficult to rightly perform and, even if satisfactorily accomplished, almost impossible to state with any reasonable regard to brevity.

Duly appreciating the situation just stated, it is certain that only one point of concord between the parties is discernible, which is, that the controversy in every aspect is controlled by a correct conception of the meaning of the first and second sections of the antitrust act. We shall therefore—departing from what otherwise would be the natural order of analysis—make this one point of harmony the initial basis of our examination of the contentions, relying upon the conception that by doing so some harmonious resonance may result adequate to dominate and control the discord with which the case abounds. That is to say, we shall first come to consider the meaning of the first and second sections of the antitrust act by the text, and after discerning what by that process appears to be its true meaning we shall proceed to consider the respective contentions of the parties concerning the act, the strength or weakness of those contentions, as well as the accuracy of the meaning of the act as deduced from the text in the light of the prior decisions of this court concerning it. When we have done this we shall then approach the facts. Following this course we shall make our investigation under four separate headings. First, the text of the first and second sections of the act originally considered and its meaning in the light of the common law and the law of this country at the time of its adoption; second, the contentions of the parties concerning the act and the scope and effect of the decisions of this court upon which they rely; third, the application of the statute to facts; and fourth, the remedy, if any, to be afforded as the result of such application.

First. The text of the act and its meaning. We quote the text of the first and second sections of the act, as follows:

"Section 1. Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

"Sec. 2. Every person who shall monopolize or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court."

The debates show that doubt as to whether there was a common law of the United States which governed the subject in the absence of legislation was among the influences leading to the passage of the act. They conclusively show, however, that the main cause which led to the legislation was the thought that it was required by the economic condition of the times; that is, the vast accumulation of wealth in the hands of corporations and individuals, the enormous development of corporate organization, the facility for combination which such organizations afforded, the fact that the facility was being used and that combinations known as trusts were being multiplied, and the widespread impression that their power had been and would be exerted to oppress individuals and injure the public generally. Although debates may not be used as a means for interpreting a statute (United States vs. Trans-Missouri Freight association, 166 U. S., 318, and cases cited) that rule in the nature of things is not violated by resorting to debates as a means of ascertaining the environment at the time of the enactment of a particular law; that is, the history of the period when it was adopted.

There can be no doubt that the sole subject with which the first section deals is restraint of trade as therein contemplated, and that the attempt to monopolize and monopolization is the subject with which the second section is concerned. It is certain that those terms, at least in their rudimentary meaning, took their origin in the common law and were also familiar in the law of this country prior to and at the time of the adoption of the act in question.

We shall endeavor then first to seek their meaning, not by indulging in an elaborate and learned analysis of the English law and of the law of this country, but by making a very brief reference to the elementary and indisputable conceptions of both the English and American law on the subject prior to the passage of the antitrust act.

(a) It is certain that at a very remote period the words contract in restraint of trade in England came to refer to some voluntary restraint put by contract by an individual on his right to carry on his trade or calling. Originally all such contracts were considered to be illegal, because it was deemed they were injurious to the public as well as to the individuals who made them. In the interest of the freedom of individuals to contract this doctrine was modified so that it was only when a restraint by contract was so general as to be co-terminus with the kingdom that it was treated as void. That is to say, if the restraint was partial in its operation and was otherwise reasonable the contract was held to be valid:

(b) Monopolies were defined by Lord Coke as follows:

"A monopoly is an institution or allowance by the king by his grant, commission or otherwise to any person or persons, bodies politic or corporate or for the sole buying, selling, making, working or using of anything whereby any person or persons, body politic or corporate are sought to be restrained of any freedom or liberty that they had before or hindered in their lawful trade. (3 Inst., 131.)"

Hawkins thus defined them:

"A monopoly is an allowance by the king to a particular person or persons of the sole buying, selling, making, working or using of anything whereby the subject in general is restrained from the freedom of manufacturing or trading which he had before. (Haw. P. C. bk. 1 c. 79.)"

The frequent granting of monopolies and the struggle which led to a denial of the power to create them, that is to say, to the establishment that they were incompatible with the English constitution, is known to all and need not be reviewed. The evils which led to the public outcry against monopolies and to the final denial of the power to make them may be thus summarily stated: (1) The power which the monopoly gave to the one who enjoyed it to fix the price and thereby injure the public; (2) the power which it engendered of enabling a limitation on production, and (3) the danger of deterioration in quality of the monopolized article which it was deemed was the inevitable resultant of the monopolistic control over its production and sale. As monopoly, as thus conceived, embraced only a consequence arising from an exertion of sovereign power, no express restrictions or prohibitions obtained against the creation by an individual of a monopoly as such. But as it was considered, at least so far as the necessities of life were concerned, that individuals by the abuse of their right to contract might be able to usurp the power arbitrarily to enhance prices, one of the wrongs arising from monopoly, it came to be that laws were passed relating to offenses such as forestalling, regrating and engrossing, by which prohibitions were placed upon the power of individuals to deal under such circumstances and conditions as, according to the conception of the times, created a presumption that the dealings were not simply the honest exertion of one's right to contract for his own benefit unaccompanied by wrongful motive to injure others, but were the consequence of a contract or course of dealing of such a character as to give rise to the presumption of an intent to injure others through the means, for instance, of a monopolistic increase of prices. This is illustrated by the definition of engrossing found in the statute (5 and 6 Edw. VI., ch. 14) as follows:

"Whoever person or persons * * * shall engross or get into his or their hands by buying, contracting or promise-taking, other than by demise, grant or lease of land, or tithes, any corn growing in the fields, or any other corn or grain, butter, cheese, fish or other dead victual whatsoever, within the realm of England, to the intent to sell the same again shall be accepted, reputed and taken as an unlawful engrosser or engrossers."

As by the statutes providing against engrossing the quantity engrossed was not required to be the whole or a proximate part of the whole of an article, it is clear that there was a wide difference between monopoly and engrossing, etc. But as the principal wrong which was deemed would result from monopoly—that is, an enhancement of the price—was the same wrong to which it was thought the prohibited engrossment would give rise, it came to pass that monopoly and engrossing were regarded as virtually one and the same thing. In other words, the prohibited act of engrossing because of its inevitable accomplishment of one of the evils deemed to be engendered by monopoly, came to be referred to as being a monopoly or constituting an attempt to monopolize. Thus Pollexfen, in his argument in East India company vs. Sandys (Skin., 165, 169), said:

"By common law he said that trade is free, and for that cited 3 Inst., 81; F. B., 65; 1 Roll., 4; that the common law is as much against 'monopoly' as 'engrossing,' and that they differ only that a 'monopoly' is by patent from the king, the other is by the act of the subject between party and party, but that the mischiefs are the same from both, and there is the same law against both. (Moore, 673; 11 Rep., 84.) The sole trade of anything is 'engrossing' ex rei natura, for whosoever hath the sole trade of buying and selling hath 'engrossed' that trade; and whosoever hath the sole trade to any country hath the sole trade of buying and selling the produce of that country at his own price, which is an 'engrossing.'"

And by operation of the mental process which led to considering as a monopoly acts which although they did not constitute a monopoly were thought to produce some of its baneful effects, so also because of the impediment or burden to the due course of trade which they produced, such acts came to be referred to as in restraint of trade. This is shown by my Lord Coke's definition of monopoly as being "an institution or allowance * * * whereby any person or persons, bodies politic or corporate are sought to be restrained of any freedom or liberty that they had before or hindered in their lawful trade." It is illustrated also by the definition which Hawkins gives of monopoly wherein it is said that the effect of monopoly is to restrain the citizen "from the freedom of manufacturing or trading which he had before." And see especially the opinion of Parker, C. J., in Mitchell vs. Reynolds (1711. 1 P. Williams, 181), where a classification is made of monopoly which brings it generically within the description of restraint of trade.

Generalizing these considerations the situation is this: (1) That by the common law monopolies were unlawful because of their restriction upon individual freedom of contract and their injury to the public; (2) that as to necessities of life the freedom of the individual to deal was restricted where the nature and character of the dealing was such as to engender the presumption of intent to bring about at least one of the injuries which it was deemed would result from monopoly, that is an undue enhancement of price; (3) that to protect the freedom of contract of the individual not only in his own interest, but principally in the interest of the common weal, a contract of an individual by which he put an unreasonable restraint upon himself as to carrying on his trade or business was void. And that at common law the evils consequent upon engrossing, etc., caused those things to be treated as coming within monopoly and sometimes to be called monopoly and the same considerations caused monopoly, because of its operation and effect, to be brought within and spoken of generally as impeding the due course of or being in restraint of trade.

From the development of more accurate economic conceptions and the changes in conditions of society it came to be recognized that the acts prohibited by the engrossing, forestalling, etc., statutes did not have the harmful tendency which they were presumed to have when the legislation concerning them was enacted, and therefore did not justify the presumption which had previously been deduced from them, but, on the contrary, such acts tended to fructify and develop trade. See the statutes of 12 George III., chapter 71, enacted in 1772, and statute of 7 and 8 Victoria, chapter 24, enacted in 1844, repealing the prohibitions against engrossing, forestalling, etc., upon the express ground that the prohibited acts had come to be considered as favorable to the development of and not in restraint of trade. It is remarkable that nowhere at common law can there be found a prohibition against the creation of monopoly by an individual. This would seem to manifest, either consciously or intuitively, a profound conception as to the inevitable operation of economic forces and the equipoise or balance in favor of the protection of the rights of individuals which resulted. That is to say, as it was deemed that monopoly in the concrete could only arise from an act of sovereign power and such sovereign power being restrained, prohibitions as to individuals were directed, not against the creation of monopoly, but were only applied to such acts in relation to particular subjects as to which it was deemed, if not restrained, some of the consequences of monopoly might result. After all, this was but an instinctive recognition of the truisms that the course of trade could not be made free by obstructing it, and that an individual's right to trade could not be protected by destroying such right.

From the review just made it clearly results that outside of the restrictions resulting from the want of power in an individual to voluntarily and unreasonably restrain his right to carry on his trade or business and outside of the want of right to restrain the free course of trade by contracts or acts which implied a wrongful purpose, freedom to contract and to abstain from contracting and to exercise every reasonable right incident thereto became the rule in the English law. The scope and effect of this freedom to trade and contract is clearly shown by the decision in Mogul Steamship company vs. McGregor (1891, A. C., 25). While it is true that the decision of the house of lords in the case in question was announced shortly after the passage of the antitrust act, it serves reflexly to show the exact state of the law in England at the time the antitrust statute was enacted.

In this country also the acts from which it was deemed there resulted a part, if not all, of the injurious consequences ascribed to monopoly came to be referred to as a monopoly itself. In other words, here, as had been the case in England, practical common sense caused attention to be concentrated not upon the theoretically correct name to be given to the condition or acts which gave rise to a harmful result, but to the result itself and to the remedying of the evils which it produced. The statement just made is illustrated by an early statute of the province of Massachusetts—that is, chapter 31 of the laws of 1778-79, by which monopoly and forestalling were expressly treated as one and the same thing.

It is also true that while the principles concerning contracts in restraint of trade—that is, voluntary restraint put by a person on his right to pursue his calling, hence only operating subjectively—came generally to be recognized in accordance with the English rule; it came, moreover, to pass that contracts or acts which it was considered had a monopolistic tendency, especially those which were thought to unduly diminish competition and hence to enhance prices—in other words, to monopolize—came also in a general sense to be spoken of and treated as they had been in England, as restricting the due course of trade, and therefore as being in restraint of trade. The dread of monopoly as an emanation of governmental power, while it passed at an early date out of mind in this country, as a result of the structure of our government, did not serve to assuage the fear as to the evil consequences which might arise from the acts of individuals producing or tending to produce the consequences of monopoly. It resulted that treating such acts as we have said as amounting to monopoly, sometimes constitutional restrictions, against legislative enactments or judicial decisions served to enforce and illustrate the purpose to prevent the occurrence of the evils recognized in the mother country as consequent upon monopoly, by providing against contracts or acts of individuals or combinations of individuals or corporations deemed to be conducive to such results. To refer to the constitutional or legislative provisions on the subject or the many judicial decisions which illustrate it would unnecessarily prolong this opinion. We append in the margin a note to treatises, etc., wherein are contained references to constitutional and statutory provisions and to numerous decisions, etc., relating to the subject.*

It will be found that as modern conditions arose the trend of legislation and judicial decision came more and more to adapt the recognized restrictions to new manifestations of conduct or of dealing which it was thought justified the inference of intent to do the wrongs which it had been the purpose to prevent from the beginning. The evolution is clearly pointed out in National Cotton Oil company vs. Texas (197 U. S., 115) and Shawnee Compress company vs. Anderson (209 U. S., 423), and, indeed, will be found to be illustrated in various aspects by the decisions of this court which have been concerned with the enforcement of the act we are now considering.

Without going into detail and but very briefly surveying the whole field, it may be, with accuracy, said that the dread of enhancement of prices and of other wrongs which it was thought would flow from the undue limitation on competitive conditions caused by contracts or other acts of individuals or corporations, led, as a matter of public policy, to the prohibition or treating as illegal all contracts or acts which were unreasonably restrictive of competitive conditions, either from the nature or character of the contract or other act or where the surrounding circumstances were such as to justify the conclusion that they had not been entered into or performed with the legitimate purpose of reasonably forwarding personal interest and developing trade, but, on the contrary, were of such a character as to give rise to the inference or presumption that they had been entered into or done with the intent to do wrong to the general public and to limit the right of individuals, thus restraining the free flow of commerce and tending to bring about the evils, such as enhancement of prices, which were considered to be against public policy. It is equally true to say that the survey of the legislation in this country on this subject from the beginning will show, depending as it did upon the economic conceptions which obtained at the time when the legislation was adopted or judicial decision was rendered, that contracts or acts were at one time deemed to be of such a character as to justify the inference of wrongful intent which were at another period thought not to be of that character. But this again, as we have seen, simply followed the line of development of the law of England.

Let us consider the language of the first and second sections, guided by the principle that where words are employed in a statute which had at the time a well known meaning at common law or in the law of this country they are presumed to have been used in that sense unless the context compels to the contrary.†

As to the first section, the words to be interpreted are "Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce * * * is hereby declared to *Purdy's Beach on Private Corporations, vol. 2, pp. 1403 et seq., chapter on Trusts and Monopolies; Cooke on Trade and Labor Combinations, App. II., pp. 194-195; Am. and Eng. Ency. Law, 2d ed., article "Monopolies and Trusts," pp. 844 et seq.

†Swearingen vs. United States (161 U. S., 446), United States vs. Wong Kim (169 U. S., 649), Keck vs. United States (172 U. S., 446), Kepner vs. United States (195 U. S., 126).

be illegal." As there is no room for dispute that the statute was intended to formulate a rule for the regulation of interstate and foreign commerce, the question is what was the rule which it adopted?

In view of the common law and the law in this country as to restraint of trade, which we have reviewed, and the illuminating effect which that history must have under the rule to which we have referred, we think it results:

(a) That the context manifests that the statute was drawn in the light of the existing practical conception of the law of restraint of trade, because it groups as within that class, not only contracts which were in restraint of trade in the subjective sense, but all contracts or acts which theoretically were attempts to monopolize, yet which in practice had come to be considered as in restraint of trade in a broad sense.

(b) That in view of the many new forms of contracts and combinations which were being evolved from existing economic conditions, it was deemed essential by an all-embracing enumeration to make sure that no form of contract or combination by which an undue restraint of interstate or foreign commerce was brought about could save such restraint from condemnation. The statute under this view evidences the intent not to restrain the right to make and enforce contracts, whether resulting from combinations or otherwise, which did not unduly restrain interstate or foreign commerce, but to protect that commerce from being restrained by methods, whether old or new, which would constitute an interference that is an undue restraint.

(c) And as the contracts or acts embraced in the provision were not expressly defined, since the enumeration addressed itself simply to classes of acts, those classes being broad enough to embrace every conceivable contract or combination which could be made concerning trade or commerce or the subjects of such commerce and thus caused any act done by any of the enumerated methods anywhere in the whole field of human activity to be illegal if in restraint of trade, it inevitably follows that the provision necessarily called for the exercise of judgment which required that some standard should be resorted to for the purpose of determining whether the prohibitions contained in the statute had or had not in any given case been violated. Thus not specifying but indubitably contemplating and requiring a standard, it follows that it was intended that the standard of reason which had been applied at the common law and in this country in dealing with subjects of the character embraced by the statute, was intended to be the measure used for the purpose of determining whether in a given case a particular act had or had not brought about the wrong against which the statute provided.

And a consideration of the text of the second section serves to establish that it was intended to supplement the first and to make sure that by no possible guise could the public policy embodied in the first section be frustrated or evaded. The prohibitions of the second embrace "every person who shall monopolize or attempt to monopolize or combine or conspire with any other person or persons to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations * * *". By reference to the terms of section 8 it is certain that the word "person" clearly implies a corporation as well as an individual.

The commerce referred to by the words "in part" construed in the light of the manifest purpose of the statute has both a geographical and a distributive significance—that is, it includes any portion of the United States and any one of the classes of things forming a part of interstate or foreign commerce.

Undoubtedly, the words "to monopolize" and "monopolize" as used in the section reach every act bringing about the prohibited results. The ambiguity, if any, is involved in determining what is intended by monopolize. But this ambiguity is readily dispelled in the light of the previous history of the law of restraint of trade to which we have referred and the indication which it gives of the practical evolution by which monopoly and the acts which produce the same result as monopoly—that is, an undue restraint of the course of trade—all came to be spoken of as and to be, indeed, synonymous with restraint of trade. In other words, having by the first section forbidden all means of monopolizing trade—that is, unduly restraining it by means of every contract, combination, etc.—the second section seeks, if possible, to make the prohibitions of the act all the more complete and perfect by embracing all attempts to reach the end prohibited by the first section—that is, restraints of trade—by any attempt to monopolize or monopolization thereof, even although the acts by which such results are attempted to be brought about or are brought about be not embraced within the general enumeration of the first section. And, of course, when the second section is thus harmonized with and made, as it was intended to be, the complement of the first, it becomes obvious that the criteria to be resorted to in any given case for the purpose of ascertaining whether violations of the section have been committed is the rule of reason guided by the established law and by the plain duty to enforce the prohibitions of the act and thus the public policy which its restrictions were obviously enacted to subserve. And it is worthy of observation, as we have previously remarked concerning the common law, that although the statute, by the comprehensiveness of the enumerations embodied in both the first and second sections, makes it certain that its purpose was to prevent undue restraints of every kind or nature, nevertheless, by the omission of any direct prohibition against monopoly in the concrete, it indicates a consciousness that the freedom of the individual right to contract, when not unduly or improperly exercised, was the most efficient means for the prevention of monopoly, since the operation of the centrifugal and centripetal forces resulting from the right to freely contract was the means by which monopoly would be inevitably prevented if no extraneous or sovereign power imposed it and no right to make unlawful contracts having a monopolistic tendency were permitted. In other words, that freedom to contract was the essence of freedom from undue restraint on the right to contract.

Clear as it seems to us is the meaning of the provisions of the statute, in the light of the review which we have made, nevertheless before definitely applying that meaning it behooves us to consider the contentions urged on one side or the other concerning the meaning of the statute, which, if maintained, would give to it in some aspects a much wider and in every view at least a somewhat different significance. And to do this brings us to the second question, which, at the outset, we have stated it was our purpose to consider and dispose of.

Second. The contentions of the parties as to the meaning of the statute and the decisions of this court relied upon concerning those contentions.

In substance, the propositions urged by the government are reducible to this: That the language of the statute embraces every contract, combination, etc., in restraint of trade, and hence its text leaves no room for the exercise of judgment, but simply imposes the plain duty of applying its prohibitions to every case within its literal language. The error involved lies in assuming the matter to be decided. This is true because, as the acts which may come under the classes stated in the first section and the restraint of trade to which that section applies are not specifically enumerated or defined, it is obvious that judgment must in every case be called into play in order to determine whether a particular act is embraced within the statutory classes and whether, if the act is within such classes, its nature or effect causes it to be a restraint of trade within the intentment of the act. To hold to the contrary would require the conclusion either that every contract, act or combination of any kind or nature, whether it operated a restraint on trade or not, was within the statute, and thus the statute would be destructive of all right to contract or agree or combine in any respect whatever as to subjects embraced in interstate trade or commerce, or if this conclusion were not reached, then the contention would require it to be held that as the statute did not define the things to which it related and excluded resort to the only means by which the acts to which it relates could be ascertained—the light of reason—the enforcement of the statute was impossible because of its uncertainty. The merely generic enumeration which the statute makes of the acts to which it refers and the absence of any definition of restraint of trade as used in the statute leaves room for but one conclusion, which is that it was expressly designed not to unduly limit the application of the act by precise definition, but while clearly fixing a standard—that is, by defining the interior boundaries which could not be transgressed with impunity—to leave it to be determined by the light of reason, guided by the principles of law and the duty to apply and enforce the public policy embodied in the statute in every given case, whether any particular act or contract was within the contemplation of the statute.

But, it is said, persuasive as these views may be, they may not be here applied, because the previous decisions of this court have given to the statute a meaning which expressly excludes the construction which must result from the reasoning stated. The cases are United States vs. Freight association (166 U. S., 290) and United States vs. Joint Traffic association (171 U. S., 505). Both the cases involved the legality of combinations or associations of railroads engaged in interstate commerce for the purpose of controlling the conduct of the parties to the association or combination in many particulars. The association or combination was assailed in each case as being in violation of the statute. It was held that they were. It is undoubted that in the opinion in each case general language was made use of which, when separated from its context, would justify the conclusion that it was decided that reason could not be resorted to for the purpose of determining whether the acts complained of were within the statute. It is, however, also true that the nature and character of the contract or agreement in each case was fully referred to and suggestions as to their unreasonableness pointed out in order to indicate that they were within the prohibitions of the statute. As the cases cannot by any possible conception be treated as authoritative without the certitude that reason was resorted to for the purpose of deciding them, it follows as a matter of course that it must have been held by the light of reason, since the conclusion could not have been otherwise reached, that the assailed contracts or agreements were within the general enumeration of the statute, and that their operation and effect brought about the restraint of trade which the statute prohibited. This being inevitable, the deduction can, in reason, only be this: That in the cases relied upon it having been found that the acts complained of were within the statute and operated to produce the injuries which the statute forbade, that resort to reason was not permissible in order to allow that to be done which the statute prohibited. This being true, the rulings in the cases relied upon, when rightly appreciated, were therefore this and nothing more: That as considering the contracts or agreements, their necessary effect and the character of the parties by whom they were made, they were clearly restraints of trade within the purview of the statute, they could not be taken out of that category by indulging in general reasoning as to the expediency or nonexpediency of having made the contracts or the wisdom or want of wisdom of the statute which prohibited their being made. That is to say, the cases but decided that the nature and character of the contracts, creating as they did a conclusive presumption which brought them within the statute, such result was not to be disregarded by the substitution of a judicial appreciation of what the law ought to be for the plain judicial duty of enforcing the law as it was made.

But aside from reasoning it is true to say that the cases relied upon do not when rightly construed sustain the doctrine contended for is established by all of the numerous decisions of this court which have applied and enforced the antitrust act, since they all in the very nature of things rest upon the premise that reason was the guide by which the provisions of the act were in every case interpreted. Indeed, intermediate the decision of the two cases—that is, after the decision in the freight association case and before the decision in the joint traffic case—the case of Hopkins vs. United States (171 U. S., 578) was decided, the opinion being delivered by Mr. Justice Peckham, who wrote both the opinions in the freight association and in the joint traffic cases. And, referring in the Hopkins case to the broad claim made as to the rule of interpretation announced in the freight association case, it was said (p. 592):

"To treat as condemned by the act all agreements under which, as a result, the cost of conducting an interstate commercial business may be increased would enlarge the application of the act far beyond the fair meaning of the language used. There must be some direct and immediate effect upon interstate commerce in order to come within the act."

And in the joint traffic case this statement was expressly reiterated and approved and illustrated by example; like limitation on the general language used in freight association and joint traffic cases is also the clear result of Bement vs. National Harrow company (186 U. S., 70, 92), and especially of Cincinnati Packet company vs. Bay (200 U. S., 179). If the criterion by which it is to be determined in all cases whether every contract, combination, etc., is a restraint of trade within the intendment of the law, is the direct or indirect effect of the acts involved, then of course the rule of reason becomes the guide, and the construction which we have given the statute, instead of being refuted by the cases relied upon, is by those cases demonstrated to be correct. This is true, because as the construction which we have deduced from the history of the act and the analysis of its text is simply that, in every case where it is claimed that an act or acts are in violation of the statute the rule of reason, in the light of the principles of law and the public policy which the act embodies, must be applied. From this it follows, since that rule and the result of the test as to direct or indirect, in their ultimate aspect, come to one and the same thing, that the difference between the two is therefore only that which obtains between things which do not differ at all.

If it be true that there is this identity of result between the rule intended to be applied in the freight association case—that is, the rule of direct and indirect, and the rule of reason which, under the statute as we construe it, should be here applied—it may be asked how was it that in the opinion in the freight association case much consideration was given to the subject of whether the agreement or combination which was involved in that case could be taken out of the prohibitions of the statute upon the theory of its reasonableness? The question is pertinent and must be fully and frankly met, for if it be now deemed that the freight association case was mistakenly decided or too broadly stated, the doctrine which it announced should be either expressly overruled or limited.

The confusion which gives rise to the question results from failing to distinguish between the want of power to take a case which by its terms or the circumstances which surrounded it, considering among such circumstances the character of the parties, is plainly within the statute, out of the operation of the statute by resort to reason in effect to establish that the contract ought not to be treated as within the statute and the duty in every case where it becomes necessary from the nature and character of the parties to decide whether it was within the statute to pass upon that question by the light of reason. This distinction, we think, serves to point out what in its ultimate conception was the thought underlying the reference to the rule of reason made in the freight association case, especially when such reference is interpreted by the context of the opinion and in the light of the subsequent opinion in the Hopkins case and in Cincinnati Packet company versus Bay.

And in order not in the slightest degree to be wanting in frankness, we say that in so far, however, as by separating the general language used in the opinions in the freight association and joint traffic cases from the context and the subject and parties with which the cases were concerned, it may be conceived that the language referred to conflicts with the construction which we give the statute, they are necessarily now limited and qualified. We see no possible escape from this conclusion if we are to adhere to the many cases decided in this court in which the antitrust law has been applied and enforced and if the duty to apply and enforce that law in the future is to continue to exist. The first is true, because the construction which we now give the statute does not in the slightest degree conflict with a single previous case decided concerning the antitrust law aside from the contention as to the freight association and joint traffic cases, and because every one of those cases applied the rule of reason for the purpose of determining whether the subject before the court was within the statute. The second is also true, since as we have already pointed out, unaided by the light of reason it is impossible to understand how the statute may in the future be enforced and the public policy which it establishes be made efficacious.

So far as the objections of the defendants in error are concerned, they are all embraced under two headings:

(a) That the act, even if the averments of the bill be true, cannot be constitutionally applied because to do so would extend the power of congress to subject beyond the reach of its authority to regulate commerce, by enabling that body to deal with mere questions of production of commodities within the states. But all the structure upon which this argument proceeds is based upon the decision in United States versus E. C. Knight company (156 U. S., 1). The view, however, which the argument takes of that case and the arguments based upon that view have been so repeatedly pressed upon this court in connection with the interpretation and enforcement of the antitrust act, and have been so necessarily and expressly decided to be unsound as to cause the contentions to be plainly foreclosed and to require no express notice. United States vs. Northern Securities company (193 U. S., 334). Loewe vs. Lawler (208 U. S., 274), United States vs. Swift & Co. (196 U. S., 375), Montague vs. Lowry (193 U. S., 38), Shawnee Compress company vs. Anderson (209 U. S., 423).

(b) Many arguments are pressed in various forms of statement which in substance amount to contending that the statute cannot be applied under the facts of this case without impairing rights of property and destroying the freedom of contract or trade, which is essentially necessary to the well being of society and which it is insisted is protected by the constitutional guaranty of due process of law. But the ultimate foundation of all these arguments is the assumption that reason may not be resorted to in interpreting and applying the statute, and therefore that the statute unreasonably restricts the right to contract and unreasonably operates upon the right to acquire and hold property. As the premise is demonstrated to be unsound by the construction we have given the statute, of course the propositions which rest upon that premise need not be further noticed.

So far as the arguments proceed upon the conception that in view of the generality of the statute it is not susceptible of being enforced by the courts because it cannot be carried out without a judicial exertion of legislative power, they are clearly unsound. The statute certainly generically enumerates the character of acts which it prohibits and the wrong which it was intended to prevent. The propositions therefore but insist that consistently with the fundamental principles of due process of law ever can be left to the judiciary to decide whether in a given case particular acts come within a generic statutory provision. But to reduce the propositions, however, to this their final meaning makes it clear that in substance they deny the existence of essential legislative authority and challenge the right of the judiciary to perform duties which that department of the government has exerted from the beginning. This is so clear as to require no elaboration. Yet, let us demonstrate that which needs no demonstration by a few obvious examples. Take, for instance, the familiar cases where the judiciary is called upon to determine whether a particular act or acts are within a given prohibitory depending upon wrongful intent. Take questions of fraud. Consider the power which must be exercised in every case where the courts are called upon to determine whether particular acts are invalid which are, abstractly speaking, in and of themselves valid, but which are asserted to be invalid because of their direct effect upon interstate commerce.

We come, then, to the third proposition requiring consideration, viz:

Third. The facts and the application of the statute to them.

Beyond dispute, the proofs establish substantially as alleged in the bill the following facts:

(1) The creation of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio.

(2) The organization of the Standard Oil trust of 1882, and also a previous one of 1879, not referred to in the bill, and the proceedings in the Supreme court of Ohio, culminating in a decree based upon the finding that the company was unlawfully a party to that trust; the transfer by the trustees of stocks in certain of the compaues; the contempt proceedings, and, finally, the increase of the capital of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the acquisition by that company of the shares of the stock of the other corporations in exchange for its certificates.

The vast amount of property and the possibilities of far reaching control which resulted from the facts last stated are shown by the statement which we have previously annexed concerning the parties to the trust agreement of 1882, and the corporations whose stock was held by the trustees under the trust and which came therefore to be held by the New Jersey corporation. But these statements do not with accuracy convey an appreciation of the situation as it existed at the time of the entry of the decree below, since during the more than ten years which elapsed between the acquiring by the New Jersey corporation of the stock and other property which was formerly held by the trustees under the trust agreement, the situation, of course, had somewhat changed, a change which, when analyzed in the light of the proof, we think, establishes that the result of enlarging the capital stock of the New Jersey company and giving it the vast power to which we have referred produced its normal consequence; that is, it gave to the corporation, despite enormous dividends and despite the dropping out of certain corporations enumerated in the decree of the court below, an enlarged and more perfect sway and control over the trade and commerce in petroleum and its products. The ultimate situation referred to will be made manifest by an examination of sections 2 and 4 of the decree below, which are excerpted in the margin.*

Giving to the facts just stated the weight which it was deemed they were entitled to, in the light afforded by the proof of other cognate facts and

*Sec. 2. That the defendants, John D. Rockefeller, William Rockefeller, Henry H. Rogers, Henry M. Flagler, John D. Archbold, Oliver H. Payne and Charles M. Pratt, hereafter called the seven individual defendants, united with the Standard Oil company and other defendants to form and effectuate this combination, and since its formation have been and still are engaged in carrying it into effect and continuing it; that the defendants Anglo-American Oil company (Inc.), Atlantic Refining company, Buckeye Pipe Line company, Borne-Scrymser company, Clevelough Manufacturing company (consolidated), Cumberland Pipe Line company, Colonial Oil company, Continental Oil company, Crescent Pipe Line company, Henry C. Folger, Jr., and Calvin N. Payne (a copartnership doing business under the firm name and style of Corsicana Refining company), Eureka Pipe Line company, Galena Signal Oil company, Indiana Pipe Line company, Manhattan Oil company, National Transit company, New York Transit company, Northern Pipe Line company, Ohio Oil company, Prairie Oil & Gas company, Security Oil company, Solar Refining company, Southern Pipe Line company, South Penn Oil company, Southwest Pennsylvania Pipe Lines company, Standard Oil Company of California, Standard Oil Company of Indiana, Standard Oil Company of Iowa, Standard Oil Company of Kansas, Standard Oil Company of Kentucky, Standard Oil Company of Nebraska, Standard Oil Company of New York, Standard Oil Company of Ohio, Swan & Finch company, Union Tank Line company, Vacuum Oil company, Washington Oil company, Waters-Pierce Oil company, have entered into and become parties to this combination and are either actively operating or aiding in the operation

circumstances, the court below held that the acts and dealings established by the proof operated to destroy the "potentiality of competition" which otherwise would have existed to such an extent as to cause the transfers of stock which were made to the New Jersey corporation and the control which resulted over the many and various subsidiary corporations to be a combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of the first section of the act, but also to be an attempt to monopolize and a monopolization bringing about a perennial violation of the second section.

We see no cause to doubt the correctness of these conclusions, considering the subject from every aspect—that is, both in view of the facts established by the record and the necessary operation and effect of the law as we have construed it upon the inferences deducible from the facts—for the following reasons:

(a) Because the unification of power and control over petroleum and its products which was the inevitable result of the combining in the New Jersey corporation by the increase of its stock and the transfer to it of the stocks of so many other corporations, aggregating so vast a capital, gives rise, in and of itself, in the absence of countervailing circumstances, to say the least, to the prima facie presumption of intent and purpose to maintain the dominance over the oil industry, not as a result of normal methods of industrial development, but by new means of combination which were resorted to

of it; that by means of this combination the defendants named in this section have combined and conspired to monopolize, have monopolized and are continuing to monopolize a substantial part of the commerce among the states, in the territories and with foreign nations, in violation of section 2 of the antitrust act.

Sec. 4. That in the formation and execution of the combination or conspiracy the Standard company has issued its stock to the amount of more than $90,000,000 in exchange for the stocks of other corporations which it holds, and it now owns and controls all of the capital stock of many corporations, a majority of the stock or controlling interests in some corporations and stock in other corporations as follows:

in order that greater power might be added than would otherwise have arisen had normal methods been followed, the whole with the purpose of excluding others from the trade and thus centralizing in the combination a perpetual control of the movements of petroleum and its products in the channels of interstate commerce.

(b) Because the prima facie presumption of intent to restrain trade, to monopolize and to bring about monopolization resulting from the act of expanding the stock of the New Jersey corporation and vesting it with such vast control of the oil industry, is made conclusive by considering, (1) the conduct of the persons or corporations who were mainly instrumental in bringing about the extension of power in the New Jersey corporation before the consummation of that result, and prior to the formation of the trust agreements of 1879 and 1882; (2) by considering the proof as to what was done under those agreements and the acts, which immediately preceded the vesting of power in the New Jersey corporation, as well as by weighing the modes in which the power vested in that corporation has been exerted and the results which have arisen from it.

Recurring to the acts done by the individuals or corporations who were mainly instrumental in bringing about the expansion of the New Jersey corporation during the period prior to the formation of the trust agreements of 1879 and 1882, including those agreements, not for the purpose of weighing

That the Standard company has also acquired the control, by the ownership of its stock or otherwise, of the Security Oil company, a corporation created under the laws of Texas, which owns a refinery at Beaumont, in that state, and the Manhattan Oil company, a corporation which owns a pipe line situated in the states of Indiana and Ohio; that the Standard company and the corporations and partnerships named in section 2 are engaged in the various branches of the business of producing, purchasing and transporting petroleum in the principal oil producing districts of the United States, in New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Texas, Colorado and California, in shipping and transporting the oil through pipe lines owned or controlled by these companies from the various oil producing districts into and through other states, in refining the petroleum and manufacturing it into various products, in shipping the petroleum and the products thereof into the states and territories of the United States, the District of Columbia and to foreign nations, in shipping the petroleum and its products in tank cars owned or controlled by the subsidiary companies into various states and territories of the United States and into the District of Columbia, and in selling the petroleum and its products in various places in the states and territories of the United States, in the District of Columbia and in foreign countries; that the Standard company controls the subsidiary companies and directs the management thereof so that none of the subsidiary companies competes with any other of those companies or with the Standard company, but their trade is all managed as that of a single person.

the substantial merit of the numerous charges of wrongdoing made during such period, but solely as an aid for discovering intent and purpose, we think no disinterested mind can survey the period in question without being irresistibly driven to the conclusion that the very genius for commercial development and organization which it would seem was manifested from the beginning soon begot an intent and purpose to exclude others which was frequently manifested by acts and dealings wholly inconsistent with the theory that they were made with the single conception of advancing the development of business power by usual methods, but which, on the contrary, necessarily involved the intent to drive others from the field and to exclude them from their right to trade and thus accomplish the mastery, which was the end in view. And, considering the period from the date of the trust agreements of 1879 and 1882, up to the time of the expansion of the New Jersey corporation, the gradual extension of the power over the commerce in oil which ensued, the decision of the Supreme court of Ohio, the tardiness or reluctance in conforming to the commands of that decision, the method first adopted and that which finally culminated in the plan of the New Jersey corporation, all additionally serve to make manifest the continued existence of the intent which we have previously indicated and which, among other things, impelled the expansion of the New Jersey corporation. The exercise of the power which resulted from that organization fortifies the foregoing conclusions, since the development which came, the acquisition here and there which ensued of every efficient means by which competition could have been asserted, the slow but resistless methods which followed by which means of transportation were absorbed and brought under control, the system of marketing which was adopted, by which the country was divided into districts and the trade in each district in oil was turned over to a designated corporation within the combination and all others were excluded, all lead the mind up to a conviction of a purpose and intent which we think is so certain as practically to cause the subject not to be within the domain of reasonable contention.

The inference that no attempt to monopolize could have been intended, and that no monopolization resulted from the acts complained of, since it is established that a very small percentage of the crude oil produced was controlled by the combination, is unwarranted. As substantial power over the crude product was the inevitable result of the absolute control which existed over the refined product, the monopolization of the one carried with it the power to control the other, and if the inferences which this situation suggests were developed, which we deem it unnecessary to do, they might well serve to add additional cogency to the presumption of intent to monopolize which we have found arises from the unquestioned proof on other subjects.

We are thus brought to the last subject which we are called upon to consider, viz:

Fourth. The remedy to be administered.

It may be conceded that ordinarily where it was found that acts had been done in violation of the statute adequate measure of relief would result from restraining the doing of such acts in the future. (Swift versus United States, 96 U. S., 375). But in a case like this, where the condition which has been brought about in violation of the statute, in and of itself, is not only a continued attempt to monopolize, but also a monopolization, the duty to enforce the statute requires the application of broader and more controlling remedies. As penalties which are not authorized by law may not be inflicted by judicial authority, it follows that to meet the situation with which we are confronted the application of remedies twofold in character becomes essential: (1) To forbid the doing in the future of acts like those which we have found to have been done in the past which would be violative of the statute; (2) the exertion of such measure of relief as will effectually dissolve the combination found to exist in violation of the statute, and thus neutralize the extension and continually operating force which the possession of the power unlawfully obtained has brought and will continue to bring about.

In applying remedies for this purpose, however, the fact must not be overlooked that injury to the public by the prevention of an undue restraint on or the monopolization of trade or commerce is the foundation upon which the prohibitions of the statute rest, and, moreover, that one of the fundamental purposes of the statute is to protect, not to destroy, rights of property.

Let us then, as a means of accurately determining what relief we are to afford, first come to consider what relief was afforded by the court below, in order to fix how far it is necessary to take from or add to that relief, to the end that the prohibitions of the statute may have complete and operative force.

The court below by virtue of sections 1, 2 and 4 of its decree, which we have in part previously excerpted in the margin, adjudged that the New Jersey corporation in so far as it held the stock of the various corporations, recited in sections 2 and 4 of the decree, or controlled the same, was a combination in violation of the first section of the act, and an attempt to monopolize or a monopolization contrary to the second section of the act. It commanded the dissolution of the combination and therefore, in effect, directed the transfer by the New Jersey corporation back to the stockholders of the various subsidiary corporations entitled to the same of the stock which had been turned over to the New Jersey company in exchange for its stock. To make this command effective, section 5 of the decree forbade the New Jersey corporation from in any form or manner exercising any ownership or exerting any power directly or indirectly in virtue of its apparent title to the stocks of the subsidiary corporations, and prohibited those subsidiary corporations from paying any dividends to the New Jersey corporation or doing any act which would recognize further power in that company, except to the extent that it was necessary to enable that company to transfer the stock. So far as the owners of the stock of the subsidiary corporations and the corporations themselves were concerned after the stock had been transferred, section 6 of the decree enjoined them from in any way conspiring or combining to violate the act or to monopolize or attempt to monopolize in virtue of their ownership of the stock transferred to them, and prohibited all agreements between the subsidiary corporations or other stockholders in the future, tending to produce or bring about further violations of the act.

By section 7, pending the accomplishment of the dissolution of the combination by the transfer of stock and until it was consummated, the defendants named in section 1, constituting all the corporations to which we have referred, were enjoined from engaging in or carrying on interstate commerce. And by section 9, among other things, a delay of thirty days was granted for the carrying into effect of the direction of the decree.

So far as the decree held that the ownership of the stock of the New Jersey corporation constituted a combination in violation of the first section and an attempt to create a monopoly or to monopolize under the second section and commanded the dissolution of the combination, the decree was clearly appropriate. And this also is true of section 5 of the decree which restrained both the New Jersey corporation and the subsidiary corporations from doing anything which would recognize or give effect to further ownership in the New Jersey corporation of the stocks which were ordered to be transferred.

But the contention is that, in so far as the relief by way of injunction which was awarded by section 6 against the stockholders of the subsidiary corporations or the subsidiary corporations themselves after the transfer of stock by the New Jersey corporation was completed in conformity to the decree, that the relief awarded was too broad: (a) Because it was not sufficiently specific and tended to cause those who were within the embrace of the order to cease to be under the protection of the law of the land and required them to thereafter conduct their business under the jeopardy of punishments for contempt for violating a general injunction. (New Haven R. R. vs. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S., 404.) Besides it is said that the restraint imposed by section 6—even putting out of view the consideration just stated—was moreover calculated to do injury to the public, and it may be in and of itself to produce the very restraint on the due course of trade which it was intended to prevent. We say this since it does not necessarily follow because an illegal restraint of trade or an attempt to monopolize or a monopolization resulted from the combination and the transfer of the stocks of the subsidiary corporations to the New Jersey corporation that a like restraint or attempt to monopolize or monopolization would necessarily arise from agreements between one or more of the subsidiary corporations after the transfer of the stock by the New Jersey corporation. For illustration, take the pipe lines. By the effect of the transfer of the stock the pipe lines would come under the control of various corporations instead of being subjected to a uniform control. If various corporations owning the lines determined in the public interests to so combine as to make a continuous line, such agreement or combination would not be repugnant to the act, and yet it might be restrained by the decree.

As another example, take the Union Tank Line company, one of the subsidiary corporations, the owner practically of all the tank cars in use by the combination. If no possibility existed of agreements for the distribution of these cars among the subsidiary corporations, the most serious detriment to the public interest might result. Conceding the merit, abstractly considered, of these contentions, they are irrelevant. We so think, since we construe the sixth paragraph of the decree not as depriving the stockholders or the corporations, after the dissolution of the combination, of the power to make normal and lawful contracts or agreements, but as restraining them from, by any device whatever, recreating, directly or indirectly, the illegal combination which the decree dissolved. In other words, we construe the sixth paragraph of the decree not as depriving the stockholders or corporations of the right to live under the law of the land, but as compelling obedience to that law. As, therefore, the sixth paragraph as thus construed is not amenable to the criticism directed against it and cannot produce the harmful results which the arguments suggest, it was obviously right. We think that in view of the magnitude of the interests involved and their complexity that the delay of thirty days allowed for executing the decree was too short and should be extended so as to embrace a period of at least six months. So also, in view of the possible serious injury to result to the public from an absolute cessation of interstate commerce in petroleum and its products by such vast agencies as are embraced in the combination, a result which might arise from that portion of the decree which enjoined carrying on of interstate commerce not only by the New Jersey corporation, but by all the subsidiary companies until the dissolution of the combination by the transfer of the stocks in accordance with the decree, should not have been awarded.

Our conclusion is that the decree below was right and should be affirmed, except as to the minor matters concerning which we have indicated the decree should be modified. Our order will therefore be one of affirmance, with directions, however, to modify the decree in accordance with this opinion, the court below to retain jurisdiction to the extent necessary to compel compliance in every respect with its decree.

And it is so ordered.

JUSTICE HARLAN'S OPINION.

Mr. Justice Harlan, concurring in part and dissenting in part:

A sense of duty constrains me to express the objections which I have to certain declarations in the opinion just delivered on behalf of the court.

I concur in holding that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and its subsidiary companies constitute a combination in restraint of interstate commerce and that they have attempted to monopolize and have monopolized parts of such commerce—all in violation of what is known as the antitrust act of 1890. (26 stat., 209, c. 647.) The evidence in this case overwhelmingly sustained that view and led the Circuit court, by its final decree, to order the dissolution of the New Jersey corporation and the discontinuance of the illegal combination between that corporation and its subsidiary companies.

In my judgment, the decree below should have been affirmed without qualification. But the court, while affirming the decree, directs some modifications in respect of what it characterizes as "minor matters." It is to be apprehended that those modifications may prove to be mischievous. In saying this I have particularly in view the statement in the opinion that "it does not necessarily follow that because an illegal restraint of trade or an attempt to monopolize or a monopolization resulted from the combination and the transfer of the stocks of the subsidiary corporations to the New Jersey corporation, that a like restraint of trade or attempt to monopolize or monopolization would necessarily arise from agreements between one or more of the subsidiary corporations after the transfer of the stock by the New Jersey corporation." Taking this language, in connection with other parts of the opinion, the subsidiary companies are thus, in effect, informed—unwisely, I think—that, although the New Jersey corporation, being an illegal combination, must go out of existence, they may join in an agreement to restrain commerce among the states if such restraint be not "undue."

In order that my objections to certain parts of the court's opinion may distinctly appear, I must state the circumstances under which congress passed the antitrust act and trace the course of judicial decisions as to its meaning and scope. This is the more necessary because the court, by its decision, when interpreted by the language of its opinion, has not only upset the long settled interpretation of the act, but has usurped the constitutional functions of the legislative branch of the government. With all due respect for the opinions of others, I feel bound to say that what the court has said may well cause some alarm for the integrity of our institutions. Let us see how the matter stands.

All who recall the condition of the country in 1890 will remember that there was everywhere among the people generally a deep feeling of unrest. The nation had been rid of human slavery—fortunately, as all now feel—but the conviction was universal that the country was in real danger from another kind of slavery sought to be fastened on the American people, namely, the slavery that would result from aggregations of capital in the hands of a few individuals and corporations controlling, for their own profit and advantage exclusively, the entire business of the country, including the production and sale of the necessities of life. Such a danger was thought to be then imminent, and all felt that it must be met firmly and by such statutory regulations as would adequately protect the people against oppression and wrong. Congress therefore took up the matter and gave the whole subject the fullest consideration. All agreed that the national government could not, by legislation, regulate the domestic trade carried on wholly within the several states; for power to regulate such trade remained with, because never surrendered by, the states. But, under authority expressly granted to it by the constitution, congress could regulate commerce among the several states and with foreign states. Its authority to regulate such commerce was and is paramount, due force being given to other provisions of the fundamental law devised by the fathers for the safety of the government and for the protection and security of the essential rights inhering in life, liberty and property.

Guided by these considerations and to the end that the people, so far as interstate commerce was concerned, might not be dominated by vast combinations and monopolies, having power to advance their own selfish ends, regardless of the general interests and welfare, congress passed the antitrust act of 1890 in these words (the italics here and elsewhere in this opinion are mine):

"Section 1. Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

or and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

"Sec. 2. Every person who shall monopolize or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

"Sec. 3. Every contract, combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce in any territory of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or in restraint of trade or commerce between any such territory and another, or between any such territory or territories and any state or states or the District of Columbia, or with foreign nations, or between the District of Columbia and any state or states or foreign nations, is hereby declared illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court. (26 stat., 209, c. 647.)"

The important inquiry in the present case is as to the meaning and scope of that act in its application to interstate commerce.

In 1893 this court had occasion to determine the meaning and scope of the act in an important case known as the Trans-Missouri freight case. (166 U. S., 290.) The question there was as to the validity under the antitrust act of a certain agreement between numerous railroad companies, whereby they formed an association for the purpose of establishing and maintaining rates, rules and regulations in respect of freight traffic over specified routes. Two questions were involved: First, whether the act applied to railroad carriers; second, whether the agreement which was the basis of the suit which the United States brought to have the agreement annulled was illegal. The court held that railroad carriers were embraced by the act. In determining that question the court, among other things, said:

"The language of the act includes every contract, combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations. So far as the very terms of the statute go, they apply to any contract of the nature described. A contract therefore that is in restraint of trade or commerce is by the strict language of the act prohibited, even though such contract is entered into between competing common carriers by railroad, and only for the purposes of thereby affecting traffic rates for the transportation of persons and property. If such an agreement restrains trade or commerce, it is prohibited by the statute, unless it can be said that an agreement, no matter what its terms, relating only to transportation cannot restrain trade or commerce. We see no escape from the conclusion that if an agreement of such a nature does restrain the agreement is condemned by this act.

"Nor is it for the substantial interests of the country that any one commodity should be within the sole power and subject to the sole will of one powerful combination of capital. Congress has, so far as its jurisdiction extends, prohibited all contracts or combinations in the form of trusts entered into for the purpose of restraining trade and commerce. * * * While the statute prohibits all combinations in the form of trusts or otherwise, the limitation is not confined to that form alone. All combinations which are in restraint of trade or commerce are prohibited, whether in the form of trusts or in any other form whatever. (U. S. vs. Freight association, 166 U. S., 290, 312, 321, 326, 328.)"

The court then proceeded to consider the second of the above questions, saying:

"The next question to be discussed is as to what is the true construction of the statute, assuming that it applies to common carriers by railroad. What is the meaning of the language as used in the statute, that 'every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal? Is it confined to a contract or combination which is only in unreasonable restraint of trade or commerce, or does it include what the language of the act plainly and in terms covers, all contracts of that nature? It is now with much amplification of argument urged that the statute in declaring illegal every combination in the form of trust or otherwise or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce does not mean what the language used therein plainly imports, but that it only means to declare illegal any such contract which is in unreasonable restraint of trade, while leaving all others unaffected by the provisions of the act; that the common law meaning of the term 'contract in restraint of trade' includes only such contracts as are in unreasonable restraint of trade, and when that term is used in the federal statute it is not intended to include all contracts in restraint of trade, but only those which are in unreasonable restraint thereof. * * * By the simple use of the term 'contract in restraint of trade' all contracts of that nature, whether valid or otherwise, would be included, and not alone that kind of contract which was invalid and unenforceable as being in unreasonable restraint of trade. When, therefore, the body of an act pronounces as illegal every contract or combination in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, etc., the plain and ordinary meaning of such language is not limited to that kind of contract alone which is in unreasonable restraint of trade, but all contracts are included in such language, and no exception or limitation can be added without placing in the act that which has been omitted by congress. * * *

"If only that kind of contract which is in unreasonable restraint of trade be within the meaning of the statute, and declared therein to be illegal, it is at once apparent that the subject of what is a reasonable rate is attended with great uncertainty. * * * To say, therefore, that the act excludes agreements which are not in unreasonable restraint of trade and which tend simply to keep up reasonable rates for transportation, is substantially to leave the question of unreasonableness to the companies themselves. * * * But assuming that agreements of this nature are not void at common law and that the various cases cited by the learned courts below show it, the answer to the statement of their validity now is to be found in the terms of the statute under consideration. * * * The arguments which have been addressed to us against the inclusion of all contracts in restraint of trade, as provided for by the language of the act, have been based upon the alleged presumption that congress, notwithstanding the language of the act, could not have intended to embrace all contracts, but only such contracts as were in unreasonable restraint of trade. Under these circumstances we are, therefore, asked to hold that the act of congress excepts contracts which are not in unreasonable restraint of trade, and which only keep rates up to a reasonable price, notwithstanding the language of the act makes no such exception. In other words, we are asked to read into the act by way of judicial legislation an exception that is not placed there by the lawmaking branch of the government, and this is to be done upon the theory that the impolicy of such legislation is so clear that it cannot be supposed congress intended the natural import of the language it used. This we cannot and ought not to do. * * *

"If the act ought to read as contended for by defendants, congress is the body to amend it and not this court, by a process of judicial legislation wholly unjustifiable. Large numbers do not agree that the view taken by defendants is sound or true in substance, and congress may and very probably did share in that belief in passing the act. The public policy of the government is to be found in its statutes, and when they have not directly spoken, then in the decisions of the courts and the constant practice of the government officials, but when the lawmaking power speaks upon a particular subject, over which it has constitutional power to legislate, public policy in such a case is what the statute enacts. If the law prohibit any contract or combination in restraint of trade or commerce, a contract or combination made in violation of such law is void, whatever may have been therefore decided by the courts to have been the public policy of the country on that subject. The conclusion which we have drawn from the examination above made into the question before us is that the antitrust act applies to railroads and that it renders illegal all agreements which are in restraint of trade or commerce as we have above defined that expression, and the question then arises whether the agreement before us is of that nature."

I have made these extended extracts from the opinion of the court in the Trans-Missouri freight case in order to show beyond question that the point was there urged by counsel that the antitrust act condemned only contracts, combinations, trusts and conspiracies that were in unreasonable restraint of interstate commerce, and that the court in clear and decisive language met that point. It adjudged that congress had in unequivocal words declared that "every contract, combination, in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of commerce among the several states" shall be illegal, and that no distinction, so far as interstate commerce was concerned, was to be tolerated between restraints of such commerce as were undue or unreasonable and restraints that were due or reasonable. With full knowledge of the then condition of the country, and of its business, congress determined to meet, and did meet, the situation by an absolute statutory prohibition of "every contract, combination, in the form of trust or otherwise, in restraint of trade or commerce." Still more in response to the suggestion by able counsel that congress intended only to strike down such contracts, combinations and monopolies as unreasonably restrained interstate commerce, this court, in words too clear to be misunderstood, said that to so hold was "to read into the act, by way of judicial legislation, an exception not placed there by the lawmaking branch of the government."

"This," the court said, as we have seen, "we cannot and ought not to do."

It thus appears that fifteen years ago, when the purpose of congress in passing the antitrust act was fresh in the minds of courts, lawyers, statesmen and the general public, this court expressly declined to indulge in judicial legislation by inserting in the act the word "unreasonable" or any other word of like import. It may be stated here that the country at large accepted this view of the act, and the federal courts throughout the entire country enforced its provisions according to the interpretation given in the freight association case. What, then, was to be done by those who questioned the soundness of the interpretation placed on the act by this court in that case? As the court had decided that to insert the word "unreasonable" in the act would be "judicial legislation" on its part, the only alternative left to those who opposed the decision in that case was to induce congress to so amend the act as to recognize the right to restrain interstate commerce to a reasonable extent. The public press, magazines and law journals, the debates in congress, speeches and addresses by public men and jurists, all contain abundant evidence of the general understanding that the meaning, extent and scope of the antitrust act had been judicially determined by this court, and that the only question remaining open for discussion was the wisdom of the policy declared by the act—a matter that was exclusively within the cognizance of congress. But at every session of congress since the decision of 1896, the lawmaking branch of the government, with full knowledge of that decision, has refused to change the policy it had declared or to so amend the act of 1890 as to except from its operation contracts, combinations and trusts that reasonably restrain interstate commerce.

But those who were in combinations that were illegal did not despair. They at once set up the baseless claim that the decision of 1896 disturbed the "business interests of the country," and let it be known that they would never be content until the rule was established that would permit interstate commerce to be subjected to reasonable restraints. Finally, an opportunity came again to raise the same question which this court had, upon full consideration determined in 1896. I now allude to the case of United States vs. Joint Traffic association (171 U. S., 505), decided in 1898. What was that case?

It was a suit by the United States against more than thirty railroad companies to have the court declare illegal, under the antitrust act, a certain agreement between these companies. The relief asked was denied in the subordinate federal courts and the government brought the case here.

It is important to state the points urged in that case by the defendant companies charged with violating the antitrust act and to show that the court promptly met them. To that end I make a copious extract from the opinion in the joint traffic case. Among other things, the court said:

"Upon comparing that agreement [the one in the joint traffic case, then under consideration, 171 U. S., 505] with the one set forth in the case of United States vs. Trans-Missouri Freight association (166 U. S., 290), the great similarity between them suggests that a similar result should be reached in the two cases (p. 558)."

Learned counsel in the joint traffic case urged a reconsideration of the question decided in the Trans-Missouri case, contending that "the decision in that case [the Trans-Missouri freight case] is quite plainly erroneous, and the consequences of such error are far reaching and disastrous and clearly at war with justice and sound policy, and the construction placed upon the antitrust statute has been received by the public with surprise and alarm. They suggested that the point made in the joint traffic case as to the meaning and scope of the act might have been but not made in the previous case. The court said (171 U. S., 559) that "the report of the Trans-Missouri case clearly shows not only that the point now taken was there urged upon the attention of the court, but it was then intentionally and necessarily decided."

The question whether the court should again consider the point decided in the Trans-Missouri case was disposed of in the most decisive language, as follows:

"Finally, we are asked to reconsider the question decided in the Trans-Missouri case and to retrace the steps taken therein, because of the plain error contained in that decision and the widespread alarm with which it was received and the serious consequences which have resulted or may soon result from the law as interpreted in that case. It is proper to remark that an application for a reconsideration of a question but lately decided by this court is usually based upon a statement that some of the arguments employed on the original hearing of the question have been overlooked or misunderstood, or that some controlling authority has been either misapplied by the court or passed over without discussion or notice. While this is not strictly an application for a rehearing in the same case, yet in substance it is the same thing. The court is asked to reconsider a question but just decided after a careful investigation of the matter involved. There have heretofore been in effect two arguments of precisely the same questions now before the court, and the same arguments were addressed to us on both those occasions. The report of the Trans-Missouri case shows a dissenting opinion delivered in that case, and that the opinion was concurred in by three other members of the court. That opinion, it will be seen, gives with great force and ability the arguments against the decision which was finally arrived at by the court. It was after a full discussion of the questions involved and with the knowledge of the views entertained by the minority, as expressed in the dissenting opinion, that the majority of the court came to the conclusion it did. Soon after the decision a petition for a rehearing of the case was made, supported by a printed argument in its favor, and pressed with an earnestness and vigor and at a length which were certainly commensurate with the importance of the case. This court, with care and deliberation and also with a full appreciation of their importance, again considered the questions involved in its former decision. A majority of the court once more arrived at the conclusion it had first announced, and accordingly it denied the application. And now for the third time the same arguments are employed, and the court is again asked to repeat its former opinion and to decide the same question in direct opposition to the conclusion arrived at in the Trans-Missouri case. The learned counsel while making the application frankly confess that the argument in opposition to the decision in the case above named has been so fully, so clearly and so forcibly presented in the dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice White (in the freight case) that it is hardly possible to add to it, nor is it necessary to do so. The fact that there was so close a division of opinion in this court when the matter was first under advisement, together with the different views taken by some of the judges of the lower courts, led us to the most careful and scrutinizing examination of the arguments advanced by both sides, and it was after such an examination that the majority of the court came to the conclusion it did. It is not now alleged that the court on the former occasion overlooked any argument for the respondents or misapplied any controlling authority. It is simply insisted that the court, notwithstanding the arguments for an opposite view, arrived at an erroneous result which, for reasons already stated, ought to be reconsidered and reversed. As we have twice already deliberately and earnestly considered the same arguments which are now for a third time pressed upon our attention, it could hardly be expected that our opinion should now change from that already expressed.

These utterances, taken in connection with what was previously said in the Trans-Missouri freight case, show so clearly and affirmatively to admit of no doubt that this court many years ago, upon the fullest consideration, interpreted the antitrust act as prohibiting and making illegal not only every contract or combination, in whatever form, which was in restraint of interstate commerce, without regard to its reasonableness or unreasonableness, but all monopolies or attempt to monopolize "any part" of such trade or commerce. Let me refer to a few other cases in which the scope of the decision in the Freight association case was referred to. In Bement vs. National Harrow company (186 U. S., 70, 92) the court said, "It is true that it has been held by this court that the act (antitrust act) included any restraint of commerce, whether reasonable or unreasonable," citing United States vs. Trans-Missouri Freight association (166 U. S., 290), United States vs. Joint Traffic association (171 U. S., 505), Addyston Pipe, etc., company vs. United States (175 U. S., 211), in Montague vs. Lowry (193 U. S., 38, 46), which involved the validity, under the antitrust act, of a certain association formed for the sale of tiles, mantels and grates, the court, referring to the contention that the sale of tiles in San Francisco was so small "as to be a negligible quantity," held that the association was, nevertheless, a combination in restraint of interstate trade or commerce in violation of the antitrust act. In Loewe vs. Lawlor (208 U. S., 274, 297) all the members of this court concurred in saying that the Trans-Missouri, Joint Traffic and Northern Securities cases "hold in effect that the antitrust law has a broader application than the prohibition of restraints of trade unlawful at common law." In Shawnee Conserving company vs. Anderson (1907) (209 U. S., 423, 432) all the members of the court again concurred in declaring that "it has been decided that not only unreasonable but all direct restraints of trade are prohibited, the law being thereby distinguished from the common law." In United States vs. Addyston Pipe company (85 Fed. Rep., 278) Judge Taft, speaking for the Circuit Court of Appeals for the sixth circuit, said that according to the decision of this court in the Freight association case "contracts in restraint of interstate transportation were within the statute, whether the restraints could be regarded as reasonable at common law or not." In Chesapeake & Ohio Fuel company vs. United States (1902) (115 Fed. Rep., 610, 619) the Circuit Court of Appeals for the sixth circuit, after referring to the right of congress to regulate interstate commerce, thus interpreted the prior decisions of this court in the Trans-Missouri, the Joint Traffic and the Addyston Pipe and Steel company cases: "In the exercise of this right congress has seen fit to prohibit all contracts in restraint of trade. It has not left to the courts the consideration of the question whether such restraint is reasonable or unreasonable, or whether the contract would have been illegal at the common law or not. The act leaves for consideration by judicial authority no question of this character, but all contracts and combinations are declared illegal if in restraint of trade or commerce among the states."

As far back as Robbins vs. Shelby Taxing District (120 U. S., 489, 497) it was held that certain local regulations, subjecting drummers engaged in both interstate and domestic trade, could not be sustained by reason of the fact that no discrimination was made among citizens of the different states. The court observed that this did not meet the difficulty, for the reason that "interstate commerce cannot be taxed at all." Under this view congress no doubt acted, when by the antitrust act it forbade any restraint whatever upon interstate commerce. It manifestly proceeded upon the theory that interstate commerce could not be restrained at all by combinations, trusts or monopolies, but must be allowed to flow in its accustomed channels, wholly unvexed and unobstructed by anything that would restrain its ordinary movement. (See also Minnesota vs. Barber, 126 U. S., 313, 326; Brimmer vs. Rebman, 138 U. S., 78, 82, 83.)

In the opinion delivered on behalf of the minority in the Northern Securities case (193 U. S.) our present chief justice referred to the contentions made by the defendants in the Freight association case; namely, one of which was that the agreement there involved did not unreasonably restrain interstate commerce, and said:

"Both these contentions were decided against the association, the court holding that the antitrust act did embrace interstate carriage by railroad corporations, and as that act prohibited any contract in restraint of interstate commerce, it hence embraced all contracts of that character, whether they were reasonable or unreasonable."

One of the justices who dissented in the Northern Securities case in a separate opinion, concurred in by the minority, thus referred to the freight and joint traffic cases:

"For it cannot be too carefully remembered that that clause applies to 'every' contract of the forbidden kind—a consideration which was the turning point of the Trans-Missouri Freight association case.

Size has nothing to do with the matter. A monopoly of 'any part' of commerce among the states is unlawful."

In this connection it may be well to refer to the adverse report made in 1909 by Senator Nelson on behalf of the senate judiciary committee in reference to a certain bill offered in the senate and which proposed to amend the antitrust act in various particulars. That report contains a full, careful and able analysis of judicial decisions relating to combinations and monopolies in restraint of trade and commerce. Among other things said in it which bear on the questions involved in the present case are these:

"The antitrust act makes it a criminal offense to violate the law and provides a punishment both by fine and imprisonment. To inject into the act the question of whether an agreement or combination is reasonable or unreasonable would render the act as a criminal or penal statute indefinite and uncertain, and hence, to that extent, utterly nugatory and void, and would practically amount to a repeal of that part of the act. * * * And while the same technical objection does not apply to civil prosecutions, the injection of the rule of reasonableness or unreasonableness would lead to the greatest variability and uncertainty in the enforcement of the law. The defense of reasonable restraint would be made in every case, and there would be as many different rules of reasonableness as cases, courts and juries. What one court or jury might deem unreasonable another court or jury might deem reasonable. A court or jury in Ohio might find a given agreement or combination reasonable, while a court and jury in Wisconsin might find the same agreement and combination unreasonable. In the case of the People vs. Sheldon (139 N. Y., 264) Chief Justice Andrews remarks: 'If agreements and combinations to prevent competition in prices are or may be hurtful to trade, the only sure remedy is to prohibit all agreements of that character. If the validity of such an agreement was made to depend upon actual proof of public prejudice or injury, it would be very difficult in any case to establish the invalidity, although the moral evidence might be very convincing. * * * To amend the antitrust act, as suggested by this bill, would be entirely emasculate it, and for all practical purposes render it nugatory as a remedial statute. Criminal prosecutions would not lie and civil remedies would labor under the greatest doubt and uncertainty. The act as it exists is clear, comprehensive, certain and highly remedial. It practically covers the field of federal jurisdiction, and is in every respect a model law. To destroy or undermine it at the present juncture, when combinations are on the increase, and appear to be as oblivious as ever of the rights of the public, would be a calamity."

"The result was the indefinite postponement by the senate of any further consideration of the proposed amendments of the antitrust act.

After what has been adjudged, upon full consideration, as to the meaning and scope of the antitrust act, and in view of the usages of this court when attorneys for litigants have attempted to reopen questions that have been deliberately decided, I confess to no little surprise as to what has occurred in the present case. The court says that the previous cases, above cited, "cannot by any possible conception be treated as authoritative without the certitude that reason was resorted to for the purpose of deciding them." And its opinion is full of intimations that this court proceeded in those cases, so far as the present question is concerned, without being guided by the "rule of reason" or "the light of reason." It is more than once intimated, if not suggested, that if the antitrust act is to be construed as prohibiting every contract or combination, of whatever nature, which is in fact in restraint of commerce, regardless of the reasonableness or unreasonableness of such restraint, that fact would show that the court had not proceeded, in its decision, according to "the light of reason," but had disregarded the "rule of reason." If the court, in those cases, was wrong in its construction of the act, it is certain that it fully apprehended the views advanced by learned counsel in previous cases and pronounced them to be untenable. The published reports place this beyond all question. The opinion of the court was delivered by a justice of wide experience as a judicial officer, and the court had before it the attorial general of the United States and lawyers who were recognized on all sides as great leaders in their profession. The same eminent jurist who delivered the opinion in the Trans-Missouri case delivered the opinion in the Joint Traffic case, while the association in the latter case was represented by lawyers whose ability was universally recognized. Is it to be supposed that any point escaped notice in those cases when we think of the sagacity of the justice who expressed the views of the court or of the ability of the profound, astute lawyers, who sought such an interpretation of the act as would compel the court to insert words in the statute which congress had not put there, and the insertion of which words would amount to "judicial legislation"? Now this court is asked to do that which it has distinctly declared it could not and would not do, and has now done what it then said it could not constitutionally do. It has by mere interpretation modified the act of congress and deprived it of practical value as a defensive measure against the evils to be remedied. On reading the opinion just delivered the first inquiry will be that as the court is unanimous in holding that the particular things done by the Standard Oil company and its subsidiary companies in this case were illegal under the antitrust act, whether those things were in reasonable or unreasonable restraint of interstate commerce, why was it necessary to make an elaborate argument, as is done in the opinion, to show that, according to the "rule of reason," the act as passed by congress should be interpreted as if it contained the word "unreasonable" or the word "undue"? The only answer which in frankness can be given to this question is that the court intends to decide that its deliberate judgment fifteen years ago to the effect that the act permitted no restraint whatever of interstate commerce, whether reasonable or unreasonable, was not in accordance with the "rule of reason." In effect the court says that it will now for the first time bring the discussion under the "light of reason" and apply the "rule of reason" to the questions to be decided. I have the authority of this court for saying that such a course of proceeding on its part would be "judicial legislation."

Still more, what is now done involves a serious departure from the settled usages of this court. Counsel have not ordinarily been allowed to discuss questions already settled by previous decisions. More than once at the present term that rule has been applied. In St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway company vs. Taylor (210 U. S., 281) the court had occasion to determine the meaning and scope of the original safety appliance act of congress passed for the protection of railroad employes and passengers on interstate trains. (27 Stat., 531.) A particular construction of that act was insisted upon by the interstate carrier which was sued under the safety appliance act, and the contention was that a different construction than the one insisted upon by the carrier would be a harsh one. After quoting the words of the act, Mr. Justice Moody said for the court:

"There is no escape from the meaning of these words. Explanation cannot clarify them and ought not to be employed to confuse them or lessen their significance. The obvious purpose of the legislature was to supplant the qualified duty of the common law with an absolute duty deemed by it more just. If the railroad does, in point of fact, use cars which do not comply with the standard, it violates the plain prohibitions of the law, and there arises from that violation the liability to make compensation to one who is injured by it. It is urged that this is a harsh construction. To this we reply that, if it be the true construction, its harshness is no concern of the courts. They have no responsibility for the justice or wisdom of legislation and no duty except to enforce the law as it is written, unless it is clearly beyond the constitutional power of the lawmaking body. * * * It is quite conceivable that congress, contemplating the inevitable hardship of such injuries, and hoping to diminish the economic loss to the community resulting from them, should deem it wise to impose their burdens upon those who could measurably control their causes, instead of upon those who are in the main helpless in that regard. Such a policy would be intelligible, and to say the least not so unreasonable as to require us to doubt that it was intended and to seek some unnatural interpretation of common words. We see no error in this part of the case."

And at the present term of this court we were asked, in a case arising under the safety appliance act, to reconsider the question decided in the Taylor case. We declined to do so, saying in an opinion just now handed down:

"In view of these facts, we are unwilling to regard the question as to the meaning and scope of the safety appliance act, so far as it relates to automatic couplers on trains moving interstate traffic, as open to further discussion here. If the court was wrong in the Taylor case the way is open for such an amendment of the statute as congress may, in its discretion, deem proper. This court ought not now disturb what has been so widely accepted and acted upon by the courts as having been decided in that case. A contrary course would cause infinite uncertainty, if not mischief, in the administration of the law in the federal courts. To avoid misapprehension, it is appropriate to say that we are not to be understood as questioning the soundness of the interpretation heretofore placed by this court upon the safety appliance act. We only mean to say that until congress, by an amendment of the statute, changes the rule announced in the Taylor case, this court will adhere to and apply that rule. (Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway company vs. United States, 220 U. S.)"

When counsel in the present case insisted upon a reversal of the former rulings of this court, and asked such an interpretation of the antitrust act as would allow reasonable restraints of interstate commerce, this court, in deference to established practice, would, I submit, have said to them:

"That question, according to our practice, is not open for further discussion here. This court long ago deliberately held (1) that the act, interpreting its words in their ordinary acceptation, prohibits all restraints of interstate commerce by combinations in whatever form, and whether reasonable or unreasonable; (2) the question relates to matters of public policy in reference to commerce among the states and with foreign nations, and congress alone can deal with the subject; (3) this court would encroach upon the authority of congress if, under the guise of construction, it should assume to determine a matter of public policy; (4) the parties must go to congress and obtain an amendment of the antitrust act if they think this court was wrong in its former decisions, and (5) this court cannot and will not judicially legislate, since its function is to declare the law, while it belongs to the legislative department to make the law.

Such a course, I am sure, would not have offended the "rule of reason."

But my brethren, in their wisdom, have deemed it best to pursue a different course. They have now said to those who condemn our former decisions and who object to all legislative prohibitions of contracts, combinations and trusts in restraint of interstate commerce, "You may now restrain such commerce, provided you are reasonable about it; only take care that the restraint is not undue." The disposition of the case under consideration, according to the views of the defendants, will, it is claimed, quiet and give rest to "the business of the country." On the contrary, I have a strong conviction that it will throw the business of the country into confusion and invite widely extended and harassing litigation, the injurious effects of which will be felt for many years to come. When congress prohibited every contract, combination or monopoly in restraint of commerce, it prescribed a simple, definite rule that all could understand, and which could be easily applied by every one wishing to obey the law and not to conduct their business in violation of the law. But now, as is to be feared, we are to wade in cases without number, the constantly recurring inquiry—difficult to solve by proof—whether the particular contract, combination or trust involved in each case is or is not an "unreasonable" or "undue" restraint of trade. Congress, in effect, said that there should be no restraint of trade, in any form, and this court solemnly adjudged many years ago that congress meant what it thus said in clear and explicit words, and that it could not add to the words of the act. But those who condemn the action of congress are now, in effect, informed that the courts will allow such restraints of interstate commerce as are shown not to be unreasonable or undue.

It remains for me to refer, more fully than I have heretofore done, to another, and, in my judgment—if we look to the future—the most important, aspect of this case. That aspect concerns the usurpation by the judicial branch of the government of the functions of the legislative department. The illustrious men who laid the foundations of our institutions deemed no part of the national constitution of more consequence or more essential to the permanency of our form of government than the provisions under which were distributed the powers of government among three separate, equal and co-ordinate departments—legislative, executive and judicial. This was at that time a new feature of governmental regulation among the nations of the earth, and it is deemed by the people of every section of our own country as most vital in the workings of a representative republic whose constitution was ordained and established in order to accomplish the objects stated in its preamble by the means, but only by the means, provided, either expressly or by necessary implication, by the instrument itself. No department of that government can constitutionally exercise the powers committed strictly to another and separate department.

I said at the outset that the action of the court in this case might well alarm thoughtful men who revered the constitution. I meant by this that many things are intimated and said in the court's opinion which will not be regarded otherwise than as sanctioning an invasion by the judiciary of the constitutional domain of congress—an attempt by interpretation to soften or modify what some regard as a harsh public policy. This court, let me repeat, solemnly adjudged many years ago that it could not, except by "judicial legislation," read words into the antitrust act not put there by congress and when, being inserted, give it a meaning which the words of the act, as passed, if properly interpreted, would not justify. The court has decided that it could not thus change a public policy formulated and declared by congress; that congress has paramount authority to regulate interstate commerce, and that it alone can change a policy once inaugurated by legislation. The courts have nothing to do with the wisdom or policy of an act of congress. Their duty is to ascertain the will of congress, and if the statute embodying the expression of that will is constitutional, the courts must respect it. They have no function to declare a public policy, nor to amend legislative enactments. "What is termed the policy of the government with reference to any particular legislation," as this court has said, "is generally a very uncertain thing, upon which all sorts of opinions, each variant from the other, may be formed by different persons. It is a ground much too unstable upon which to rest the judgment of the court in the interpretation of statutes." (Hadden vs. Collector, 5 Wall., 107.) Nevertheless, if I do not misapprehend its opinion, the court has now read into the act of congress words which are not to be found there, and has thereby done that which it adjudged in 1896 and 1898 could not be done without violating the constitution; namely, by interpretation of a statute changed a public policy declared by the legislative department.

After many years of public service at the national capital, and after a somewhat close observation of the conduct of public affairs, I am impelled to say that there is abroad in our land a most harmful tendency to bring about the amending of constitutions and legislative enactments by means alone of judicial construction. As a public policy in respect of interstate commerce, over which congress has the firm control under the constitution, all concerned must patiently submit to what has been lawfully done, until the people of the United States—the source of all national power—shall in their own time, upon reflection and through the legislative department of the government, require a change of that policy. There are some who say that it is a part of one's liberty to conduct commerce among the states without being subject to governmental authority. But that would not be liberty regulated by law, and liberty which cannot be regulated by law is not to be desired. The supreme law of the land—which is binding alike upon all—upon presidents, congresses, the courts and the people—gives to congress, and to congress alone, authority to regulate interstate commerce, and when congress forbids any restraint of such commerce, in any form, all must obey its mandate. To overreach the action of congress merely by judicial construction—that is, by indirection—is a blow at the integrity of our governmental system, and in the end will prove most dangerous to all. Mr. Justice Bradley wisely said, when on this bench, that illegitimate and unconstitutional practices get their first footing by silent approaches and slight deviations from legal moles of legal procedure. (Boyd vs. United States, 116 U. S., 616, 635.) We shall do well to heed the warnings of that great jurist.

I do not stop to discuss the merits of the policy embodied in the antitrust act of 1890; for, as has been often adjudged, the courts, under our constitutional system, have no rightful concern with the wisdom or policy of legislation enacted by that branch of the government which alone can make laws.

For the reasons stated, while concurring in the general affirmation of the decree of the Circuit court, I dissent from that part of the judgment of this court which directs the modification of the decree of the Circuit court, as well as from those parts of the opinion which, in effect, assert authority, in this court, to insert words in the antitrust act which congress did not put there, and which, being inserted, congress is made to declare, as part of the public policy of the country, what it has not chosen to declare.

SUPREME COURT DECISION IN THE TOBACCO TRUST CASE.

Following is the complete official text of the decision of the United States Supreme court in the case of the United States of America, appellant, against the American Tobacco company and others, delivered May 29, 1911, including the opinion of the court delivered by Mr. Chief Justice White and the dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Harlan:

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Nos. 118 and 119—October term, 1910.

118—The United States of America, appellant, vs. the American Tobacco company and others.

119—The American Tobacco company and others, appellants, vs. the United States of America.

Appeals from the Circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York.

(May 29, 1911.)

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was commenced on July 19, 1907, by the United States, to prevent the continuance of alleged violations of the first and second sections of the antitrust act of July 2, 1890. The defendants were twenty-nine individuals, named in the margin;* sixty-five American corporations, most of them created in the state of New Jersey, and two English corporations. For convenience of statement we classify the corporate defendants, exclusive of the two foreign ones, which we shall hereafter separately refer to, as follows: The American Tobacco company, a New Jersey corporation, because of its dominant relation to the subject matter of the controversy as the primary defendant, five other New Jersey corporations (viz., American Snuff company, American Cigar company, American Stogie company, MacAndrews & Forbes company and Conley Foll company), because of their relation to the controversy as the accessory, and the fifty-nine other American corporations as the subsidiary defendants.

The ground of complaint against the American Tobacco company rested not alone upon the nature and character of that corporation and the power which it exerted directly over the five accessory corporations and some of the subsidiary corporations by stock ownership in such corporations, but also upon the control which it exercised over the subsidiary companies by virtue of stock held in said companies by the accessory companies by stock ownership in which the American Tobacco company exerted its power of control. The accessory companies were impleaded either because of their nature and character or because of the power exerted over them through stock ownership by the American Tobacco company and also because of the power which they in turn exerted by stock ownership over the subsidiary corporations and finally the subsidiary corporations were impleaded either because of their nature or because of the control to which they were subjected in and by virtue of the stock ownership above stated. We append in the margin a statement showing the stock control exercised by the principal defendant, the American Tobacco company, over the five accessory corporations and also the authority which it directly exercised over certain of the subsidiary corporations, and a list showing the control exercised over the subsidiary corporations as a result of the stock ownership in the accessory corporations, they being in turn controlled, as we have said, by the principal defendant, the American Tobacco company.†

The two foreign corporations were impleaded either because of their nature and character and the operation and effect of contracts or agreements with the American Tobacco company or the power which it exerted over their affairs by stock ownership.

As we shall have occasion hereafter in referring to matters beyond dispute to set forth the main facts relied upon by the United States as giving rise to the cause of action alleged against all of the defendants it suffices at this moment to say that the bill averred the origin and nature of the American Tobacco company and the origin and na-be declared illegal and that injunctions issue restraining and prohibiting defendants from doing any act in pursuance of or in furtherance of the same within the jurisdiction of the United States.

"3. That the Imperial Tobacco company, its officers, agents and servants be enjoined from engaging in interstate or foreign trade and commerce within the jurisdiction of the United States until it shall cease to observe or act in pursuance of said agreements, contracts, combinations and conspiracies entered into by it and other defendants on or about Sept. 27, 1902, and thereafter, and evidenced among other things by the contracts of that date, exhibits 1 and 2 hereto.

"4. That the British-American Tobacco company be adjudged an unlawful instrumentally created solely for carrying into effect the objects and purposes of said contract, combination and conspiracy entered into on or about Sept. 27, 1902, and thereafter, and that it be enjoined from engaging in interstate or foreign trade and commerce within the jurisdiction of the United States.

"5. That the court adjudge the American Tobacco company, the American Snuff company, the American Cigar company, the American Stogie company, the MacAndrews & Forbes company and the Conley Foli company is each a combination in restraint of interstate and foreign trade and commerce, and that each has attempted and is attempting to monopolize, is in combination and conspiracy with other persons and corporations to monopolize and has monopolized part of the trade and commerce among the several states and with foreign nations, and order and decree that each one of them be restrained from engaging in interstate or foreign commerce, or, if the court should be of opinion that the public interests will be better subserved thereby, that receivers be appointed to take possession of all the property, assets, business and affairs of said defendants and wind up the same and otherwise take such course in regard thereto as will bring about conditions in trade and commerce among the states and with foreign nations in harmony with law.

"6. That the holding of stock by one of the defendant corporations in another under the circumstances shown be declared illegal and that each of them be enjoined from continuing to hold or own such shares in another and from exercising any right in connection therewith.

"7. That defendants, each and all, be enjoined from continuing to carry out the purposes of the above described contracts, combinations, conspiracies and attempts to monopolize by the means herein described, or by any other, and be required to desist and withdraw from all connection with the same.

"8. That each of the defendants be enjoined from purchasing leaf tobacco or from selling and distributing its manufactured output as a part of interstate and foreign trade and commerce in conjunction or combination with any other defendant, and from taking part or being interested in any agreement or combination intended to destroy competition among them in reference to such purchases or sales.

"9. That petitioner have such other, further, and general relief as may be proper."

As to the answers, it suffices to say that all the individual and corporate defendants other than the foreign corporations denied the charges of wrongdoing and illegal combination, and the corporate defendants in particular in addition averred their right under state charters by virtue of which they existed to own and possess the property which they held, and further averred that they were engaged in manufacturing, and that any combination amongst them related only to that subject, and therefore was not within the antitrust act. The two foreign corporations asserted the validity of their corporate organizations and of the assailed agreements, and denied any participation in the alleged wrongful combination.

After the taking of much testimony before a special examiner the case was heard before a court consisting of four judges, constituted under the expediting act of Feb. 11, 1903. In deciding the case in favor of the government, each of the four judges delivered an opinion. (164 Fed., 700.) A final decreed was entered on Dec. 15, 1908. The petition was dismissed as to the English corporations, three of the subsidiary corporations, the United Cigar Stores company and all the individual defendants. It was decreed that the defendants other than those against whom the petition was dismissed had theretofore entered into and were parties to combinations in restraint of trade, etc., in violation of the antitrust act, and said defendants and each of them, their officers, agents, etc., were restrained and enjoined "from directly or indirectly doing any act or thing whatsoever in furtherance of the objects and purposes of said combinations, and from continuing as parties thereto." It specifically found that each of the defendants "the American Tobacco company, American Snuff company, American Cigar company, American Stogie company and MacAndrews & Forbes company constitutes and is itself a combination in violation of the said act of congress." The corporations thus named, their officers, etc., were restrained and enjoined "from further directly or indirectly engaging in interstate or foreign trade and commerce in leaf tobacco, or the products manufactured therefrom, or articles necessary or useful in connection therewith. But if any of said last named defendants can hereafter affirmatively show the restoration of reasonably competitive conditions, such defendant may apply to this court for a modification, suspension or dissolution of the injunction herein granted against it." The decree then enumerated the various corporations which it was found held or claimed to own some or all of the capital stock of other corporations, and particularly specified such other corporations, and then made the following restraining provisions:

"Wherefore each and all of defendants, the American Tobacco company, the American Snuff company, the American Cigar company, P. Lorillard company, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, Blackwell's Durham Tobacco company and Conley Foli company, their officers, directors, agents, servants and employees, are hereby restrained and enjoined from acquiring, by conveyance or otherwise, the plant or business of any such corporation wherein in any one of them now holds or owns stock; and each and all of said defendant corporations holding stock in other corporations, as above specified, their officers, directors, agents, servants and employees are further enjoined from voting or attempting to vote said stock at any meeting of the stockholders of the corporation issuing the same and from exercising or attempting to exercise any control, direction, supervision or influence whatsoever over the acts and doings of such corporation. And it is further ordered and decreed that each and every of the defendant corporations the stock of which is held by any other defendant corporation as heretofore shown, their officers, directors, servants and agents, be and they are hereby respectively and collectively restrained and enjoined from permitting the stock so held to be voted by any other defendant holding or claiming to own the same or by its attorneys or agents at any corporate election for directors or officers, and from permitting or suffering any other defendant corporation claiming to own or hold stock therein, or its officers or agents, to exercise any control whatsoever over its corporate acts."

Judgment for costs was given in favor of the petitioner and against the defendants as to whom the petition had not been dismissed, except the R. P. Richardson, Jr., & Co., a corporation, which had consented to the decree. The decree also contained a provision that the defendants or any of them should not be prevented "from the institution, prosecution or defense of any suit, action or proceeding to prevent or restrain the infringement of a trade mark used in interstate commerce or otherwise assert or defend a claim to any property or rights." In the event of taking of an appeal to this court, the decree provided that the injunction which it directed "shall be suspended during the pendency of such appeal."

The United States appealed, as did also the various defendants against whom the decree was entered. For the government it is contended:

1. That the petition should not have been dismissed as to the individual defendants.
2. That it should not have been dismissed as to the two foreign corporations—the Imperial Tobacco company and the British-American Tobacco company and the domestic corporations controlled by the latter—and that, on the contrary, the decree should have commanded the observance of the antitrust act by the foreign corporations so far as their dealings in the United States were concerned, and should have restrained those companies from doing any act in the United States in violation of the antitrust act, whether or not the right to do said acts was asserted to have arisen pursuant to the contracts made outside of or within the United States.

3. The petition should not have been dismissed as to the United Cigar Stores company.

4. The final decree should have adjudged defendants parties to unlawful contracts and conspiracies.

5. The final decree should have adjudged that defendants were attempting to monopolize and had monopolized parts of commerce. More particularly, it is urged, it should have adjudged that the American Tobacco company, American Snuff company, American Cigar company, American Stogie company, MacAndrews & Forbes company, the Conley Foli company, and the British-American Tobacco company were severally attempting to monopolize and had monopolized parts of commerce, and that appropriate remedies should have been applied.

6. The decree was not sufficiently specific, since it should have described with more particularity the methods which the defendants had followed in forming and carrying out their unlawful purpose, and should have prohibited the resort to similar methods.

7. The decree should have specified the shares in corporations disclosed by the evidence to be owned by the parties to the conspiracy, and should have enjoined those parties from exercising any control over the corporations in which such stock was held, and the latter, if made defendant, from permitting such control, and should have also enjoined the collection of any dividends upon the stock.

8. The decree improperly provided that nothing therein should prevent defendants from prosecuting or defending suits; also improperly suspended the injunction pending appeal.

The defendants, by their assignments of errors, complain because the petition was not dismissed as to all, and more specifically (a) because they were adjudged parties to a combination in restraint of interstate and foreign commerce, and enjoined accordingly; (b) because certain defendant corporations holding shares in others were enjoined from voting them or exercising control over the issuing company, and the latter from permitting this, and (c) because the American Tobacco company, American Snuff company, American Cigar company, American Stogie company and the MacAndrews & Forbes company were adjudged unlawful combinations and restrained from engaging in interstate and foreign commerce.

The elaborate arguments made by both sides at bar present in many forms of statement the conflicting contentions resulting from the nature and character of the suit and the defense thereto, the decree of the lower court and the propositions assigned as error to which we have just referred. In so far as all or any of these contentions, as many of them in fact do, involve a conflict as to the application and effect of sections 1 and 2 of the antitrust act, their consideration has been greatly simplified by the analysis and review of that act and the construction affixed to the sections in question in the case of Standard Oil company et al. vs. United States, quite recently decided. In so far as the contentions relate to the disputed propositions of fact, we think, from the view which we take of the case, they need not be referred to, since in our opinion the case can be disposed of by considering only those facts which are indisputable and by applying to the inferences properly deducible from such facts the meaning and effect of the law as expounded in accordance with the previous decisions of this court.

We shall divide our investigation of the case into three subjects: First, the undisputed facts; second, the meaning of the antitrust law and its application as correctly construed to the ultimate conclusions of fact deducible from the proof; third, the remedies to be applied.

UNDISPUTED FACTS.

The matters to be considered under this heading, we think, can best be made clear by stating the merest outline of the condition of the tobacco industry prior to what is asserted to have been the initial movement in the combination which the suit assails, and in the light so afforded to briefly recite the history of the assailed acts and contracts. We shall divide the subject into two periods, (a) the one from the time of the organization of the first or old American Tobacco company in 1890 to the organization of the Continental Tobacco company, and (b) from the date of such organization to the filing of the bill in this case.

Summarizing in the broadest way the conditions which obtained prior to 1890, as to the production, manufacture and distribution of tobacco, the following general facts are adequate to portray the situation:

Tobacco was grown in many sections of the country having diversity of soil and climate, and therefore was subject to various vicissitudes resulting from the places of production, and consequently varied in quality. The great diversity of use to which tobacco was applied in manufacturing caused it to be that there was a demand for all the various qualities, the demand for all qualities was not local but widespread, extending as well to domestic as to foreign trade, and therefore all the products were marketed under competitive conditions of a peculiarly advantageous nature. The manufacture of the product in this country in various forms was successfully carried on by many individuals or concerns scattered throughout the country, a large number, perhaps, of the manufacturers being in the vicinage of production and others being advantageously situated in or near the principal markets of distribution.

Before January, 1890, five distinct concerns—Allen & Ginter, with factory at Richmond, Va.; W. Duke, Sons & Co., with factories at Durham, N. C., and New York city; Kinney Tobacco company, with factory at New York city; W. S. Kimball & Co., with factory at Rochester, N. Y.; Goodwin & Co., with factory at Brooklyn, N. Y.—manufactured, distributed and sold in the United States and abroad 95 per cent of all the domestic cigarette and less than 1 per cent of the smoking tobacco produced in the United States. There is no doubt that these factories were competitors in the purchase of the raw product which they manufactured and in the distribution and sale of the manufactured products. Indeed, it is shown that prior to 1890 not only had normal and ordinary competition existed between the factories in question, but that the competition had been fierce and abnormal. In January, 1890, having agreed upon a capital stock of $25,000,000, all to be divided amongst them, and who should be directors, the concerns referred to organized the American Tobacco company in New Jersey “for trading and manufacturing,” with broad powers, and conveyed to it the assets and businesses, including good will and right to use the names of the old concerns, and thereafter this corporation carried on the business of all. The $25,000,000 of stock of the tobacco company was allotted to the charter members as follows: Allen & Ginter, $3,000,000 preferred, $4,500,000 common; W. Duke, Sons & Co., $3,000,000 preferred, $4,500,000 common; Kinney Tobacco company, $2,000,000 preferred, $3,000,000 common; W. S. Kimball & Co., $1,000,000 preferred, $1,500,000 common, and Goodwin & Co., $1,000,000 preferred, $1,500,000 common.

There is a charge that the valuation at which the respective properties were capitalized in the new corporation was enormously in excess of their actual value. We, however, put that subject aside, since we propose only to deal with facts which are not in controversy.

Shortly after the formation of the new corporation the Goodwin & Co. factory was closed, and the directors ordered “that the manufacture of all tobacco cigarettes be concentrated at Richmond.” The new corporation, in 1890, the first year of its operation, manufactured about 2,500,000,000 cigarettes, that is about 96 or 97 per cent of the total domestic output, and about 5,500,000 pounds of smoking tobacco out of a total domestic product of nearly 70,000,000 pounds.

In a little over a year after the organization of the company it increased its capital stock by $10,000,000. The purpose of this increase is inferable from the considerations which we now state.

There was a firm known as Pfingst, Doerhoefer & Co., consisting of a number of partners, who had been long and successfully carrying on the business of manufacturing plug tobacco in Louisville, Ky., and distributing it through the channels of interstate commerce. In January, 1891, this firm was converted into a corporation known as the National Tobacco works, having a capital stock of $400,000, all of which was issued to the partners. Almost immediately thereafter, in the month of February, the American Tobacco company became the purchaser of all the capital stock of the new corporation, paying $600,000 cash and $1,200,000 in stock of the American Tobacco company. The members of the previously existing firm bound themselves by contract with the American Tobacco company to enter its service and manage the business and property sold, and each further agreed that for ten years he would not engage in carrying on, directly or indirectly, or permit or suffer the use of his name in connection with the carrying on of the tobacco business in any form.

In April following the American Tobacco company bought out the business of Philip Whitlock of Richmond, Va., who was engaged in the manufacture of cheroots and cigars, and with the exclusive right to use the name of Whitlock. The consideration for his purchase was $300,000, and Whitlock agreed to become an employee of the American Tobacco company for a number of years and not to engage for twenty years in the tobacco business.

In the month of April the American Tobacco company also acquired the business of Marburg Bros., a well known firm located at Baltimore, Md., and engaged in the manufacture and distribution of tobacco, principally smoking and snuff. The consideration was a cash payment of $164,637.65 and stock to the amount of $2,075,000. The members of the firm also conveyed the right to the use of the firm name and agreed not to engage in the tobacco business for a lengthy period.

Again, in the same month, the American Tobacco company bought out a tobacco firm of old standing, also located in Baltimore, as G. W. Gail & Ax, engaged principally in manufacturing and selling smoking tobacco, buying with the business the exclusive right to use the name of the firm or the partners, and the members of the firm agreed not to engage in the tobacco business for a specified period. The consideration for this purchase was $77,552.66 in cash and stock to the amount of $1,760,000. The plant was abandoned soon after.

The result of these purchases was manifested at once in the product of the company for the year 1891, as will appear from a note in the margin.* It will be seen that as to cheroots, smoking tobacco, fine-cut tobacco, snuff and plug tobacco, the company had become a factor in all branches of the tobacco industry.

Referring to the occurrences of the year 1891 as in all respects typical of the occurrences which took place in all the other years of the first period—that is, during the years, 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895, 1896, 1897 and 1898—we content ourselves with saying that it is undisputed that between February, 1891, and October, 1898, including the purchases which we have specifically referred to, the American Tobacco company acquired fifteen going tobacco concerns doing business in the states of Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, New York, North Carolina and Virginia. For ten of the plants an all-cash consideration of $6,410,235.26 was paid, while the payments for the remaining five aggregated in cash $1,115,100.95 and in stock $4,123,000. It is worth noting that the last purchase, in October, 1898, was of the Drummond Tobacco company, a Missouri corporation dealing principally in plug, for which a cash consideration was paid of $3,457,500.

The corporations which were combined for the purpose of forming the American Tobacco company produced a very small portion of plug tobacco. That an increase in this direction was contemplated is manifested by the almost immediate increase of the stock and its use for the purpose of acquiring, as we have indicated, in 1891 and 1892, the ownership and control of concerns manufacturing plug tobacco and the consequent increase in that branch of production. There is no dispute that as early as 1893 the president of the American Tobacco company, by authority of the corporation, approached leading manufacturers of plug tobacco and sought to bring about a combination of the plug tobacco interests, and upon the failure to accomplish this ruinous competition by lowering the price of plug below its cost ensued. As a result of this warfare, which continued until 1898, the American Tobacco company sustained severe losses aggregating more than $4,000,000. The warfare produced its natural result, not only because the company acquired during the last two years of the campaign, as we have stated, control of important plug tobacco concerns, but other engaged in the industry came to terms. We say this, because in 1898, in connection with several leading plug manufacturers, the American Tobacco company organized a New Jersey corporation styled the Continental Tobacco company, for "trading and manufacturing," with a capital of $75,000,000, afterward increased to $100,000,000. The new company issued its stock and took transfers to the plants, assets and businesses of five large and successful competing plug manufacturers.†

The American Tobacco company also conveyed to this corporation, at large valuations, the assets, brands, real estate and good will pertaining to its plug tobacco business, including the National Tobacco company, the James G. Butler Tobacco company, Drummond Tobacco company and Brown Tobacco company, receiving as consideration $30,274,200 of stock (one-half common and one-half preferred), $300,000 cash and an additional sum for losses sustained in the plug business during 1898, $340,035. Mr. Duke, the president of the American Tobacco company, also became president of the Continental company.

Under the preliminary agreement which was made, looking to the formation of the Continental Tobacco company, that company acquired from the holders all the $3,000,000 of the common stock of the P. Lorillard company in exchange for $6,000,000 of its stock, and $1,581,300 of the $2,000,000 preferred in exchange for notes aggregating a sum considerably larger. The Lorillard company, however, although it thus passed practically under the control of the American Tobacco company by virtue of its ownership of stock in the Continental company, was not a subsidiary, but its business continued to be conducted as a distinct corporation, its goods being marked and put upon the market, just as if they were the manufacture of an independent concern.

Following the organization of the Continental Tobacco company, the American Tobacco company increased its capital stock from $35,000,000 to $70,000,000 and declared a stock dividend of 100 per cent on its common stock—that is, a stock dividend of $21,000,000.

As the facts just stated bring us to the end of the first period which at the outset we stated it was our purpose to review, it is well briefly to point out the increase in the power and control of the American Tobacco company and the extension of its activities to all forms of tobacco products which had been accomplished just prior to the organization of the Continental Tobacco company. Nothing could show it more clearly than the following: At the end of the time the company was manufacturing 86 per cent or thereabouts of all the cigarettes produced in the United States, above 22 per cent of all the smoking tobacco, more than 26 per cent of all plug tobacco, 51 per cent of all little cigars, 6 per cent each of all snuff and fine cut tobacco and over 2 per cent of all cigars and cheroots.

A brief reference to the occurrences of the second period—that is, from and after the organization of the Continental Tobacco company up to the time of the bringing of this suit, will serve to make evident that the transactions in their essence had all the characteristics of the occurrences of the first period.

In the year 1899 and thereafter either the American or the Continental company, for cash or stock, at an aggregate cost of $50,000,000 bought and closed up some thirty competing corporations and partnerships theretofore engaged in interstate and foreign commerce as manufacturers, sellers and distributors of tobacco and related commodities, the interested parties covenanting not to engage in the business. Likewise the two corporations acquired for cash, by issuing stock and otherwise, control of many competing corporations, now going concerns, with plants in various states, Cuba and Porto Rico, which manufactured, bought, sold and distributed tobacco products or related articles throughout the United States and foreign countries, and took from the parties in interest covenants not to engage in the tobacco business.

The plants thus acquired were operated until the merger in 1904, to which we shall hereafter refer, as a part of the general system of the American and Continental companies. The power resulting from and the purpose contemplated in making these acquisitions by the companies just referred to, however, may not be measured by considering alone the business of the company directly acquired, since some of those companies were made the vehicles as representing the American or Continental company for acquiring and holding the stock of other and competing companies, thus amplifying the power resulting from the acquisitions directly made by the American or Continental company, without ostensibly doing so. It is, besides, undisputed that in many instances the acquired corporations with the subsidiary companies over which they had control through stock ownership were carried on ostensibly as independent concerns disconnected from either the American or the Continental company, although they were controlled and owned by one or the other of these companies. Without going into details on these subjects, for the sake of brevity we append in the margin a statement of the corporations thus acquired with the mention of the competing concerns which such corporations acquired.*

It is of the utmost importance to observe that the acquisitions made by the subsidiary corporations in some cases likewise show the remarkable fact

*Monopol Tobacco works (New York, N. Y.). Capital, $40,000; cigarettes and smoking tobacco. In 1899 the American Tobacco company acquired all the shares for $250,000, and it is now a selling agency.

Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco company (Middletown, O.). Capital, $900,000; scrap tobacco. This business was formerly carried on by a partnership.

Mengel Box company (Louisville, Ky.). Capital, $2,600,000; boxes for packing tobacco. This company has acquired the stock ($150,000) of Columbia Box company and of Tyler Box company ($25,000), both at St. Louis.

The Porto Rican-American Tobacco company (Porto Rico). Capital, $1,799,000. In 1899 the American company caused the organization of the Porto Rican-American Tobacco company, which took over the partnership business of Escabado y Portela, manufacturer of cigars and cigarettes, with covenants not to compete. The American Tobacco company and American Cigar company each hold $855,300 of the stock; the balance is in the hands of individuals.

Kentucky Tobacco Product company (Louisville, Ky.). Capital, $1,000,000. In 1899 the Continental company acquired control of the Louisville Spirit-Cured Tobacco company, engaged in curing and treating tobacco and utilizing the stems for fertilizers. By agreement, the Kentucky Tobacco Product company was organized in New Jersey, with $1,000,000 capital, $450,000 issued to the old stockholders and $550,000 to Continental company, as consideration for agreement to supply stems.

Golden Belt Manufacturing company (North Carolina). Capital, $700,000; cotton bags and containers. In 1899 the American Tobacco company acquired the business of this corporation, which was formed to take over a going business.

The Conley Foil company (New York). Capital, $825,000; tinfoil combination. In December, 1899, the American Tobacco company secured control of the business of John Conley & Son (partnership), New York, N. Y., manufacturers of tinfoil, an essential for packing tobacco products. By agreement the Conley Foil company was incorporated in New Jersey "for trading and manufacturing," etc., with $250,000 capital (afterward $375,000 and $825,000), which took over the firm's business and assets, etc., and the American Tobacco company became owner of the majority shares. The Conley Foil company has acquired all the stock of the Johnson Tinfoil and Metal company, a defendant, of St. Louis, a leading competitor, and they supply under fixed contracts the tinfoil used by defendants.

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company (Winston, Salem, N. C.). In 1899 the Continental Tobacco company acquired control of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, one of the largest manufacturers of plug—output in 1898, 6,000,000 pounds. By agreement, a new corporation (with same name) was organized in New Jersey and capitalized at $5,000,000 (afterward $7,525,000), which took over the business and assets of the old one. The Continental company immediately acquired the majority shares and the American company now holds $5,000,000 of stock. The separate organization has been preserved.

There was acquired in the name of the new Reynolds company, with covenants against competition, the following plants:

In 1900, T. L. Vaughn & Co., partnership of Winston, N. C., consideration $90,506; Brown Bros. company, a North Carolina corporation, Winston, N. C., consideration $67,615, and P. H. Hanes & Co. and B. F. Hanes & Co., Winston, N. C., partnership, consideration $671,950.

In 1905, Rucker & Witten Tobacco company, Martinsville, Va., consideration $512,898.

In 1906, D. H. Spencer & Co., Martinsville, Va., consideration $314,255.

(All of the foregoing plants were closed as soon as purchased.)

The majority of the $400,000 capital stock in the Lipfert-Scales company of Winston, N. C., a corporation largely engaged in the manufacture of plug tobacco and interstate and foreign commerce in leaf tobacco and its products, was acquired by the Reynolds company. The separate organization of the Lipfert-Scales company is preserved and the business carried on under its corporate name.

The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company also holds $98,300 stock of the MacAndrews & Forbes company and $9,600 of the Amsterdam Supply company.

Blackwell's Durham Tobacco company (Durham, N. C.). Capital, $1,090,000. In 1899 the American Tobacco company procured for $4,000,000 all the stock of Blackwell's Durham Tobacco company at Durham, N. C., manufacturer and distributor of tobacco products. Thereupon the Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Company of New Jersey, capital $1,000,000, all owned by the American, was organized and took over the assets of the old company, then stated above—that is, the disbursement of enormous amounts of money to acquire plants, which on being purchased were not utilized, but were immediately closed. It is also to be remarked that the facts stated in the memorandum in the margin show on their face a singular identity between the conceptions which governed the transactions of this latter period with those which evidently existed at the very birth of the original organization of the American Tobacco company, as exemplified by the transactions in the first period. A statement of particular transactions outside of those previously referred to as having occurred during the period in question will serve additionally to make the situation clear. And to accomplish this purpose we shall, as briefly as may be consistent with clarity, separately refer to the facts concerning the organization during the second period of the five corporations which were named as defendants in the bill, as heretofore stated and which for the purpose of designation we have hitherto classified as accessory defendants, such corporations being the American Snuff company, American Cigar company, American Stogie company, MacAndrews & Forbes company (licorice) and Conley Foli company.

(1) The American Snuff company—As we have seen, the American Tobacco company at the commencement of the first period produced a very small quantity of snuff. Its capacity, however, that regard was augmented owing particularly to the formation of the Continental Tobacco company and the acquisition of the Lorillard company, by which it came to be a serious factor as a snuff producer. There shortly ensued an aggressive competition in the snuff business between the American Tobacco company, with the force acquired from the vantage ground resulting from the dominancy of its expanded organization, and others in the trade operating independently of that organization. The result was identical with that which had previously arisen from like conditions in the past.

In March, 1900, there was organized in New Jersey a corporation known as the American Snuff company, with a capital of $25,000,000, one-half preferred and one-half common, which took over the snuff business of the P. Lorillard company, Continental Tobacco company and the American Tobacco company, with that of a large competitor, viz., the Atlantic Snuff company. The stock of the new company was thus apportioned: Atlantic Snuff company, preferred $7,500,000, common $25,000,000; P. Lorillard company, preferred $1,124,700, common $3,459,100; the American Tobacco company, preferred $1,177,800, common $3,227,500; Continental Tobacco company, preferred $197,500, common $813,100. The stock issued to Continental Tobacco company and the defendants, P. Lorillard company and the American Tobacco company, is still held by the latter, and they have at all times had a controlling interest in the snuff company. All the companies, together with their officers and directors, covenanted that they would not thereafter engage as competitors in the tobacco business or the manufacture, sale or distribution of snuff.

Among the assets transferred to the Atlantic Snuff company to American Snuff company were all the shares ($600,000) of W. E. Garrett & Sons (Inc.), then and now one of the oldest and very largest producers of snuff, for a long time and still engaged at Yorkland, Del., in interstate and foreign commerce in tobacco and its products, and which controlled through stock ownership the Southern Snuff company, Memphis, Tenn.; Dental Snuff company, Lynchburg, Va., and Stewart-Ralph Snuff company, Clarksville, Tenn. The separate existence of W. E. Garrett & Sons (Inc.) has been preserved and its business conducted under the corporate name. In March, 1900, the American Snuff company acquired all the shares of George W. Helme company, one of the oldest and largest producers of snuff and actively engaged at Helmetta, N. J., in interstate and foreign commerce in competition with defendants, by issuing in exchange therefor $2,000,000 preferred stock and $1,000,000 common; and it thereafter took a conveyance of all assets of the acquired company and now operates the plant under its own name.

As a result of the transactions just stated, it came to pass that the American Tobacco company, which had at the end of the first period only a very small percentage of the snuff manufacturing business, came virtually to have the dominant control as a manufacturer of that product.

(2) Conley Foli company, manufacturers of tin-foli, an essential for packing tobacco products—In December, 1899, the American Tobacco company secured control of the business of John Conley & Sons, a partnership, of New York city. By agreement the Conley Foli company was incorporated in New York "for trading and manufacturing," etc., with $250,000 capital, ultimately increased to $825,000. The corporation took over the business and assets of the firm and the American Tobacco company became owner of a majority of the shares of stock. The Conley Foli company has acquired all the shares of stock of the Johnson Tinfoil & Metal company of St. Louis, a leading competitor, and they supply, under fixed contracts at remunerative prices, the tinfoil used by the defendants, which constitutes the major part of the total production in the United States.

(3) American Cigar company—Prior to 1901 the American and Continental Tobacco companies manufactured, sold and distributed cigars, stogies and cheroots. In the year stated the companies determined to engage in the business upon a larger scale. Under agreement with Powell, Smith & Co., large manufacturers and dealers in cigars, they caused the incorporation in New Jersey of the American Cigar company, "for trading and manufacturing," etc., to which all three conveyed their said business, and it has since carried on the same. The American and Continental companies each acquired 46 2/3 per cent of the shares and Powell, Smith & Co. 7 per cent; the original capitalization was $10,000,000 (afterwards $20,000,000), and more than three-fourths is owned by the former. The cigar company acquired many competitors (partnerships and corporations) engaged in interstate and foreign commerce, taking from the parties covenants against engaging in the tobacco business; and it has also procured the organization of controlled corporations which have acquired competing manufacturers, jobbers and distributors in the United States, Cuba and Porto Rico. It manufactures, sells and distributes a considerable percentage of domestic cigars; is the dominating factor in the tobacco business, foreign and domestic, in Cuba and Porto Rico, and is there engaged in tobacco planting. It also controls corporate jobbers in California, Alabama, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Louisiana, New Jersey and Tennessee.

(4) The MacAndrews & Forbes company, manufacturers of licorice—There is no question that licorice paste is an essential ingredient in the manufacture of plug tobacco, and that one who is debarred from obtaining such paste would therefore be unable to engage in or carry on the manufacture of such product. The control over this article was thus secured: In May, 1902, the Continental company secured control of MacAndrews & Forbes company of Newark, N. J., and organized "for trading and manufacturing" a corporation known as the MacAndrews & Forbes company, with a capital of $7,000,000, $4,000,000 preferred and $3,000,000 common, under receivership. Its separate organization has been preserved.

The Durham house has acquired control of the following competitors: Reynolds Tobacco company, R. Pen. Tobacco company and Wells-Whitehead Tobacco company.

The following companies came also under the control of the American Tobacco company through acquired stock ownership.

S. Anargyros, Capital, $650,000; Turkish cigarettes. In 1890 the American Tobacco company produced the organization of corporation of S. Anargyros, which took over that individual's going business and has since controlled it. Through this company the business in Turkish cigarettes is largely conducted.

The John Bollman company (San Francisco), Capital, $200,000; cigarettes. In 1900 the American Tobacco company procured organization of the John Bollman company, which took over the business of the former concern in exchange for stock. Its separate organization has been preserved.

which took over the business of MacAndrews & Forbes and another large competitor. The Continental company acquired two-thirds of the common stock by agreeing to purchase its supply of paste from the new company. The American Tobacco company, at the time of the filing of the bill, was the owner of $2,112,900 of the common stock and $750,000 preferred. By various purchases and agreements the MacAndrews & Forbes company acquired, substantially, the business of all competitors. Thus, in June, 1902, it purchased the business of the Stamford and Manufacturing company of Stamford, Conn., and incorporated the National Licorice company, which acquired the business of Young & Smylie and F. B. & V. P. Scudder, and the National company agreed with MacAndrews & Forbes not to produce licorice for tobacco manufacturers. In 1906 all the stock in the J. S. Young company ($1,800,000), which had been organized to take over the business of the J. S. Young company of Baltimore, Md., was acquired by the MacAndrews & Forbes company. The MacAndrews & Forbes company used in excess of 95 per cent of the licorice root consumed in the United States.

(5) American Stogie company.—In May, 1903, the American Cigar company and the American and Continental Tobacco companies caused the American Stogie company to be incorporated in New Jersey with $11,979,000 capital, which immediately took over the stogie and tobe business of the companies named in exchange for $5,206,275 stock, and then in the usual ways acquired the business of others in the manufacturing and distribution of such products, with covenants not to compete. It acquired, in exchange for $3,647,725 stock, all shares of United States Cigar company (which had previously acquired and owned the business of important competitors) and subsequently took the conveyance of the plant and assets. The majority shares always have been held by defendant, the American Cigar company.

As we think the legitimate inferences deducible from the undisputed facts which we have thus stated will be sufficient to dispose of the controversy, we do not deem it necessary to expand this statement so as to cause it to embrace a recital of the undisputed facts concerning the entry of the American Tobacco company into the retail tobacco trade through the acquisition of a controlling interest in the stock of what is known as the United Cigar Stores company, as well as to some other subjects which, for the sake of brevity, we likewise pass over in order to come to a statement concerning the foreign companies.

The English companies.—In September, 1901, the American Tobacco company purchased for $5,347,000 a Liverpool (England) corporation known as Ogdens Limited, there engaged in manufacturing and distributing tobacco products. A trade conflict which at once ensued caused many of the English manufacturers to combine into an incorporation known as the Imperial Tobacco Company of Great Britain and Ireland, capital $15,091,000, afterward increased to $18,000,000 sterling. The trade war was continued between this corporation and the American Tobacco company, with a result substantially identical with that which had hitherto, as we have seen, arisen from such a situation.

In September, 1902, the Imperial and the American companies entered into contracts (executed in England) stipulating that the former should limit its business to the United Kingdom except purchasing leaf in the United States (it buys 54,000,000 pounds annually); that the American companies should limit their business to the United States, its dependencies, and Cuba, and that the British-American Tobacco company, with capital of $6,000,000 apportioned between them, should be organized, take over the export business of both and operate in other countries, etc. This arrangement was immediately put into effect and has been observed.

The Imperial company holds one-third and the American company two-thirds of the capital stock of the British-American Tobacco company (Ltd.). The latter company maintains a branch office in New York city, and the vice-president of the American Tobacco company is a principal officer. This company uses large quantities of domestic leaf, but exports to various plants abroad and about half manufactured here and then exported. By agreement all this is purchased through the American Tobacco company. In addition to many plants abroad, it has warehouses in various states and plants at Petersburg, Va., and Durham, N. C., where tobacco is manufactured and then exported.

The purchase of necessary leaf tobacco in the United States by the Imperial company is now made through a resident general agent and is exported as a part of foreign commerce.

Not to break the continuity of the narrative of facts, we have omitted in the proper chronological order to state the facts relative to what was known as the Consolidated Tobacco company. We now particularly refer to that subject.

The Consolidated Tobacco company.—In June, 1901, parties largely interested in the American and Continental companies caused the incorporation in New Jersey of the Consolidated Tobacco company, capital $30,000,000 (afterward $40,000,000), with broad powers and perpetuity existing in the business throughout the world and to guarantee securities of other companies, etc. A majority of shares was taken by a few individuals connected with the old concerns: A. N. Brady, J. B. Duke, A. H. Payne, Thomas Ryan, W. C. Whitney and P. A. B. Widener. J. B. Duke, president of both the old companies, became president of the Consolidated. Largely in exchange for bonds the new company acquired substantially all the shares of common stock of the old ones. Its business of holding and financing was continued until 1904, when, with the American and Continental companies, it was merged into the present American Tobacco company.

By proceedings in New Jersey, October, 1904, the (old) American Tobacco company, Continental Tobacco company and Consolidated Tobacco company were merged into one corporation, under the name of the American Tobacco company, the principal defendant here. The merged company, with perpetual existence, was capitalized at $150,000,000 ($80,000,000 preferred, ordinarily without power to vote).

The powers conferred by the charter are stated in the margin.*

Prior to the merger the Consolidated Tobacco company, a majority of whose $40,000,000 share capital was held by J. B. Duke, Thomas F. Ryan, William C. Whitney, Anthony N. Brady, Peter A. B. Widener and Oliver H. Payne, had acquired, as already stated, nearly all common shares of both old American and Continental companies, and thereby control. The preferred shares, however, were held by many individuals. Through the method of distribution of the stock of the new company, in exchange for shares in the old American and in the Continental company it resulted that the same six men in control of the combination through the Consolidated Tobacco company continued that control by ownership of stock in the merged or new American Tobacco company. The assets, property, etc., of the old companies passed to the American Tobacco company (merged), which has since carried on the business.

The record indisputably discloses that after this merger the same methods which were used from the beginning continued to be employed. Thus, it

*To buy, manufacture, sell and otherwise deal in tobacco and the products of tobacco in any and all forms; * * * to guarantee dividends on any shares of the capital stock of any corporation in which said merged corporation has an interest as stockholder; * * * to carry on any business operations deemed by such merged corporation to be necessary or advisable in connection with any of the objects of its incorporation or in furtherance of any thereof, or tending to increase the value of its property or stock; * * * to conduct business in all other states, territories, possessions and dependencies of the United States of America and in all foreign countries; * * * to purchase or otherwise acquire and hold, sell, assign, transfer, mortgage, pledge or otherwise dispose of the shares of the capital stock or of any bonds, securities or other evidences of indebtedness created by any other corporation or corporations of this or any other state or government, and to issue its own obligations in payment or exchange therefor. * * *

is beyond dispute: First, that since the organization of the new American Tobacco company that company has acquired four large tobacco concerns; that restrictive covenants against engaging in the tobacco business were taken from the sellers and that the plants were not continued in operation, but were at once abandoned. Second, that the new company has, besides acquiring control of eight additional concerns, the business of such concerns being now carried on by four separate corporations, all absolutely controlled by the American Tobacco company, although the connection as to two of these companies with that corporation was long and persistently denied.

Thus, reaching the end of the second period and coming to the time of the bringing of the suit, brevity prevents us from stopping to portray the difference between the condition in 1890 when the (old) American Tobacco company was organized by the consolidation of five competing cigarette concerns and that which existed at the commencement of the suit. That situation and the vast power which the principal and accessory corporate defendants and the small number of individuals who own a majority of the common stock of the new American Tobacco company exert over the marketing of tobacco as a raw product, its manufacture, its marketing when manufactured and its consequent movement in the channels of interstate commerce, indeed relatively over foreign commerce and the commerce of the whole world in the raw and manufactured products, stand out in such bold relief from the undisputed facts which have been stated as to lead us to pass at once to the second fundamental proposition which we are required to consider—that is, the construction of the antitrust act and the application of the act as rightly construed to the situation as proven in consequence of having determined the ultimate and final inferences properly deducible from the undisputed facts which we have stated.

THE CONSTRUCTION AND APPLICATION OF THE ANTI-TRUST ACT.

If the antitrust law is applicable to the entire situation here presented and is adequate to afford complete relief for the evils which the United States insists that situation presents, it can only be because that law will have been more comprehensive application than has been affixed to it in any previous decision. This will be the case because the undisputed facts as we have stated them involve questions as to the operation of the antitrust law not hitherto presented in any case. Thus, even if the ownership of stock by the American Tobacco company in the accessory and subsidiary companies and the ownership of stock in any of those companies among themselves were held, as was decided in the Standard Oil company case, to be a violation of the act and all relations resulting from such stock ownership were therefore set aside the question would yet remain whether the principal defendant, the American Tobacco company, and the five accessory defendants, even when divested of their stock ownership in other corporations, by virtue of the power which they would continue to possess, even although thus stripped, would incur a violation of the act under the second sections of the act. Again, if it were held that the corporations the existence whereof was due to a combination between such companies and other companies was a violation of the act, the question would remain whether such of the companies as did not owe their existence and power to combinations, but whose power alone arose from the exercise of the right to acquire and own property, would be amenable to the prohibitions of the act. Yet, further, even if this proposition was held in the affirmative, the question would remain whether the principal defendant, the American Tobacco company, when stripped of its stock ownership, would be in and of itself within the prohibitions of the act, although that company was organized and took being before the antitrust act was passed. Still further, the question would yet remain whether particular corporations which when bereft of the power which they possessed as resulting from stock ownership, although they were not inherently possessed of a sufficient residuum of power to cause them to be in and of themselves either a restraint of trade or a monopolization or an attempt to monopolize, should nevertheless be restrained because of their intimate connection and association with other corporations found to be within the prohibitions of the act. The necessity of relief as to all these aspects, we think, seemed to the government so essential, and the difficulty of giving to the act such a comprehensive and coherent construction as would be adequate to enable it to meet the entire situation, led to what appears to us to be in their essence a resort to methods of construction not compatible one with the other. And the same apparent conflict is presented by the views of the act taken by the defendants when their contentions are accurately stated.

Thus the government, for the purpose of fixing the illegal character of the original combination which organized the old American Tobacco company, asserts that the illegal character of the combination is plainly shown because the combination was brought about to stay the progress of a flagrant and ruinous trade war. In other words, the contention is that as the act forbids every contract and combination it hence prohibits a reasonable and just agreement made for the purpose of ending a trade war. But as thus construing the act by the rule of the letter which kills would necessarily operate to take out of the reach of the act some of the accessory and many subsidiary corporations, the existence of which depends not at all upon combination or agreement or contract but upon mere purchases of property, it is insisted in many forms of argument that the rule of construction to be applied must be the spirit and intent of the act, and therefore its prohibitions must be held to extend to acts even if not within the literal terms of the statute if they are within its spirit, because done with an intent to bring about the harmful results which it was the purpose of the statute to prohibit. So as to the defendants. While it is argued on the one hand that the forms by which various properties were acquired in view of the letter of the act exclude many of the assailed transactions from condemnation, it is yet urged that giving to the act the broad construction which it should rightfully receive, whatever may be the form, no condemnation should follow, because looking at the case as a whole every act assailed is seen to have been but a legitimate and lawful result of the exertion of honest business methods brought into play for the purpose of advancing trade instead of with the object of obstructing and restraining the same. But the difficulties which arise, from the complexity of the particular dealings which are here involved and the situation which they produce, we think grows out of a plain misconception of both the letter and spirit of the antitrust act. We say of the letter, because while seeking by a narrow rule of the letter to include things which it is deemed would otherwise be excluded the contention really destroys the great purpose of the act, since it renders it impossible to apply the law to a multitude of wrongful acts, which would come within the scope of its remedial purposes by resort to a reasonable construction, although they would not be within its reach by a too narrow and unreasonable adherence to the strict letter. This must be the case unless it be possible to resort to say that for the purpose of including one class of acts which would not otherwise be embraced a literal construction, although in conflict with reason, must be applied, and for the purpose of including other acts which would not otherwise be embraced a reasonable construction must be resorted to. That is to say, two conflicting rules of construction must at one and the same time be applied and adhered to.

The obscurity and resulting uncertainty, however, is now but an abstraction, because it has been removed by the consideration which we have given quite recently to the construction of the antitrust act in the Standard Oil case. In that case it was held, without departing from any previous decision of the court, that as the statute had not defined the words "restraint of trade," it became necessary to construe those words, a duty which could only be discharged by a resort to reason. We say the doctrine thus stated was in accord with all the previous decisions of this court, despite the fact that the contrary view was sometimes erroneously attributed to some of the expressious used in two prior decisions. (Trans-Missouri Freight association and Joint Traffic cases, 166 U. S., 290, and 171 U. S., 505.) That such view was a mistaken one was fully pointed out in the Standard Oil case and is additionally shown by a passage in the opinion in the Joint Traffic case, as follows (171 U. S., 568): "The act of congress must have a reasonable construction or else there would scarcely be an agreement or contract among business men that could not be said to have, indirectly or remotely, some bearing on interstate commerce, and possibly to restrain it." Applying the rule of reason to the construction of the statute, it was held in the Standard Oil case that as the words "restraint of trade" at common law and in the law of this country at the time of the adoption of the anti-trust act only embraced acts or contracts or agreements or combinations which operated to the prejudice of the public interests by unduly restricting competition or unduly obstructing the due course of trade or which, either because of their inherent nature or effect or because of the evident purpose of the acts, etc., injuriously restrained trade, that the words as used in the statute were designed to have and did have but a like significance. It was therefore pointed out that the statute did not forbid or restrain the power to make normal and usual contracts to further trade by resorting to all normal methods, whether by agreement or otherwise, to accomplish such purpose.

In other words, it was held not that acts which the statute prohibited could be removed from the control of its prohibitions by a finding that they were reasonable, but that the duty to interpret which inevitably arose from the general character of the term "restraint of trade" required that the words "restraint of trade" should be given a meaning which would not destroy the individual right to contract and render difficult if not impossible any movement of trade in the channels of interstate commerce—the free movement of which it was the purpose of the statute to protect. The soundness of the rule that the statute should receive a reasonable construction, after further mature deliberation, we see no reason to doubt. Indeed, the necessity for not departing in this case from the standard of the rule of reason which is universal in its application is so plainly required in order to give effect to the remedial purposes which the act under consideration contemplates, and to prevent that act from destroying all liberty of contract and all substantial right to trade, and thus causing the act to be at war with itself by annihilating the fundamental right of freedom to trade which, on the very face of the act, it was enacted to preserve, is illustrated by the record before us. In truth, the plain demonstration which this record gives of the injury which would arise from and the promotion of the wrong which the statute was intended to guard against, which would result from giving to the statute a narrow, unreasoning and unheard of construction, as illustrated by the record before us, if possible serves to strengthen our conviction as to the correctness of the rule of construction, the rule of reason, which was applied in the Standard Oil case, the application of which rule to the statute we now, in the most unequivocal terms, re-express and reaffirm.

Coming then to apply to the case before us the act as interpreted in the Standard Oil and previous cases, all the difficulties suggested by the mere form in which the assailed transactions are clothed become of no moment. This follows because, although it was held in the Standard Oil case that, giving to the statute a reasonable construction, the words "restraint of trade" did not embrace all the normal and usual contracts essential to individual freedom and the right to make which was necessary in order that the course of trade might be free, yet, as a result of the reasonable construction which was affixed to the statute, it was pointed out that the generic designation of the first and second sections of the law, when taken together, embraced every conceivable act which could possibly come within the spirit or purpose of the prohibitions of the law, without regard to the garb in which such acts were clothed. That is to say, it was held that in view of the general language of the statute and the public policy which it manifested, there was no possibility of frustrating that policy by resorting to any disguise or subterfuge of form, since resort to reason rendered it impossible to escape by any indirection the prohibitions of the statute.

Considering, then, the undisputed facts which we have previously stated, it remains only to determine whether they establish that the acts, contracts, agreements, combinations, etc., which were assailed were of such an unusual and wrongful character as to bring them within the prohibitions of the law. That they were, in our opinion, so overwhelmingly, results from the undisputed facts that it seems only necessary to refer to the facts as we have stated them to demonstrate the correctness of this conclusion. Indeed, the history of the combination is so replete with the doing of acts which it was the obvious purpose of the statute to forbid, so demonstrative of the existence from the beginning of a purpose to acquire dominion and control of the tobacco trade, not by the mere exertion of the ordinary right to contract and to trade, but by methods devised in order to monopolize the trade by driving competitors out of business, which were ruthlessly carried out upon the assumption that to work upon the fears or play upon the cupidities of competitors would make success possible. We say these conclusions are inevitable, not because of the vast amount of property aggregated by the combination, not because alone of the many corporations which the proof shows were united by resort to one device or another. Again, not alone because of the dominion and control over the tobacco trade which actually exists, but because we think the conclusion of wrongful purpose and illegal combination is overwhelmingly established by the following considerations:

(a) By the fact that the very first organization or combination was impelled by a previously existing fierce trade war, evidently inspired by one or more of the minds which brought about and became parties to that combination.

(b) Because, immediately after that combination and the increase of capital which followed, the acts which ensued justify the inference that the intention existed to use the power of the combination as a vantage ground to further monopolize the trade in tobacco by means of trade conflicts designed to injure others, either by driving competitors out of the business or compelling them to become parties to a combination—a purpose whose execution was illustrated by the plug war which ensued and its results, by the snuff war which followed and its results and by the conflict which immediately followed the entry of the combination in England and the division of the world's business by the two foreign contracts which ensued.

(c) By the ever present manifestation which is exhibited by a conscious wrongdoing by the form in which the various transactions were embodied from the beginning, ever changing but ever in substance the same. Now the organization of a new company, now the control exerted by the taking of stock in one or another or in several, so as to obscure the result actually attained, nevertheless uniform, in their manifestations of the purpose to restrain others and to monopolize and retain power in the hands of the few who, it would seem, from the beginning contemplated the mastery of the trade which practically followed.

(d) By the gradual absorption of control over all the elements essential to the successful manufacture of tobacco products, and placing such control in the hands of seemingly independent corporations serving as perpetual barriers to the entry of others into the tobacco trade.

(e) By the persistent expenditure of millions upon millions of dollars in buying out plants, not for the purpose of utilizing them, but in order to close them up and render them useless for the purposes of trade.

(f) By the constantly recurring stipulations, whose legality, isolatedly viewed, we are not considering, by which numbers of persons, whether manufacturers, stockholders or employees, were required to bind themselves, generally for long periods, not to compete in the future. Indeed, when the results of the undisputed proof which we have stated are fully apprehended, and the wrongful acts which they exhibit are considered, there comes inevitably to the mind the conviction that it was the danger which it was deemed would arise to individual liberty and the public well-being from acts like those which this record exhibits, which led the legislative mind to conceive and to enact the antitrust act, considerations which also serve to clearly demonstrate that the combination here assailed is within the law as to leave no doubt that it is our plain duty to apply its prohibitions.

In stating summarily, as we have done, the conclusions which, in our opinion, are plainly deducible from the undisputed facts, we have not paused to give the reasons why we consider, after great consideration, that the elaborate arguments advanced to affix a different complexion to the case are wholly devoid of merit. We do not, for the sake of brevity, moreover, stop to examine and discuss the various propositions used in the argument at bar for the purpose of demonstrating that the subject matter of the combination which we find to exist and the combination itself are not within the scope of the antitrust law, because when rightly considered they are merely matters of intrastate commerce, and therefore subject alone to state control. We have done this because the want of merit in all the arguments advanced on such subjects is so completely established by the prior decisions of this court, as pointed out in the Standard Oil case, as not to require restatement.

Leading as this does to the conclusion that the assailed combination in all its aspects—that is to say, whether it be looked at from the point of view of stock ownership or from the standpoint of the principal corporation and the accessory or subsidiary corporations viewed independently, including the foreign corporations in so far as by the contracts made by them they became co-operators in the combination—comes within the prohibitions of the first and second sections of the antitrust act, it remains only finally to consider the remedy which it is our duty to apply to the situation thus found to exist.

THE REMEDY.

Our conclusion being that the combination as a whole, involving all its co-operating or associated parts, in whatever form clothed, constitutes a restraint of trade within the first section, and an attempt to monopolize or a monopolization within the second section of the antitrust act, it follows that the relief which we are to afford must be wider than that awarded by the lower court, since that court merely decided that certain of the corporate defendants constituted combinations in violation of the first section of the act, because of the fact that they were formed by the union of previously competing concerns and that the other defendants not dismissed from the action were parties to such combinations or promoted their purposes. We hence, in determining the relief proper to be given, may not model our action upon that granted by the court below, but in order to enable us to award relief coterminous with the ultimate redress of the wrongs which we find to exist, we must approach the subject of relief from an original point of view. Such subject necessarily takes a twofold aspect—the character of the permanent relief required and the nature of the temporary relief essential to be applied pending the working out of permanent relief in the event that it be found that it is impossible under the situation as it now exists to at once rectify such existing wrongful condition. In considering the subject from both of these aspects three defendants in cases must guide our action: (1) The duty of giving complete and efficacious effect to the prohibitions of the statute; (2) the accomplishing of this result with as little injury as possible to the interest of the general public, and (3) a proper regard for the vast interests of private property which may have become vested in many persons as a result of the acquisition either by way of stock ownership or otherwise of interests in the stock or securities of the combination without any guilty knowledge or intent in any way to become actors or participants in the wrongs which we find to have inspired and dominated the combination from the beginning. Mindful of these considerations and to clear the way for their application we say at the outset without stopping to amplify the reasons which lead us to that conclusion, we think that the court below clearly erred in dismissing the individual defendants, the United Cigar Stores company and the foreign corporations and their subsidiary corporations.

Looking at the situation as we have hitherto pointed it out, it involves difficulties in the application of remedies greater than have been presented by any case involving the antitrust law which has been hitherto considered by this court: First, because in this case it is obvious that a mere decree forbidding stock ownership by one part of the combination in another part or entity thereof would afford no adequate measure of relief, since different ingredients of the combination would remain unaffected, namely, by the very nature and character of their organization would be able to continue the wrongful situation which it is our duty to destroy; second, because the methods of apparent ownership by which the wrongful intent was in part carried out and the subtle devices which, as we have seen, were resorted to for the purpose of accomplishing the wrong contemplated, by way of ownership or otherwise of such a character that it is difficult if not impossible to formulate a remedy which could restore in their entirety the prior lawful conditions; third, because the methods devised by which the various essential elements to the successful operation of the tobacco business from any particular aspect have been so separated under various subordinate combinations, yet so unified by way of the control worked out by the scheme here condemned, are so involved that any specific form of relief which we might now order in substance and effect might operate really to injure the public and, it may be, to perpetuate the wrong. Doubtless it was the presence of these difficulties which caused the United States, in its prayer for relief, to tentatively suggest rather than to specifically demand definite and precise remedies; we might at once resort to one or the other of the general remedies—(a) the allowance of a permanent injunction restraining the combination as a universality, and all the individuals and corporations which form a part of or co-operate in it in any manner or form from continuing to engage in interstate commerce until the illegal situation be cured, a measure of relief which would accord in substantial effect with that awarded below to the extent that the court found illegal combinations to exist, or (b) to direct the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the assets and property in this country of the combination in all its ramifications for the purpose of preventing a continued violation of the law, and thus working out by a sale of the property of the combination or otherwise a condition of things which would not be repugnant to the prohibitions of the act.

But, having regard to the principles which we have said must control our action, we do not think we can now direct the immediate application of either of these remedies. We so consider as to the first because, in view of the extent of the combination, the vast field which it covers, the all-embracing character of its activities concerning tobacco and its products, to at once stay the movement in interstate commerce of the products which the combination or its co-operating forces produce or control might inflict infinite injury upon the public by leading to a stoppage of supply and a great enhancement of prices. The second because the extensive power which would result from at once resorting to a receivership might not only do grievous injury to the public, but also cause widespread and perhaps irreparable loss to many innocent people. Under these circumstances, taking into mind the complexity of the situation in all of its aspects and giving weight to the many sided considerations which must control our judgment, we think, so far as the permanent relief to be awarded is concerned, we should decree as follows:

First. That the combination in and of itself, as well as each and all of the elements composing it, whether corporate or individual, whether considered collectively or separately, be decreed to be in restraint of trade and an attempt to monopolize and a monopolization within the first and second sections of the antitrust act.

Second. That the court below, in order to give effective force to our decree in this regard, be directed to hear the parties, by evidence or otherwise, as it may be deemed proper, for the purpose of ascertaining and determining upon some plan or method of dissolving the combination and of re-creating, out of the elements now composing it, a new condition which shall be honestly in harmony with and not repugnant to the law.

Third. That for the accomplishment of these purposes, taking into view the difficulty of the situation, a period of six months is allowed from the receipt of our mandate, with leave, however, in the event, in the judgment of the court below, the necessities of the situation require, to extend such a period to a further time not to exceed sixty days. Fourth. That in the event, before the expiration of the period thus fixed, a condition of disintegration in harmony with the law is not brought about, either as the consequence of the action of the court in determining an issue on the subject or in accepting a plan agreed upon, it shall be the duty of the court, either by way of an injunction restraining the movement of the products of the combination in the channels of interstate or foreign commerce or by the appointment of a receiver, to give effect to the requirements of the statute.

Pending the bringing about of the result just stated, each and all of the defendants, individuals as well as corporations, should be restrained from doing any act which might further extend or enlarge the power of the combination, by any means or device whatsoever. In view of the considerations we have stated, we leave the matter to the court below to work out a compliance with the law without unnecessary injury to the public or the rights of private property.

While in many substantial respects our conclusion is in accord with that reached by the court below, and while also the relief which we think should be awarded in some respects is coincident with that which the court granted, in order to prevent any complication and to clearly define the situation we think instead of affirming and modifying, our decree, in view of the broad nature of our conclusions, should be one of reversal and remanding with directions to the court below to enter a decree in conformity with this opinion and to take such further steps as may be necessary to fully carry out the directions which we have given.

And it is so ordered.

JUSTICE HARLAN'S OPINION.

Mr. Justice Harlan concurred in part and dissented in part:

I concur with many things said in the opinion just delivered for the court, but it contains some observations from which I am compelled to withhold my assent.

I agree most thoroughly with the court in holding that the principal defendant, the American Tobacco company and its accessory and subsidiary corporations and companies, including the defendant English corporations, constitute a combination which, "in and of itself, as well as each and all of the elements composing it, whether corporate or individual, whether considered collectively or separately," is illegal under the antitrust act of 1890, and should be decreed to be in restraint of interstate trade and an attempt to monopolize and a monopolization of part of such trade.

The evidence in the record is, I think, abundant to enable the court to render a decree containing all necessary details for the suppression of the evils of the combination in question. But the case is sent back with directions further to hear the parties, by evidence or otherwise, "for the purpose of ascertaining and determining upon some plan or method of dissolving the combination, and of re-creating out of the elements now composing it a new condition," which shall not be repugnant to law. The court, in its opinion, says of the present combination, that its illegal purposes are overwhelmingly established by many facts, among others—"by the ever present manifestation which is exhibited of a conscious wrongdoing by the firm in which the various transactions were embodied from the beginning, ever changing, but ever in substance the same. Now the organization of a new company, now the control exerted by the taking of stock in one or another or in several, so as to obscure the result actually attained, nevertheless uniform in their manifestations of the purpose to restrain others, and to monopolize and retain power in the hands of the few, who, it would seem, from the beginning contemplated the mastery of the trade which practically followed. By the gradual absorption of control over all the elements essential to the successful manufacture of tobacco products and placing such control in the hands of seemingly independent corporations serving as perpetual barriers to the entry of others into the tobacco trade."

The court further says of this combination and monopoly:

"The history of the combination is so replete with the doing of acts which it was the obvious purpose of the statute to forbid, so demonstrative of the existence, from the beginning, of a purpose to acquire dominion and control of the tobacco trade, not by the mere exertion of the ordinary right to contract and to trade, but by methods devised to monopolize the trade by driving competitors out of business, which were ruthlessly carried out, upon the assumption that to work upon the fears or play upon the cupidity of competitors would make success possible."

But it seems that the course I have suggested is not to be pursued. The case is to go back to the Circuit court in order that out of the elements of the old combination a new condition may be "re-created" that will not be in violation of the law. I confess my inability to find, in the history of this combination, anything to justify the wish that a new condition should be "re-created" out of the mischievous elements that compose the present combination, which, together with its component parts, have, without ceasing, pursued the vicious methods pointed out by the court. If the proof before us—as it undoubtedly does—warrants the characterization which the court has made of this monstrous combination, why cannot all necessary directions be now given as to the terms of the decree? In my judgment there is enough in the record to enable this court to formulate specific directions as to what the decree should contain. Such directions would not only end this litigation, but would serve to protect the public against any more conscious wrongdoing by those who have persistently and "ruthlessly" to use this court's language, pursued illegal methods to defeat the act of congress.

I will not say what, in my opinion, should be the form of the decree nor speculate as to what the details ought to be. It will be time enough to speak on that subject when we have the decree before us. I will, however, say now that, in my opinion, the decree below should be affirmed, as to the tobacco company and its accessory and subsidiary companies and reversed on the cross appeal of the government.

But my objections have also reference to those parts of the court's opinion reaffirming what it said recently in the Standard Oil case about the former decisions of this court touching the antitrust act. We are again reminded, as we were in the Standard Oil case, of the necessity of applying the "rule of reason" in the construction of this act of congress—an act expressed, as I think, in language so clear and simple that there is no room whatever for construction.

Congress, with full and exclusive power over the whole subject, has signified its purpose to forbid every restraint of interstate trade, in whatever form or to whatever extent, but the court has assumed to insert in the act, by construction merely, words which make congress say that it means only to prohibit the "unlawful" restraint of trade.

If I do not misapprehend the opinion just delivered, the court insists that what was said in the opinion in the Standard Oil case was in accordance with our previous decisions in the Trans-Missouri and Joint Traffic cases (166 U. S., 290; 171 U. S., 655), if we resort to reason. This statement surprises me quite as much as would a statement that black was white or white was black. It is scarcely just to the majority in those two cases for the court at this late day to say or to intimate that they interpreted the act of congress without regard to the "rule of reason," or to assume, as the court now does, that the act was, for the first time in the Standard Oil case, interpreted in the "light of reason." One thing is certain, "rule of reason," to which the court refers, does not justify the perversion of the plain words of an act in order to defeat the will of congress.

By every conceivable form of expression the majority, in the Trans-Missouri and Joint Traffic cases, adjudged that the act of congress did not allow restraint of interstate trade to any extent or in any form, and three times it expressly rejected the theory, which had been persistently advanced, that the act should be construed as if it had in it the word "unreasonable" or "undue." But now the court, in accordance with what it denounces the "rule of reason," in effect inserts in the act the word "undue," which means the same as "unreasonable," and thereby makes congress say what it did not say, what, as I think, it plainly did not intend to say and what, since the passage of the act, it has explicitly refused to say. It has steadily refused to amend the act so as to tolerate a restraint of interstate commerce even where such restraint could be said to be "reasonable" or "due." In short, the court now, by judicial legislation, in effect amends an act of congress relating to a subject over which that department of the government has exclusive cognizance. I beg to say that, in my judgment, the majority, in the former cases, were gulled by the "rule of reason"; for it may be assumed that they knew quite as well as others what the rules of reason require when a court seeks to ascertain the will of congress as expressed in a statute. It is obvious, from the opinions in former cases, that the majority did not grope about in darkness, but in discharging the solemn duty put on them, they stood out in the full glare of the "light of reason" and held and said time and again that the court could not, consistently with the constitution, and would not, usurp the functions of congress by indulging in judicial legislation. They said in express words, in the former cases, in response to the earnest contentions of counsel, that to insert by construction the word "unreasonable" or "undue" in the act of congress would be judicial legislation. Let me say, also, that as we all agree that the combination in question was illegal under any construction of the anti-trust act, there was not the slightest necessity to enter upon extended argument to show that the act of congress was to be read as if it contained the word "unreasonable" or "undue." All that is said in the court's opinion in support of that view is, I say with respect, obiter dicta, pure and simple.

These views are fully discussed in the dissenting opinion delivered by me in the Standard Oil case. I will not repeat what is therein stated, but it may be well to cite an additional authority. In the trade mark case (100 U. S., 82), the court was asked to sustain the constitutionality of the statute there involved. But the statute could not have been sustained except by inserting in it words not put there by congress. Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the unanimous judgment of the court, said:

"If we should, in the case before us, undertake to make by judicial construction a law which congress did not make, it is quite probable we should do what, if the matter were now before that body, it would be unwilling to do."

This language was cited with approval in employers' liability cases (207 U. S., 463, 502). I refer to my dissenting opinion in the Standard Oil case as containing a full statement of my views of this particular question.

For the reasons stated, I concur in part with the court's opinion and dissent in part.

THE SHERMAN ANTITRUST LAW.

Passed by the 51st congress and approved July 2, 1890.

Section 1. Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations is hereby declared to be illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 2. Every person who shall monopolize or attempt to monopolize or combine or conspire with any person or persons to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 3. Every contract, combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce in any territory of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or in restraint of trade or commerce between any such territory and another, or between any such territory or territories and any state or states or the District of Columbia or with foreign nations, or between the District of Columbia and any state or states or foreign nations, is hereby declared illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 4. The several Circuit courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent or restrain violations of this act; and it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the attorney-general, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations. Such proceedings may be by way of petition setting forth the case and praying that such violation shall be enjoined or otherwise prohibited. When the parties complained of shall have been duly notified of such petition the court shall proceed, as soon as may be, to the hearing and determination of the case; and pending such petition and before final decree the court may at any time make such temporary restraining order or prohibition as shall be deemed just in the premises.

Sec. 5. Whenever it shall appear to the court before which any proceeding under section 4 of this act may be pending that the ends of justice require that other parties should be brought before the court, the court may cause them to be summoned, whether they reside in the district in which the court is held or not; and subpoenas to that end may be served in any district by the marshal thereof.

Sec. 6. Any property owned under any contract or by any combination or pursuant to any conspiracy (and being the subject thereof) mentioned in section 1 of this act and being in the course of transportation from one state to another or to a foreign country shall be forfeited to the United States and may be seized and condemned by like proceedings as those provided by law for the forfeiture, seizure and condemnation of property imported into the United States contrary to law.

Sec. 7. Any person who shall be injured in his business or property by any other person or corporation by reason of anything forbidden or declared unlawful by this act may sue therefor in any Circuit court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee.

Sec. 8. That the word "person" or "persons" wherever used in this act be deemed to include corporations and associations existing under or authorized by the laws of either the United States, the laws of any of the territories, the laws of any state or the laws of any foreign country.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST PACKING CORPORATIONS.

Feb. 18, 1903—Judge Grosscup issued injunction restraining packers from combining.

1904—Packers gave commissioner of corporations information about their business, an action on which later immunity claims were based. They alleged the government used the information as basis for indictments.

Feb. 20, 1905—Government began investigation of combine charges.

July 1, 1905—Indictment voted against four companies and sixteen packers.

Dec. 31, 1905—Cases were called for trial.

March 21, 1906—Packers are freed by "immunity bath" ruling of Judge Humphrey.

1908—Investigation taken up by federal grand jury and later discontinued.

1908—New investigation started.

June 23, 1910—Indictment declared invalid by Judge Landis and new grand jury investigation ordered.

July 14, 1910—New inquiry started.

Sept. 12, 1910—Ten packers indicted.

March 22, 1911—Judge Carpenter denies plea to quash indictments.

Jan. 25, 1910, Judge Kenesaw M. Landis of the United States District court in Chicago impaneled a grand jury to investigate the so-called "beef combine" among the meat packers. Witnesses were summoned and the inquiry continued until March 21, when an indictment was returned charging the National Packing company and ten of its subsidiary corporations with conspiracy in violation of the Sherman antitrust law. On the same date a bill in equity was filed by District Attorney Edwin W. Sims in the United States Circuit court, Chicago, against the National Packing company and subsidiary concerns and against its directors. It charged the packers with criminal conspiracy in fixing the prices of live stock and dressed meat and demanded the dissolution of the National Packing company and its allied concerns. It also asked that the individual defendants and their agents be prohibited from exercising any control over the corporations involved except such as might be necessary to wind up their affairs.

Upon a demurrer by counsel for the National Packing company and subsidiary concerns Judge Kenesaw M. Landis decided, June 23, that the indictment was invalid because it did not charge that during the last three years the defendants had been engaged in interstate commerce. He therefore sustained the demurrer, but at the same time ordered a special grand jury to make a new investigation. This was concluded Sept. 12, when the following ten packers were indicted as individuals: J. Ogden Armour, Louis F. Swift, Edward Morris, Edward Tilden, Arthur Meeker, Edward F. Swift, Charles H. Swift, Louis H. Heyman, Thomas J. Connors, Francis A. Fowler. Three indictments were returned against each defendant, reciting the violations of the Sherman antitrust law.

Counsel for the packers moved to quash the indictments in accordance with the immunity ruling of Judge Humphrey in 1906. This motion was overruled by Judge George A. Carpenter in the United States District court March 22, 1911, in a decision sustaining the indictments. On a demurrer that under the Sherman antitrust laws as they stand on the statute books the defendants could not be prosecuted criminally, Judge Carpenter decided May 11 that this contention was invalid. He therefore overruled the demurrer.

BUCK STOVE COMPANY BOYCOTT CASE.

In August, 1907, the Buck Stove and Range company of St. Louis brought proceedings in the Supreme court of the District of Columbia against the officers of the American Federation of Labor to enjoin them from conducting a boycott against the company by advertising that the concern was or the "U fair" and "We don't patronize" lists published in the federation's official organ. The injunction asked for was issued by Judge Gould Dec. 23, 1907. On the plea that the terms of the injunction were being violated proceedings for contempt of court were brought against Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; John Mitchell, vice-president, and Frank Morrison, secretary. Justice Wright of the Supreme court of the District of Columbia, before whom the case was tried, decided Dec. 23, 1908, that the defendants were guilty. Mr. Gompers was sentenced to one year's imprisonment and Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Morrison to nine months' and six months' imprisonment respectively. They were admitted to bail and the case was appealed to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia. This tribunal in a decision rendered Nov. 2, 1909, affirmed the decree of the Supreme court of the District of Columbia.

An appeal was then taken to the Supreme court of the United States, which on May 15, 1911, handed down a decision reversing the judgments of the Court of Appeals and the Supreme court of the District of Columbia and remanding the case with the direction that the contempt proceedings instituted by the Buck Stove and Range company be dismissed, but without prejudice to the power and right of the Supreme court of the District of Columbia to punish by a proper proceeding contempt, if any, committed against it. The basis of the opinion was that the proceedings brought against the labor officers was for civil contempt, which could be punished only by a fine. The sentence of the lower court to imprisonment was the penalty for criminal contempt, and therefore it was not a legal punishment in this case.

The Supreme court held that the published or spoken utterance of organized labor could be enjoined or attacked legally, because organized labor is a combination, and, as such, relinquishes the rights of individuals. It also established the fact that legal prosecution could be leveled not only at the union itself but at its officers as well.

SUITS AGAINST MEMBERS OF WIRE TRUST.

June 29, 1911, eighty-three men, alleged to be members of the so-called wire trust were indicted by a federal grand jury in New York, N. Y., on the charge of having violated the Sherman antitrust law. The indictments covered the whole field of the wire industry, including electrical cables, steel and copper wire and wire nails. July 5 the defendants pleaded not guilty, but July 25 thirty-seven of them withdrew their pleas of not guilty and accepted sentence. Judge R. W. Archbold of the United States District court imposed fines of from $1,000 to $1,700 and costs in each case as follows:

$1,700—F. W. Roebing.

$1,500—Frank J. Newberry, Joseph W. Marsh, William A. Conner, Phillip H. Smith.

Resolution declaring William Lorimer not duly elected United States senator from Illinois; defeated March 1. (See William Lorimer's Election as United States Senator.)

APPALACHIAN FORESTS.

The law which creates the southern Appalachian and White mountain forest reserves provides that the consent of congress shall be given to each of several states to enter into any agreement with any other state or states for the purpose of conserving the forests and water supply of the states entering into the agreement. The sum of $200,000 is appropriated to enable the secretary of agriculture to co-operate with any state or group of states, when requested to do so, in the protection from fire of the forested watersheds of navigable streams.

There is appropriated for the fiscal year 1910 the sum of $1,000,000, and for each fiscal year thereafter until June 30, 1915, a sum not to exceed $2,000,000 for use in the examination, survey and acquirement of lands located on the headwaters of navigable waters. A commission to be known as the national forest reservation commission, consisting of the secretary of war, the secretary of the interior, the secretary of agriculture, two members of the senate and two members of the house, is created and authorized to pass upon such lands as may be recommended for purchase by the secretary of agriculture, after they have been examined by the geological survey and report made that the control of such lands will promote or protect the navigation of streams on whose watersheds they lie. The secretary of agriculture is authorized to purchase in the name of United States such lands as have been approved for purchase by the national forest reservation commission. (Approved March 1, 1911.)

INSPECTION OF LOCOMOTIVE BOILERS.

After July 1, 1911, it shall be unlawful for any railroad engaged in interstate commerce to use any locomotive that is not in proper and safe condition or that has not been inspected in accordance with the terms of the act and found able to stand the tests prescribed. There shall be appointed by the president a chief inspector and two assistant chief inspectors of locomotive boilers, who shall have general superintendence of the district inspectors. The chief inspector is to have a salary of $4,000 a year and his assistants $3,000 a year each, with traveling expenses. The country is to be divided into fifty inspection districts, with one inspector for each district. Each district inspector is to receive $1,800 a year with traveling expenses and, in addition, office and other expenses not to exceed $600 a year. The district inspectors are to be chosen under civil service rules and they are to see that all locomotives in the several districts are examined and kept in repair by the companies concerned. They are themselves to make inspections from time to time, though not at specified intervals, and accidents due to defective locomotive boilers are to be investigated. The locomotive boiler inspection service is subject to the orders and instructions of the interstate commerce commission, to which the chief inspector must make an annual report. Each violation of the act by a railroad is punishable by a fine of $100. (Approved Feb. 17, 1911.)

THE JUDICIAL CODE.

The "act to codify, revise and amend the laws relating to the judiciary" consists of fourteen chapters and 301 sections. The provisions of the act, so far as they are the same as existing statutes, are to be construed as continuations thereof and not as new enactments, and there is to be no implication of change of intent by reason of a change of words unless such change of intent is clearly manifest. The most important change is that made by sections 289, 290, 291 and 292, chapter 13. These abolish the Circuit courts and proceedings pending therein shall be transferred to the District courts, which will dispose of them. The Circuit court judges are not legislated out of office, but are left free to confine their work chiefly to the Circuit Court of Appeals. In case a District judge finds more work imposed upon him at any time than he can perform, a Circuit court judge may be designated to assist him. The code prescribes the organization, jurisdiction and methods of procedure of the District courts, the Circuit Court of Appeals, the Court of Claims, the Court of Customs Appeals, the Commerce court and the Supreme court. The act goes into effect Jan. 1, 1912. (Approved March 3, 1911.)

INCREASE OF THE NAVY.

For the purpose of further increasing the naval establishment of the United States, the president is authorized to have constructed two first class battle ships, each carrying as heavy armor and powerful armament as any vessel of its class, to have the highest practicable speed and the greatest practicable radius of action and to cost, exclusive of armor and armament, not to exceed $6,000,000 each. Two fleet colliers of fourteen knots trial speed when carrying not less than 12,500 tons of cargo and bunker coal to cost not to exceed $1,600,000 each. Eight torpedo boat destroyers, to have the highest practicable speed and to cost not to exceed $825,000 each. Four submarine torpedo boats, in an amount not exceeding in the aggregate $2,000,000, and the sum of $800,600 is appropriated for that purpose. One submarine tender, to cost not to exceed $500,000, and the sum of $250,000 is appropriated toward that purpose. One gunboat, to cost, exclusive of armament and armor, not to exceed $500,000. One river gunboat to cost, exclusive of armor and armament, not to exceed $215,000. Two seagoing tugs to cost not to exceed $215,000 each. (From naval appropriation bill, approved March 4, 1911.)

NATIONAL DEFENSE SECRETS.

Whoever, for the purpose of obtaining information respecting the national defense, to which he is not lawfully entitled, goes upon any vessel or enters any navy yard, naval station, fort, battery, torpedo station, arsenal, camp, factory, building, office or other place connected with the national defense, belonging to or in possession of the United States, whether situated within the United States or in any place noncontiguous to but under the jurisdiction thereof; or whoever, when lawfully or unlawfully upon any vessel, or in or near any such place, without proper authority, makes or attempts to make sketches or photographs or obtain plans, models or documents connected with the national defense; or whoever receives or agrees to receive such sketches, plans or other information; or whoever having possession of such material communicates or attempts to communicate it to any person not entitled to receive it, shall be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned not to exceed one year, or both. Whoever communicates any such material or information to any foreign government shall be imprisoned not more than ten years. (Approved March 3, 1911.)

POSTAGE ON MAGAZINES.

The president is to appoint three persons, one of whom shall be a judge of the Supreme court of the United States and the other two of whom shall hold no office, and no one of whom shall be connected with the postoffice department or have any interest in any business directly or indirectly affected by the publishing of magazines or newspapers using the mails, to examine the reports of the postoffice department, and any of its officers or employees, and the existing evidence taken in respect to the cost to the government of the transportation and handling of all classes of second class mail matter which may be submitted to them, and such evidence as may be presented by persons having an interest in the rates to be fixed for second class matter, to make a finding of what the cost of transporting and handling different classes of such mail matter is to the government and what in their judgment should be the rate for the different classes of second class postal matter and to make a report of their proceedings and findings before Dec. 1, to the president for transmission to congress. (Approved March 4, 1911.)

DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR BUILDINGS.

The secretary of state is authorized to acquire in foreign countries such sites and buildings as may be appropriated for by congress for the use of the diplomatic and consular establishments of the United States, and to alter, repair and furnish such buildings; suitable buildings for this purpose to be either purchased or erected, as may seem best to the secretary of state. All buildings so acquired shall be used both as the residences of diplomatic officials and for the offices of the diplomatic establishment.

Not more than $500,000 is to be expended in any fiscal year. The limit of cost for the acquisition of sites and buildings shall not exceed $150,000 at any one place. (Approved Feb. 17, 1911.)

FOR HONOR OF UNITED STATES UNIFORM.

Hereafter no proprietor, manager or employe of a theater or other public place of entertainment or amusement in the district of Columbia, or in any territory, the district of Alaska or insular possession of the United States, shall make or cause to be made any discrimination against any person lawfully wearing the uniform of the army, navy, revenue cutter service or marine corps of the United States because of that uniform and any person making such discrimination shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not exceeding $500. (Approved March 1, 1911.)

PANAMA CANAL FORTIFICATIONS.

For the construction of seacoast batteries on the Panama canal zone the sum of $2,000,000 is appropriated. For the purchase, manufacture and test of seacoast cannon for coast defense, including their carriages, sights, implements, equipments and the machinery necessary for the manufacture at the arsenals, to cost ultimately not to exceed $1,866,000, the sum of $1,000,000 is appropriated, the same to be immediately available and to continue available until expended. (From sundry civil appropriation bill, approved March 4, 1911.)

PROMOTION OF ROBERT E. PEARY.

The president of the United States is authorized to place Civil Engineer Robert E. Peary, United States navy, on the retired list of the corps of civil engineers with the rank of rear-admiral, to date from April 6, 1909, with the highest retired pay of that grade under existing law.

The thanks of congress are tendered to Robert E. Peary, United States navy, for his arctic explorations resulting in reaching the north pole. (Approved March 4, 1911.)

RELIEF FOR CHINA.

The secretary of war is authorized to transport, under the supervision of the American National Red Cross society, the supplies donated by the people of the United States for the relief of the sufferers from famine in China, and for this purpose may order one of the army transports to make a trip from Seattle, Wash., to China, provided the total expense is not in excess of $50,000. (Approved Feb. 18, 1911.)

TERMS OF PHILIPPINE OFFICIALS.

After 1912 the members of the Philippine assembly shall be elected and hold office for four years. At the regular session beginning in 1912, and quadrennially thereafter, the Philippine legislature shall in the manner now provided by law elect two resident commissioners to the United States, each of whom shall hold office for four years, beginning March 4 next after his election. (Approved Feb. 15, 1911.)

MONUMENTS.

LINCOLN MONUMENT IN WASHINGTON.

William H. Taft, Shelby M. Cullom, Joseph G. Cannon, George Peabody Wetmore, Samuel Walker McCall, Hernando D. Money and Champ Clark are created a commission to be known as the Lincoln memorial commission, to procure and determine upon a location, plan and design for a monument or memorial in the city of Washington, D. C., to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, subject to the approval of congress. The commission is authorized to employ the services of such artists, sculptors, architects and others as it shall determine to be necessary, and to avail itself of the services or advice of the commission of fine arts, created by the act approved May 17, 1910.

The construction of the monument or memorial shall be entered upon as speedily as practicable after the plan and design are determined upon and approved by congress, and shall be pushed to completion under the direction of the commission and the supervision of the secretary of war, under a contract which the secretary of war is authorized to make in a total sum not exceeding $2,000,000. The sum of $50,000 is appropriated for the expenses of the commission. (Approved Feb. 9, 1911.)

CHAMPLAIN MONUMENT.

The commissions which were appointed by Vermont and New York to have charge of the recent celebration commemorating the 300th anniversary of the discovery of Lake Champlain by Samuel de Champlain, and which have been authorized by the states named to build a suitable memorial of the discovery, are granted permission to erect such memorial upon the Crown Point lighthouse reservation, New York, after the plans and specifications have been approved by the secretary of commerce and labor. Upon the completion of the memorial the secretary of commerce and labor is authorized to accept the same, free of expense, for and in behalf of the United States. Upon the acceptance of the structure it shall be maintained by the United States as an aid to navigation. (Approved Feb. 20, 1911.)

GULFORD BATTLE MONUMENT.

The sum of $30,000 is appropriated for the erection of a monument on the battle field of Guilford Court House, in Guilford county, North Carolina, to commemorate the great victory there on March 15, 1781, by the American forces, commanded by Maj.-Gen. Nathanael Greene, and in memory of Maj.-Gen. Nathanael Greene and the officers and soldiers of the continental army who participated in the battle. The money is to be expended under the direction of the secretary of war, by whom the design for the monument must be approved. The site is to be donated to the government free of cost and the monument when erected is to be left in the care and keeping of the Guilford Battle Ground company. (Approved Feb. 13, 1911.)

PERRY MEMORIAL.

There is appropriated the sum of $250,000 toward the erection of a memorial of the victory of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry on Lake Erie and in aid of the Perry's victory centennial celebration, to be held in 1913 on Put-In-Bay island, Lake Erie, Ohio, the money to be disbursed by the Perry's victory centennial commission. The president is authorized to appoint three commissioners, one from the army and one from the navy, to represent the national government in the celebration and in the erection of the Perry memorial. (Approved March 3, 1911.)

SCREVEN-STEWART MONUMENT.

Be it enacted, etc., that a joint monument be erected in the old cemetery at Midway, Liberty county, Georgia, in memory of the lives and public services of Gen. James Screven and Gen. Daniel Stewart. That for the purpose the sum of $10,000, or so much of it as may be necessary, is authorized to be expended under the direction of the secretary of war; and the design may be made by the Midway society, which is in charge of the cemetery, provided the design is approved by the secretary of war. (Approved March 4, 1911.)

GERMANTOWN MONUMENT.

The expenditure of the sum of $25,000 is authorized to aid in the erection of a monument at Germantown, Pa., in commemoration of the founding of the first permanent German settlement in America. No part of the sum is to be expended until there shall have been raised for the same purpose an additional sum of $25,000. The design of the monument must be approved by the secretary of war, the governor of Pennsylvania and the president of the National German-American alliance. (Approved March 4, 1911.)

TYLER MONUMENT.

The secretary of war is authorized and directed to cause a suitable monument to be erected over the grave of the late John Tyler, former president of the United States, in Hollywood cemetery, Richmond, Va., not to exceed in cost the sum of $10,000. (Approved March 4, 1911.)

CANADIAN RECIPROCAL AGREEMENT.

Laid before 61st congress by President Taft, Jan. 26, 1911.

McCall reciprocity bill passed by house Feb. 14, 1911; no vote reached in senate; 61st congress ended March 4.

Special session of 621 congress called by President Taft March 4; session begins April 4.

Underwood reciprocity bill passed by house April 21; passed by senate July 22; signed by President Taft July 26; rejected by voters of Canada at parliamentary elections Sept. 21.

Jan. 26, 1911, President William H. Taft sent to congress a reciprocity agreement with Canada with a message urging its speedy enactment into law. It was agreed by Ministers W. S. Fielding and William Paterson, representing Canada, and Secretary of State P. C. Knox, representing the United States, that the desired tariff changes should not take the formal shape of a treaty, but that the governments of the two countries should use their utmost endeavors to bring about such changes by concurrent legislation in Washington and Ottawa. In his message to congress President Taft referred to the friendly relations that have always existed between the United States and Canada and to the identity of interest of the two countries linked together by race, language, political institutions and geographical proximity.

"I do not wish," he wrote, "to hold out the prospect that the unrestricted interchange of food products will greatly and at once reduce their cost to the people of this country. Moreover, the present small amount of Canadian surplus for export as compared with that of our own production and consumption would make the reduction gradual. Excluding the element of transportation the price of staple food products, especially of cereals, is much the same the world over, and the recent increase in price has been the result of a world wide cause. But a source of supply as near as Canada would certainly help to prevent speculative fluctuations, would steady local price movements and would postpone the effect of a further world increase in the price of leading commodities entering into the cost of living, if that be inevitable.

"My purpose in making a reciprocal trade agreement with Canada has been not only to obtain one which would be mutually advantageous to both countries, but one which also would be truly national in its scope as applied to our own country and would be of benefit to all sections.

"This trade agreement if entered into, will cement the friendly relations with the dominion which have resulted from the satisfactory settlement of the controversies that have lasted for a century, and further promote good feeling between kindred peoples. It will extend the market for numerous products of the United States among the inhabitants of a prosperous neighboring country with an increasing population and an increasing purchasing power. It will deepen and widen the sources of the food supply in contiguous territory, and will facilitate the movement and distribution of these foodstuffs. The geographical proximity, the closer relation of blood, common sympathies and identical moral and social ideas furnish very real and striking reasons why this agreement ought to be viewed from a high plane."

EXTRA SESSION CALLED.

The bill (McCall) carrying the agreement into effect was passed by the house Feb. 14, by a vote of 221 to 92, but the senate failed to take action and on the day of adjournment, March 4, President Taft issued a proclamation calling for an extra session of the 62d congress to begin April 4. The two houses met on the day named and organized, and on the following day the president transmitted to them a message, reiterating his arguments in favor of the proposed agreement.

April 12 O. W. Underwood of Alabama introduced the reciprocity bill in the house, the text being identical with that of the McCall bill passed by the 61st congress. The measure was debated and April 21 was passed by a vote of 267 yeas to 89 nays. The negative vote was as follows.

ADVERSE ACTION BY CANADA.

Strong opposition to the reciprocity agreement developed in the Canadian parliament, the conservative minority resorting to a filibuster to defeat the measure. July 29, at the request of Premier Laurier, parliament was dissolved and orders for the election of new members Sept. 21 issued. The campaign was bitterly fought and resulted in the overthrow of the liberal Laurier government and the return of an overwhelming majority of conservative members pledged to vote against reciprocity. The measure consequently failed. The assertion that it would eventually lead to the annexation of Canada by the United States was one of the most effective arguments used against the agreement.

THE RECIPROcity ACT.

The reciprocity measure as it passed congress was entitled "An act to promote reciprocal trade relations with the dominion of Canada and for other purposes." It provided for a substantial reduction of duties on many articles produced in Canada and the United States and the admission, exempt from duty, of the following articles:

Live animals: Cattle, horses and mules, swine, sheep, lambs and all other live animals.
Poultry, dead or alive.
Wheat, rye, oats, barley and buckwheat, dried peas and beans, edible.
Corn, sweet corn or maize.
Hay, straw and cowpeas.
Fresh vegetables: Potatoes, sweet potatoes, yams, turnips, onions, cabbages and all other vegetables in their natural state.
Fresh fruits: Apples, pears, peaches, grapes, berries and all other edible fruits in their natural state, except lemons, oranges, limes, grapefruit, shaddock, pomelos and pineapples.

Dried fruits: Apples, peaches, pears and apricots, dried, desiccated or evaporated.

Dairy products: Butter, cheese and fresh milk and cream. Provided, that cans actually used in the transportation of milk or cream may be passed back and forth between the two countries free of duty, under such regulations as the respective governments may prescribe.
Eggs of barnyard fowl, in the shell.
Honey.

Cottonseed oil.
Seeds: Flaxseed or luseed, cotton seed and other oil seeds; grass seed, including timothy and clover seed; garden, field and other seed not herein otherwise provided for, when in packages weighing over one pound each (not including flower seeds).
Fish of all kinds, fresh, frozen, packed in ice, salted or preserved in any form, except sardines and other fish preserved in oil; and shellfish of all kinds, including oysters, lobsters and clams in any state, fresh or packed, and coverings of the foregoing.

Seal, herring, whale and other fish oil, including cod oil. Provided, that fish oil, whale oil, seal oil and fish of all kinds, being the product of fisheries carried on by the fishermen of the United States, shall be admitted into Canada as the product of the United States, and, similarly, that fish oil, whale oil, seal oil and fish of all kinds, being the product of fisheries carried on by the fishermen of Canada, shall be admitted into the United States as the product of Canada.

Salt.

Mineral water, natural, not in bottles or jugs.

Timber, hewn, sided or squared otherwise than by sawing, and round timber used for spars or in building wharves.

Sawn boards, planks, deals and other lumber, not further manufactured than sawed.

String posts, railroad ties and telephone, trolley, electric light and telegraph poles of cedar or other woods.

Wooden staves of all kinds, not further manufactured than listed or jointed, and stave bolts.

PUBLICITY OF CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS.

Sections 5, 6 and 8 of "An act providing for publicity of contributions made for the purpose of influencing elections at which representatives in congress are elected," approved June 25, 1910 [See The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book for 1911, page 45] are amended substantially as follows:

Section 5. The treasurer of every such political committee shall, not more than fifteen days and not less than ten days next before an election at which representatives in congress are to be elected in two or more states, file in the office of the clerk of the house of representatives in Washington, D. C., an itemized detailed statement as required in section 6 of the act. Supplemental statements are to be filed on each sixth day thereafter until the election containing additional items. A final statement is to be filed within thirty days after the election. The statements are to be signed and sworn to by the treasurer. They shall be preserved by the clerk of the house for fifteen months as a part of the public records of his office and shall be open to public inspection.

Sec. 6 The statements required in section 5 shall specify:

1. The name and address of each person, firm, association or committee who or which has contributed, promised, loaned or advanced to such political committee or any officer, member or agent thereof, either in one or more items, money or its equivalent of the aggregate amount of $100 or more and the amount contributed by each.

2. The aggregate sum contributed in sums of less than $100.

3. The total sum of all contributions.

4. The name and address of each person, firm, association or committee to whom such political committee has distributed, loaned or advanced any sum of money amounting to $10 or more, stating the amount given or promised to each.

5. The aggregate sum distributed, advanced or promised by such committee where the amount in one or more items is less than $10.

6. The total sum disbursed or promised by such political committee.

Sec. 8. Any person may in connection with such election pay from his private funds all necessary personal expenses for his traveling, for stationery and postage and for telegraph and telephone service without being subject to the provisions of this act. The word "candidate" as used in this section shall include all persons whose names are presented for nomination for representative in congress at any primary election or nominating convention, or for indorsement or election at any general or special election, whether or not such persons are actually nominated, indorsed or elected.

Every person who shall be a candidate for nomination at any primary election or nominating convention, or for election at any general or special election, as representative in the congress of the United States, shall, not less than ten nor more than fifteen days before the day for holding such primary election or nominating convention, and not less than ten nor more than fifteen days before the day of the general or special election at which candidates for representatives are to be elected, file with the clerk of the house of representatives at Washington, D. C., a full, correct and itemized statement of all moneys and things of value received by him or by any one for him with his knowledge and consent, from any source, in aid or support of his candidacy, together with the names of all those who have furnished the same in whole or in part, and such statement shall contain a true and itemized account of all moneys and things of value given, contributed, expended, used or promised by such candidate or by his agent, representative or other person for and in his behalf with his knowledge and consent, together with the names of all those to whom any and all such gifts, contributions, payments or promises were made for the purpose of procuring his nomination or election.

Every candidate for nomination at any primary election or nominating convention, or for indorsement at any general or special election, or election by the legislature of any state, as senator in the congress of the United States, is subject to all the requirements specified in the preceding paragraph.

Every such candidate for nomination shall within thirty days after such primary, convention or election file with the clerk of the house of representatives or with the secretary of the senate, as the case may be, a full, correct and itemized statement of all moneys and things of value received by him or by any one for him with his knowledge and consent, from any source, in aid or support of his candidacy, together with the names of all those who have furnished the same in whole or in part, and such statement shall contain a true and itemized account of all moneys and things of value given, contributed, expended, used or promised by such candidate or by his agent, representative or other person for and in his behalf with his knowledge and consent, up to, on and after the day of such primary election, convention, general or special election, or election by the legislature, together with the names of all those to whom any and all such gifts, contributions, payments or promises were made, for the purpose of securing his nomination, indorsement or election.

Every such candidate shall include therein a statement of every promise or pledge made by him or by any one for him with his knowledge and consent or to whom he has given authority to make such promise or pledge, before the completion of any such primary election, etc., relative to the appointment or recommendation for appointment of any person to any position of trust, honor or profit, either in the county, state or nation or any political subdivision thereof, or in any private or corporate employment, for the purpose of securing the support of such person or of any person in his candidacy, and if any such promise or pledge shall have been made the name or names, the address or addresses, and the occupation or occupations, of the person or persons to whom such promise or pledge shall have been made, shall be stated, together with a description of the position relating to which such promise or pledge has been made. In the event that no such promise or pledge has been made by such candidate, that fact shall be distinctly stated.

No candidate for representative in congress or for senator of the United States shall promise any office or position to any person, or to use his influence or to give his support to any person for any office or position for the purpose of procuring the support of such person, or of any person, in his candidacy; nor shall any candidate for senator of the United States give, contribute, expend, use or promise any money or thing of value to assist in procuring the nomination or election of any particular candidate for the legislature of the state in which he resides, but such candidate may, within the limitations and restrictions and subject to the requirements of this act, contribute to political committees having charge of the disbursement of campaign funds.

No candidate for representative in congress or for senator of the United States shall give, contribute, expend, use or promise, or cause to be given, contributed, expended, used or promised in procuring his nomination and election any sum in the aggregate in excess of the amount which he may lawfully give, contribute, expend or promise under the laws of the state in which he resides: Provided, that no candidate for representative in congress shall give, contribute, expend, use or promise any sum, in the aggregate, exceeding $5,000 in any campaign for his nomination and election, and no candidate for senator of the United States shall give, contribute, expend, use or promise any sum in the aggregate, exceeding $10,000 in any campaign for his nomination and election: Provided further, that money expended by any such candidate to meet and discharge any assessment, fee or charge made or levied upon candidates by the laws of the state in which he resides or for his necessary personal expenses, incurred for himself alone, for travel and subsistence, stationery and postage, writing or printing (other than in newspapers), and distributing letters, circulars and posters, and for telegraph and telephone service, shall not be regarded as an expenditure within the meaning of this section, and shall not be considered any part of the sum herein fixed as the limit of expense and need not be shown in the statements herein required to be filed.

The statements herein required to be made and filed before the general election, or the election by the legislature at which such candidate seeks election, need not contain items of which publicity is given in a previous statement, but the statement required to be made and filed at said general election or election by the legislature shall, in addition to an itemized statement of all expenses not theretofore given publicity, contain a summary of all preceding statements.

Any person, not then a candidate for senator of the United States, who shall have given, contributed, expended, used or promised any money or thing of value to aid or assist in the nomination or election of any particular member of the legislature of the state in which he resides, shall, if he thereafter becomes a candidate for such office, or if he shall thereafter be elected to such office without becoming a candidate therefor, comply with all of the provisions of this section relating to candidates for such office, so far as the same may be applicable, and the statements herein required to be made, verified and filed after such election shall contain a full, true and itemized account of each and every gift, contribution, expenditure and promise whenever made, in any wise relating to the nomination or election of members of the legislature of said state, or in any wise connected with or pertaining to his nomination and election of which publicity is not given in a previous statement.

Every statement herein required shall be verified by the oath or affirmation of the candidate, taken before an officer authorized to administer oaths under the laws of the state in which he is a candidate, and shall be sworn to or affirmed by the candidate in the district in which he is a candidate for representative, or the state in which he is a candidate for senator in the congress of the United States: Provided, that if at the time of such primary election, nominating convention, general or special election or election by the state legislature said candidate shall be in attendance upon either house of congress as a member thereof, he may at his election verify such statements before any officer authorized to administer oaths in the District of Columbia: Provided further, that the depositing of any such statement in a regular postoffice, directed to the clerk of the house of representatives or to the secretary of the senate, as the case may be, duly stamped and registered within the time required herein shall be deemed a sufficient filing of any such statement under any of the provisions of this act.

This act shall not be construed to annul or vitiate the laws of any state not directly in conflict herewith relating to the nomination or election of candidates for the offices herein named or to exempt any such candidate from complying with such state laws. (Approved Aug. 19, 1911.)

APPORTIONMENT OF REPRESENTATIVES.

After March 3, 1913, the house of representatives shall be composed of 432 members, to be apportioned among the several states as follows:

Alabama	10	Nebraska	6
Arkansas	7	Nevada	1
California	11	New Hampshire	3
Colorado	4	New Jersey	12
Connecticut	5	New York	43
Delaware	4	North Carolina	10
Florida	4	North Dakota	3
Georgia	12	Ohio	22
Idaho	2	Oklahoma	8
Illinois	27	Oregon	3
Indiana	13	Pennsylvania	36
Iowa	11	Rhode Island	3
Kansas	8	South Carolina	7
Kentucky	11	South Dakota	3
Louisiana	8	Tennessee	10
Maine	4	Texas	18
Maryland	6	Utah	2
Massachusetts	16	Vermont	2
Michigan	13	Virginia	10
Minnesota	10	Washington	5
Mississippi	9	West Virginia	6
Missouri	16	Wisconsin	11
Montana	2	Wyoming	1

Sec. 2. That if the territories of Arizona and New Mexico shall become states in the union before the apportionment of representatives under the next decennial census they shall have one representative each, and if one of such territories shall so become a state, such state shall have one representative, and such representative or representatives shall be in addition to the number of laws as provided in section one of this act, and all laws and parts of laws in conflict with this section are to that extent hereby repealed. [Both territories have been admitted.]

Sec. 3. That in each state entitled under this apportionment to more than one representative, the representatives to the 63d and each subsequent congress shall be elected by districts composed of contiguous and compact territory and containing as nearly as practicable an equal number of inhabitants. The said districts shall be equal to the number of representatives to which such state may be entitled in congress, no district electing more than one representative.

Sec. 4. That in case of an increase in the number of representatives in any state under this apportionment, such additional representative or representatives shall be elected by the state at large and the other representatives by the districts now prescribed by law until such state shall be redistricted in the manner provided by the laws thereof and in accordance with the rules enumerated in section 3 of this act, and if there be no change in the number of representatives from a state, the representatives thereof shall be elected from the districts now prescribed by law until such state shall be redistricted as herein prescribed.

Sec. 5. That candidates for representative or representative shall be elected at large in any state shall be nominated in the same manner as candidates for governor, unless otherwise provided by the laws of the state. (Approved Aug. 8, 1911.)

WOOL TARIFF BILL.

The bill to reduce the duties on wool and manufactures of wool as fixed by the Payne-Aldrich act in schedule K was passed by the house June 20, 1911, by a vote of 221 to 100. Only one democrat, William B. Franke of Ohio, voted against it, while twenty-four republicans voted for it. There were: Anthony, Kas. Kent, Cal. Nelson, Wis. Anderson, Minn. LaFollette, Wash. Norris, Neb. Campbell, Kas. Lenroot, Wis. Sloan, Neb. Davis, Minn. Lindbergh, Minn. Steenerson, Minn. French, Idaho. Madson, Kas. Stephens, Cal. Haugen, Iowa. Miller, Minn. Volstead, Minn. Helgeson, N. D. Morse, Wis. Woods, Iowa. Jackson, Kas. Murdock, Kas. Young, Kas.

The ad valorem duties under the bill as it passed the house as compared with the existing duties are according to figures presented by Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, chairman of the ways and means committee, as follows:

Raw wool, proposed duty, 20 per cent; existing duty, 44.51 per cent.

Noils, waste, shoddies, etc., proposed duty, 20 per cent; existing duty, 33.96 per cent.

Combed wool or tops, proposed duty, 25 per cent; existing duty, 105.19 per cent.

Yarns made wholly or in part of wool, proposed duty, 30 per cent; existing duty, 82.38 per cent.

Cloths, knit fabrics and all manufactures of wool, proposed duty, 40 per cent; existing duty, 97.11 per cent.

Blankets and flannels, proposed duty, 30 per cent when valued at less than 50 cents a pound, 45 per cent when valued at more than 50 cents a pound; existing duty, 95.57 per cent.

Women's and children's dress goods and similar goods, proposed duty, 45 per cent; existing duty, 102.85 per cent.

Ready-made clothing and articles of wearing apparel, proposed duty, 45 per cent; existing duty, 51.31 per cent.

Braids, ribbons, insertions, laces, embroideries, nettings and like articles, wholly or in part made of wool, proposed duty, 35 per cent; existing duty, 87.06 per cent.

Axminster, Aubusson, moquette or chenille carpets, proposed duty 40 per cent; existing duty, 62.09 per cent.

Saxony, Wilton and velvet carpet, proposed duty 35 per cent; existing duty, 70.14 per cent.

Brussels carpets, proposed duty, 30 per cent; existing duty, 76.29 per cent.

Velvet tapestry carpets, printed on the warp or otherwise, proposed duty, 35 per cent; existing duty, 62.46 per cent.

Tapestry Brussels carpets, printed on the warp or otherwise, proposed duty, 30 per cent; existing duty, 64.41 per cent.

Treble Ingrain, three ply and all chain Venetian carpets, proposed duty, 30 per cent; existing duty, 64.34 per cent.

Wool Dutch and two ply ingrain carpets, proposed duty, 25 per cent; existing duty, 62.50 per cent.

Oriental rugs, proposed duty, 50 per cent; existing duty, 60.57 per cent.

Druggets and dockings, printed or colored, proposed duty, 25 per cent; existing duty, 66.28 per cent.

Carpets, not otherwise provided for, of wool, flax or cotton, and mats, matting and rugs of cotton, proposed duty, 25 per cent; existing duty, 49.98 per cent.

When the bill came to a vote in the senate July 27, Mr. LaFollette of Wisconsin offered a substitute proposing an average of 52 per cent. This was defeated by a vote of 44 yeas to 36 yeas. Thereupon he offered another amendment in the nature of a substitute reducing the basic duty on wool from 40 per cent to 35 per cent, with the other duties scaled accordingly. This was passed by a vote of 48 yeas to 32 yeas. The duties provided were as follows.

On wools of the first class, 35 per cent ad valorem.

On wools of the second class, 10 per cent ad valorem.

On wools on the skin: First class, 30 per cent ad valorem; second class, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Top waste, slubbing, roving, ring and garnetted waste, 30 per cent ad valorem.

Shoddy, noils, wool extract, yarn waste, thread waste, etc., 25 per cent ad valorem.

Woolen rags, mungo and flocks, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Combed wool or tops, etc., 40 per cent ad valorem.

Woolen yarns, 45 per cent ad valorem.

Woolen cloths, knit fabrics, blankets, flannels, women's and children's dress goods, wearing apparel of all kinds made of wool or chiefly of wool, 55 per cent ad valorem.

Carpets of wool or chiefly of wool, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Manufactures of the hair of the camel, goat, alpaca and like animals, 30 per cent ad valorem.

The following republican senators voted for the LaFollette substitute:

Rourne, Ore. Cummins, Iowa. Works, Cal.
Bristow, Kas. Gronaa, N. D. McCumber,* N. D.
Brown, Neb. Kenyon, Iowa. Nelson,* Minn.
Clapp, Minn. LaFollette, Wis. Total—13.
Crawford, S. D. Poindexter, Wash. *Regulars.

The bill went to a conference committee, which reached an agreement in the form of a substitute for both the house bill and the LaFollette amendment. The salient points of agreement recommended as to the differences between the two houses were as follows:

The rate of duty recommended on raw wool was 29 per cent ad valorem instead of 20 per cent ad valorem, as proposed in the house bill, and the varying rates, ranging from 10 to 35 per cent ad valorem, on the three classifications of wool proposed by the senate.

The rate on wool wastes and rags agreed upon was 29 per cent ad valorem instead of 20 per cent ad valorem as proposed in the house bill and the rates of 25 or 30 per cent ad valorem as proposed in the senate amendment.

The duty on combed wool or tops agreed upon was 32 per cent ad valorem instead of 25 per cent ad valorem as proposed in the house bill and 40 per cent ad valorem as proposed by the senate.

The duty agreed upon for yarns was 35 per cent ad valorem instead of 30 per cent ad valorem as proposed by the house bill and 45 per cent ad valorem as proposed in the senate amendment.

The rate of duty on blankets and flannels for underwear was fixed at 33 per cent ad valorem instead of 30 per cent ad valorem in the house bill for blankets and the cheaper flannels.

The duty agreed upon for cloths, ready-made clothing, knit fabrics, flannels not for underwear, women's dress goods, webbing, gorings, etc., and articles not specially provided for was 49 per cent ad valorem instead of the varying rates in the house bill, ranging from 35 to 50 per cent ad valorem and 55 per cent ad valorem as proposed by the senate.

Three classifications were agreed upon for carpets, ranging in duty from 30 to 50 per cent ad valorem instead of the varying classifications in the house bill carrying duties from 25 to 50 per cent ad va-item and 35 per cent ad valorem as proposed by the senate amendment.

The conference report was adopted by the house Aug. 14 by a vote of 205 yeas to 90 nays and by the senate Aug. 15 by a vote of 38 yeas to 28 nays. Aug. 17 the president returned the bill with a veto message in which he called attention to the fact that he had been elected upon a platform which declared for the maintenance of a protective tariff by "the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, with a reasonable profit to American manufacturers." The great difficulty was, however, that there were no means available by which that difference could be ascertained. The American public had become deeply impressed with the conviction that in order to secure a proper revision of the tariff in the future, exact information as to the effect of the new rates must be had, and that the evil of logrolling or compromise could be avoided and the interests of the consuming public guarded only by revising the tariff one schedule at a time. To help these reforms he had taken advantage of a clause in the Payne tariff act enabling him to create a tariff board which he had directed to secure information as to the comparative cost of production of dutiable articles under the tariff at home and abroad. This board had been directed to report on the wool schedule by Dec. 1, 1911.

"If ever there was a schedule that needed consideration and investigation and elaborate explanation by experts before its amendment," continued the president in his message, "it is schedule K [wool schedule]. There is a widespread belief that many rates in the present schedule are too high and are in excess of any needed protection for the wool grower or manufacturer. I share this belief and have so stated in several public addresses. But I have no sufficient data upon which I can judge how schedule K ought to be amended or how its rates ought to be reduced in order that the new bill shall furnish the proper measure of protection and no more. Nor have I sources of information which satisfy me that the bill presented to me for signature will accomplish this result. * * *

"Without any investigation of which the details are available, an avowed tariff-for-revenue and anti-protection bill is by compromise blended with a professed protection bill. Rates between those of the two bills are adopted and passed, except that, in some important instances, rates are fixed in the compromise at a figure higher and in others at a figure lower, than were originally fixed in either house. The principle fixed in adjusting the amendments of existing law is, therefore, not clear and the effect of the bill is most uncertain. * * *

"More than 1,000,000 of our countrymen are engaged in the production of wool and the manufacture of woollens; more than a billion of the country's capital is invested in the industry. Large communities are almost wholly dependent upon the prosperity of the wool grower and the woolen manufacturer. Moderately estimated 5,000,000 of the American people will be injuriously affected by any ill-advised impairment of the wool and woollen industries. Certainly we should proceed prudently in dealing with them upon the basis of ascertained facts rather than hastily and without knowledge to make a reduction of the tariff to satisfy a popular desire, which I fully recognize. For reduction of duties believed to be excessive, I have no doubt that if I were to sign this bill, I would receive the approval of very many persons who favor a reduction of duties in order to reduce the cost of living whatever the effect on our protected industries and who fail to realize the disaster to business generally and to the people at large which may come from a radical disturbance of that part of business dependent for its life on the continuance of a protective tariff. If I fail to guard as far as I can the industries of the country to the extent of giving them the benefit of a living measure of protection and business disaster ensues, I shall not be discharging my duty. If I fail to recommend the reduction of excessive duties to this extent, I shall fail in my duty to the consuming public."

The house made an effort Aug. 18 to pass the wool bill over the president's veto, but it failed, the vote standing 227 yeas to 129 nays, or less than the required two-thirds.

FARMERS' FREE LIST BILL.

The so-called "farmers' free list bill," vetoed by President Taft Aug. 18, 1911, provided that the following articles should be exempt from duty when imported into the United States:

Plows, tooth and disk harrows, headers, harvesters and binders, reapers, agricultural drills and planters, mowers, horse rakes, cultivators, thrashing machines and cotton gins, farm wagons and farm carts, and all other agricultural implements of any kind and description, whether specifically mentioned herein or not, whether in whole or in parts, including repair parts.

Bagging for cotton, gunny cloth and all similar fabric materials or coverings, suitable for covering and baling cotton, composed in whole or in part of jute, jute butts, hemp, flax, seg, Russian seg, New Zealand tow, Norwegian tow, aloë, mill waste, cotton tares or any other materials or fibers suitable for covering cotton, and burlaps and bags or sacks composed wholly or in part of jute or burlaps or other material suitable for bagging or sacking agricultural products.

Hoop or band iron, or hoop or band steel, cut to lengths, punched or not punched, or wholly or partly manufactured into hoops or ties, coated or not coated with paint or any other preparation, with or without buckles or fastenings for baling cotton or any other commodity, and wire for baling hay, straw and other agricultural products.

Grain, buff, split, rough and sole leather; band, bend or belting leather; boots and shoes; harness, saddles and saddlery, in sets or in parts, finished or unfinished, composed wholly or in chief value of leather, and leather cut into shoe uppers or vamps or other forms suitable for conversion into manufactured articles.

Barbed wire, fence wire, wire rods, wire strands or wire rope, wire woven or manufactured for wire fencing and other kinds of wire suitable for fencing, including wire staples.

Beef, veal, mutton, lamb, pork and meats of all kinds; fresh, salted, pickled, dried, smoked, dressed or undressed, prepared or preserved in any manner; bacon, hams, shoulders, lard, lard compounds, lard substitutes, sausage and sausage meats, coming from any foreign country with which the United States has a reciprocal trade agreement and which shall admit from the United States free of duty, cotton, corn, wheat, oats, horses, cattle and hogs.

Buckwheat flour, cornmeal, wheat flour and semolina, rye flour, bran, middlings and other offals of grain, oatmeal and rolled oats and all prepared cereal foods, and biscuits, bread, wafers and similar articles; not sweetened, coming from any foreign country with which the United States has a reciprocal trade agreement and which shall admit from the United States free of duty, cotton, corn, wheat, oats, horses, cattle and hogs.

Timber, hewn, sided or squared, round timber used for spars or in building wharves, shingles, laths, fencing posts, sawed boards, planks, deals and other lumber, rough or dressed, except boards, planks, deals and other lumber, of lignum vitae, lancewood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, satiuwood and all other cabinet woods.

Sewing machines and all parts thereof.

Salt, whether in bulk or in bags, sacks, barrels, or other packages.

Roman, Portland and other hydraulic cement and lime.

In the house the bill was passed by a vote of 236 yeas to 109 nays. It had the solid support of the democrats and in addition the following republicans voted for it:

Anderson (Minn.).	Kent (Cal.).
Davis (Minn.).	Kopp (Wis.).
Lindbergh (Minn.).	Leandro (Wis.).
Miller (Minn.).	Morse (Wis.).
Steenerson (Minn.).	Nelson (Wis.).
Volstead (Minn.).	Lafferty (Ore.).
Madison (Kas.).	LaFollette (Wash.).
Murdock (Kas.).	N. Warburton (Wash.).
Anthony (Kas.).	Morgan (Okla.).
Jackson (Kas.).	Norris (Neb.).
Hanna (N. D.).	Roberts (Nev.).
Helgeson (N. D.).	Akin (N. Y.). Total, 24.

In the senate the vote was 48 yeas to 30 nays. Of those voting for the bill thirty-four were democrats, twelve progressive republicans and two regular republicans. The opposition vote was cast by twenty-nine regular republicans and one progressive (Senator Bourne of Oregon). The republican vote for the bill was:

Borah (Idaho).	Gronna (N. D.).
Bristow (Kas.).	Kenyon (Iowa).
Brown (Neb.).	LaFollette (Wis.).
Clapp (Minn.).	Poindester (Wash.).
Crawford (S. D.).	McClumber* (N. D.).
Cummins (Iowa).	Nelson* (Minn.).
Dixon (Mont.).	Works (Cal.) Total, 16.

*Regular.

In his message vetoing the proposed law the president reiterated the opinion expressed in his veto of the wool bill, that all general amendments to the existing tariff laws should be postponed until accurate and scientific information could be submitted to congress by a tariff board appointed for the purpose of investigating the difference in cost of production of dutiable articles at home and abroad. He also declared that the bill was so carelessly drawn that it would inevitably lead to the greatest uncertainty as to what articles were or were not covered by its various provisions and would involve the government in endless litigation. A third reason for withholding approval was the fact that it placed the finished product on the free list, but retained on the dutiable list the raw material and the machinery with which such finished product was made; thus putting at a needless disadvantage the American manufacturers. A fourth reason was that while purporting, by putting agricultural implements, meat and flour on the free list, to reduce their price to consumers, it did not do so, but only gave to Canada valuable concessions which might be used by the executive to expand reciprocity with that country in accordance with the direction of congress.

By a vote of 226 yeas to 127 nays the house of representatives refused to pass the bill over the president's veto. It required a two-thirds vote in the affirmative to do so.

COTTON TARIFF BILL.

The bill to reduce the duties on manufactures of cotton was passed by the house Aug. 3, 1911, by a vote of 203 yeas (including thirty "insurgent" republicans) to 90 nays, and by the senate Aug. 17 by a vote of 29 yeas to 24 nays. As it passed the house the bill reduced the average tariff on manufactured cotton goods from 48 to 27 per cent ad valorem. The senate bill not only reduced the duties on manufactured cotton goods, but also on a large number of chemicals (schedule A) and on iron and steel (schedule C). The house accepted the senate bill without change Aug. 21 by a vote of 180 yeas to 107 nays. The bill was vetoed by the president Aug. 22.

"I find," the message of the president said, "that there was practically no consideration of either schedule by any committee of either house. There were no facts presented to either house in which I can find material upon which to form any judgment as to the effect of the amendments either upon American industries or upon the revenues of the government."

Briefly reviewing the manner in which the iron and steel and chemical amendments were added to the bill the president said:

"I cannot make myself a party to dealing with the industries of the country in this way. The industries covered by metals and the manufacture of metals are the largest in the country, and it would seem not only wise, but absolutely essential to acquire accurate information as to the effect of changes which may vitally affect these industries before enacting them into law. * * *

"This bill thus illustrates and emphasizes the views which I have already expressed in vetoing the wool bill and the so-called free list bill, as to the paramount importance of securing, through the investigation and reports of the tariff board, a definite and certain basis of ascertained fact for the consideration of tariff laws. When the reports of the tariff board upon these schedules are received, the duties which should be imposed can be determined upon justly and with intelligent appreciation of the effect that they will have both upon industry and upon revenue. Very likely some of the changes in this bill will prove to be desirable and some to be undesirable. So far as they turn out to be just and reasonable I shall be glad to approve them, but at present the proposed legislation appears to be all a matter of guesswork. The important thing is to get our tariff legislation out of the sloughs of guesswork and logrolling and ex parte statements of interested persons, and to establish that legislation on the basis of tested and determined facts, to which shall be applied, fairly and openly, whatever tariff principle the people of the country choose to adopt."

No attempt was made to pass the bill over the president's veto.

DIRECT ELECTION OF SENATORS.

In the house of representatives April 13, 1911, the following joint resolution was adopted by a vote of 296 yeas to 16 nays:

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled (two-thirds of each house concurring therein) That in lieu of the first paragraph of section 3 of article I of the constitution of the United States and in lieu of so much of paragraph two of the same section as relates to the filling of vacancies, and in lieu of all of paragraph 1 of section 4 of said article I, in so far as the same relates to any authority in congress to make or alter regulations as to the times or manner of holding elections for senators, the following be proposed as an amendment to the constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states:

"The senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each state, elected by the people thereof, for six years, and each senator shall have one vote. The electors in each state shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislature.

"The times, places and manner of holding elections for senators shall be as prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof.

"When vacancies happen in the representation of any state in the senate, the executive authority of such state shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies: Provided that the legislature of any state may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election, as the legislature may direct.

"This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the constitution."

The resolution was adopted by the senate June 12 by a vote of 64 yeas to 24 nays after having been changed by the adoption of an amendment offered by Senator Bristow of Kansas striking out the following provisions, "and in lieu of all of paragraph 1 section 4 of said article I, in so far as the same relates to any authority in congress to make or alter regulations as to the times or manner of holding elections for senators," and "the times, places and manner of holding elections for senators shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof." The Bristow amendment was adopted by a vote of 45 yeas to 44 nays, the vice-president casting the deciding vote.

The house, June 21, refused by a vote of 172 to 112 to concur in the amendment and the bill was sent to conference, where it still remained when the session closed. [The same resolution was brought to a vote in the senate at the last session of the 61st congress, but failed to get the necessary two-thirds affirmative vote. Its defeat was brought about by an amendment offered by Senator Sutherland of Utah identical with the Bristow amendment quoted above.]

ADMISSION OF NEW MEXICO AND ARIZONA.

Congress in 1910 passed an enabling act providing for the admission of the territories of New Mexico and Arizona into the union as states. In accordance with the terms of the enabling act the two territories in November, 1910, and constitutions framed which were ratified by the people at special elections early in 1911. March 1, 1911, a joint resolution approving the constitution of New Mexico was passed by the national house of representatives, but an amendment was added by the senate approving also the constitution of Arizona, to which President Taft was opposed on account of its recall provision, which included the judiciary. The resolution as so amended was defeated.

VETO MESSAGE.

When the 62d congress began work at the session called by President Taft a joint resolution approving both constitutions substantially as they were passed was introduced and adopted by the house May 23 and by the senate Aug. 8. The president returned the resolution with his veto and the measure failed. In his veto message the president approved the New Mexican constitution as modified by a provision making it more easily amended, but he vigorously attacked the recall feature of the Arizona constitution.

"Under the Arizona constitution," read the message. "all elective officers, and this includes county and state judges, six months after their election are subject to recall. It is initiated by a petition signed by electors equal to 25 per cent of the total number of votes cast for all the candidates for the office at the previous general election. Within five days after the petition is filed the officer may resign. Whether he does or not, an election ensues in which his name, if he does not resign, is placed on the ballot with those of all other candidates. The petitioners may print on the official ballot 200 words showing their reasons for recalling the officer, and he is permitted to make defense in the same place in 200 words. If the incumbent receives the highest number of votes he continues in his office; if not, he is removed from office and is succeeded by the candidate who does receive the highest number.

"This provision of the Arizona constitution, in its application to county and state judges, seems to me so pernicious in its effect, so destructive of independence in the judiciary, so likely to subject the rights of the individual to the possible tyranny of a popular majority, and, therefore, to be so injurious to the cause of free government, that I must disapprove a constitution containing it. * * * A popular government is not a government of a majority, by a majority, for a majority of the people. It is a government of the whole people by a majority of the whole people under such rules and checks as will secure a wise, just and beneficent government for all the people. * * * No honest, clear headed man, however great a lover of popular government, can deny that the unbridled expression of the majority of a community hastily converted into law or action would sometimes make a government tyrannical and cruel. Constitutions are checks upon the hasty action of the majority. * * *

"The executive and legislative branches are representative of the majority of the people which elected them in guiding the course of the government within the limits of the constitution. They must act for the whole people, of course, but they must properly follow, and usually ought to follow, the views of the majority which elected them in respect to the governmental policy best adapted to secure the welfare of the whole people. But the judicial branch of the government is not representative of a majority of the people in any such sense, even if the mode of selecting judges is by popular election. In a proper sense, judges are servants of the people; that is, they are doing work which must be done for the government and in the interest of all the people, but it is not work in the doing of which they are to follow the will of the majority except as that is embodied in statutes lawfully enacted according to constitutional limitations. They are not popular representatives. On the contrary, to fill their office properly they must be independent. They must decide every question which comes before them according to law and justice. If this distinction is between individuals they will follow the statute, or the unwritten law if no statute applies, and they take the unwritten law growing out of tradition and custom from previous judicial decisions. If a statute or ordinance affecting a cause before them is not lawfully enacted, because it violates the constitution adopted by the people, then they must ignore the statute and decide the question as if the statute had never been passed. This power is a judicial power imposed by the people on the judges by the written constitution. In early days some argued that the obligations of the constitution operated directly on the conscience of the legislature, and only in that manner, and that it was to be conclusively presumed that whatever was done by the legislature was constitutional. But such a view did not obtain with our hard headed, courageous and far sighted statesmen and judges, and it was soon settled that it was the duty of judges in cases properly arising before them to apply the law and so to declare what was the law, and that if what purported to be statutory law was at variance with the fundamental law, i. e., the constitution, the seeming statute was not law at all, was not binding on the courts, the individuals or any branch of the government and that it was the duty of the judges so to decide. This power conferred on the judiciary in our form of government is unique in the history of governments, and its operation has attracted and deserved the admiration and commendation of the world. It gives to our judiciary a position higher, stronger and more responsible than that of the judiciary of any other country, and more effectively secures adherence to the fundamental will of the people.

"What I have said has been to little purpose if it has not shown that judges to fulfill their functions properly in our popular government must be more independent than in any other form of government, and that need of independence is greatest where the individual is one litigant and the state, guided by the successful and governing majority, is the other. In order to maintain the rights of the minority and the individual and to preserve our constitutional balance we must have judges with courage to decide against the majority when justice and law require.

"By the recall in the Arizona constitution it is proposed to give to the majority power to remove arbitrarily, and without delay, any judge who may have the courage to render an unpopular decision. By the recall it is proposed to enable a minority of 25 per cent of the voters of the district or state, for no prescribed cause, after the judge has been in office six months, to submit the question of his retention in office to the electorate. The petitioning minority must say on the ballot what they can against him in 200 words and he must defend as best he can in the same space. Other candidates are permitted to present themselves and have their names printed on the ballot, so that the recall is not based solely on the record or the acts of the judge, but also on the question whether some other and more popular candidate has been found to unseat him. Could there be a system more ingenious, devised to subject judges to momentary gusts of popular passion than this? We cannot be blind to the fact that often an intelligent and respectable elector, may be so roused upon an issue that it will visit with condemnation the decision of a just judge, though exactly in accord with the law governing the case, merely because it affects unfavorably their contest. Controversies over elections, labor troubles, racial or religious issues, issues as to the construction or constitutionality of liquor laws, criminal trials of popular or unpopular defendants, the removal of county seats, suits by individuals to maintain their constitutional rights in obstruction of some popular improvement—these and many other cases could be cited in which a majority of a district electorate would be tempted by hasty anger to recall a conscientious judge if the opportunity were open all the time. No period of delay is interposed for the abatement of popular feeling. The recall is devised to encourage quick action and to lead the people to strike while the iron is hot. The judge is treated as the instrument and servant of a majority of the people, and subject to momentary will, not after a long term in which his qualities as a judge and his character as a man have been subjected to a test of all the varieties of judicial work and duty so as to furnish a proper means of measuring his fitness for continuance in another term. On the instant of an unpopular ruling, while the spirit of protest has not had time to cool, and even while an appeal may be pending from his ruling, in which he may be sustained, he is to be hailed before the electorate as a tribunal, with no judicial hearing, evidence or defense, and thrown out of office and disgraced for life because he has failed, in a single decision, it may be, to satisfy the popular demand. Think of the opportunity such a system would give to unscrupulous political bosses in control, as they have been in control not only of conventions but elections. Think of the enormous power for evil given to the sensational, muckraking portion of the press in rousing prejudice against a just judge by false charges and insinuations, the effect of which in the short period of an election by recall it would be impossible for him to meet and offset! Supporters of such a system seem to think that it will work only in the interest of the poor, the humble, the weak and the oppressed; that it will strike down only the judge who is supposed to favor corporations and be affected by the corrupting influence of the rich. Nothing could be farther from the ultimate result. The motive it would offer to unscrupulous combinations to seek to control politics in order to control the judges is clear. Those would profit by the recall who have the best opportunity of rousing the majority of the people to action on a sudden impulse. Are they likely to be the wisest or the best people in a community? Do they not include those who have money enough to employ the firebrands and slanderers of a community and the stirrers-up of social hate? Would not self-respecting men well hesitate to accept judicial office with such a sword of Damocles hanging over them? What kind of judgments might those on the unpopular side expect from courts whose judges must make their decisions under such legalized terrorism? The character of the judges would deteriorate to that of trimmers and time-servers, and independent judicial action would be a thing of the past. As the possibilities of such a system pass in review, is it too much to characterize it as one which will destroy the judiciary, its standing and its usefulness? * * *

Attempt is made to defend the principle of judicial recall by reference to states in which judges are said to have shown themselves to be under corrupt influences in which it is claimed that nothing but a desperate remedy will suffice. If the political control in such states is sufficiently wrested from corrupting corporations to permit the enactment of a radical constitutional amendment like that of judicial recall, it would seem possible to make provision in its stead for an effective remedy by impeachment, in which the cumbersome features of the present remedy might be avoided, but the opportunity for judicial hearing and defense before an impartial tribunal might be retained. * * *

"Again, judicial recall is advocated on the ground that it will bring the judges more into sympathy with the popular will and the progress of ideas among the people. It is said that now judges are out of touch with the movement toward a wider democracy and a greater control of governmental agencies in the interest and for the benefit of the people. The righteous and just course for a judge to pursue is ordinarily fixed by statute or clear principles of law, and the cases in which his judgment may be affected by his political, economic or social views are infrequent. But even in such cases judges are not removed from the people's influence. Surround the judiciary with all the safeguards possible, create judges by appointment, make their tenure for life, forbid diminution of salary during their term and still it is impossible to prevent the influence of popular opinion from coloring judgments in the long run. Judges are men, intelligent, sympathetic men, patriotic men, and in those fields of the law in which the personal equation unavoidably plays a part, there will be found a response to sober popular opinion as it changes to meet the exigency of social, political and economic changes."

AMENDED RESOLUTION PASSED.

Aug. 18 the joint resolution, amended in accordance with the views of the president, was passed by the senate and on the following day it was passed by the house. Aug. 21 it was signed by the president. Section 1 of the joint resolution provides that the admission of New Mexico and Arizona into the union as states shall take effect upon the proclamation of the president of the United States, when the conditions explicitly set forth in the resolution shall have been complied with. The president is authorized and directed to certify the adoption of the resolution to the governor of each territory as soon as practicable, and each of the governors shall issue his proclamation for the holding of the first general election as provided for in the constitution of New Mexico heretofore adopted and the election ordinance numbered 2, adopted by the constitutional convention of Arizona, respectively, and for the submission to a vote of the electors of the territories of the amendments of the constitutions of the proposed states set forth in the resolution. The results of the elections shall be certified to the president by the governor of each of the territories; and if the terms of the resolution have been complied with, the president shall issue a proclamation immediately announcing the result of the elections so ascertained, and upon the issuance of such proclamation the proposed state or states so certified shall be deemed admitted by congress into the union upon an equal footing with the other states.

Section 2 provides that the admission of New Mexico shall be subject to the terms of a joint resolution approved Feb. 16, 1911, entitled "Joint resolution reaffirming the boundary line between Texas and the territory of New Mexico."

Section 3 requires that before the proclamation of the president shall issue announcing the result of the election in New Mexico, and at the same time that the state election is held, the electors of New Mexico shall vote upon a proposed amendment to article XIX. of the constitution as a condition precedent to the admission of the state. The article in question relates to the method of amending the state constitution. In its original form the article provided that any proposed amendment must be voted for by two-thirds of all the members in each house before being submitted to the electors of the state for their approval or rejection, and that if it were ratified by a majority of the electors voting thereon and by an affirmative vote equal to at least 40 per cent of all the votes cast at the election in the state and at least one-half of the counties, then the amendment should become part of the constitution. In its amended form the article requires only a majority vote in each house for propositions to amend the constitution and the same for ratification by the electors. The original article contained a provision that a constitutional amendment might be submitted to the people if carried by a majority vote in each house at the first regular session of the legislature two years after the constitution went into effect or at the regular session convening each eighth year thereafter. This proviso is eliminated from the amended article. Another proviso omitted is that requiring at least one-half of the counties to favor calling a convention to revise the constitution before such convention could be summoned.

Section 4 of the joint resolution provides for the submission of the amendment to the electors of New Mexico at the first state election, and section 5 provides that if a majority of the legal votes be cast in favor of the amendment the governor shall proclaim it a part of the constitution of the state of New Mexico.

Section 6 of the joint resolution amends the enabling act of June 20, 1910, so as to make the fifth clause of section 2 read: "That said state shall never enact any law restricting or abridging the right of suffrage on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

ARIZONA AMENDMENT.

Section 7 requires that before the proclamation of the president shall issue announcing the result of the election in Arizona, and at the same time that the state election is held, the electors of Arizona shall vote upon and ratify the proposed amendment to their state constitution, as a condition precedent to the admission of the state. The amendment is to section 1 of article VIII. of the constitution. This section, as pointed out by President Taft, made every public officer in the state of Arizona holding an elective office subject to recall on the petition of 25 per cent of the electors of the district from which candidates are elected to such office. The amendment simply excepts the members of the judiciary.

The joint resolution further provides that this amendment, if affirmed by a majority of the legal votes cast at the election, shall be proclaimed as part of the state constitution by the governor, but "if the said proposed amendment to section 1 of article VIII. of the constitution of Arizona is not adopted and ratified as aforesaid, then, and in that case, the territory of Arizona shall not be admitted into the union as a state." (Approved Aug. 21, 1911.)

STATE OF NEW MEXICO.

Enabling act passed by 61st congress and approved by the president June 20, 1910.

Delegates to constitutional convention elected Sept. 6, 1910.

Convention began work Oct. 3; constitution completed and signed Nov. 21, 1910.

Constitution ratified by people at special election Jan. 21, 1911.

Joint resolution adopted by 62d congress Aug. 8 to admit territory as state after amendment of constitution; approved Aug. 21, 1911.

DIGEST OF CONSTITUTION.

BILL OF RIGHTS.

The bill of rights declares that the state of New Mexico is an inseparable part of the federal union, and that the constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land. It also provides that the rights, privileges and immunities, civil, political and religious, guaranteed to the people of New Mexico by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, shall be preserved inviolate. The remaining provisions in the bill of rights are similar to those in other state constitutions.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

Senate—The senate of the state legislature shall consist of twenty-four members, elected for four years. They must be qualified electors, residents of New Mexico for at least three years and not less than 25 years of age.

House—The house shall consist of forty-nine members, elected for two years. Representatives must be at least 21 years old.

Sessions—The regular sessions of the legislature (except the first) shall begin on the second Tuesday of January after each general election. No regular session shall exceed sixty days, except the first, which may be ninety days, and no special session shall exceed thirty days.

Compensation—Each member of the legislature shall receive as compensation $5 for each day's attendance during the session and 10 cents a mile traveled in going to and returning from the seat of government once each session.

Passes—It shall not be lawful for a member of the state legislature to use a pass or to purchase or receive transportation over any railroad upon terms not open to the general public; and the violation of this section shall work a forfeiture of the office.

Disapproval of Laws—The people reserve the right to disapprove, suspend and annul any law enacted by the legislature, except appropriation, peace and health, public debt and local or special laws. Petitions disapproving of any law must be signed by not less than 10 per cent of the voters of each of three-fourths of the counties, and in the aggregate by not less than 10 per cent of the voters of the state as shown by the total number of votes cast at the last preceding election. The question of approval or rejection shall be submitted to the voters at the next general election; and if a majority of the legal votes cast thereon, and not less than 40 per cent of the total votes cast at such election, be cast for the rejection of such law it shall be repealed and annulled; otherwise it shall remain in force. The forgery of names to such petitions is made a felony.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

The executive department shall consist of a governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer, attorney-general, superintendent of public instruction and commissioner of public lands, who shall be elected for the term of four years. Such officers, except the superintendent of public instruction and the commissioner of public lands, shall be ineligible to succeed themselves after serving one full term. The annual compensation shall be: Governor, $5,000; auditor, secretary of state, treasurer, superintendent of public instruction and commissioner of public lands, $3,000 each; attorney-general, $4,000. These salaries may be increased after the expiration of ten years from the date of the admission of New Mexico as a state.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

The judicial power of the state shall be vested in the senate when sitting as a court of impeachment, a supreme court, district courts, probate courts, justices of the peace and such courts inferior to the district courts as may be established from time to time.

The Supreme court shall consist of three justices elected for a term of eight years, those first elected holding office four, six and eight years, respectively, as determined by lot.

The state shall be divided into eight judicial districts, and a judge shall be chosen for each district at the election of representatives in congress. The term of office shall be six years. There shall be a district attorney for each judicial district, elected for a term of four years.

ELECTIVE FRANCHISE.

Every male citizen of the United States who is over the age of 21 years, and has resided in New Mexico twelve months, in the county ninety days and in the precinct in which he offers to vote thirty days, next preceding the election, except idiots, insane persons, persons convicted of a felonious or infamous crime unless restored to political rights, and Indians not taxed, shall be qualified to vote at all elections for public officers. Women may vote at school elections, provided such right is not suspended on the petition of a majority of the voters in any school district.

ELECTIONS.

General elections shall be held in the state on the Tuesday after the first Monday in each even numbered year.

STATE CORPORATION COMMISSION.

The constitution creates a permanent commission to be known as the "state corporation commission." It is to consist of three members, elected for a term of six years. Officers, agents and employees of railroad, express, telegraph, telephone, sleeping car or other transportation or transmission companies are excluded from membership on the commission. It is the department of government through which charters for domestic corporations or licenses to foreign corporations shall be issued, and through which constitutional provisions and laws relating to corporations shall be carried out.

The commission is charged with the duty of fixing, regulating and controlling all charges and rates of railway, express, telegraph, telephone, sleeping car and other transportation and transmission companies and common carriers within the state; of requiring railway companies to provide adequate depots, stock pens, station buildings, agents and facilities for the accommodation of passengers and for receiving and delivering of freight and express. The commission is also charged with the duty of making and enforcing reasonable rules requiring the supplying of cars and equipment for the use of shippers and passengers and of requiring the use of safety appliances.

EDUCATION.

Free public schools shall be established. No part of the state educational funds shall be used for the support of sectarian or private schools. No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of admission into the public schools or state educational institutions. Children of Spanish descent shall never be denied admission to the public schools, shall never be classed in separate schools, but shall forever enjoy perfect equality with other children in public schools.

The legislature shall provide for the training of teachers in both the English and Spanish languages to qualify them to teach Spanish speaking pupils and students. The English language shall be taught to such pupils and students. A state board of education consisting of seven members is created.

The University of New Mexico, the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, the New Mexico School of Mines, the New Mexico Military Institute, the New Mexico Normal university, the New Mexico Normal school, the Spanish-American school at El Rito, the New Mexico Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb at Santa Fe and the New Mexico Institute for the Blind are confirmed as state educational institutions.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For the first twenty-five years after the constitution goes into effect all laws passed by the legislature shall be published in both the English and Spanish languages.

There shall be a uniform system of textbooks for the public schools, which shall not be changed more than once in six years.

The leasing of convict labor by the state is prohibited.

COMPACT WITH THE UNITED STATES.

The requirements of the enabling act with regard to religious toleration, polygamy, the sale of liquor to Indians, ungranted public lands, territorial debts, the establishment of nonsectarian schools to be conducted in English, suffrage unrestricted on account of race or color, location of the capital, etc., are specifically consented to and confirmed in article XII.

CAPITAL.

The capital of the state shall, until changed by the electors at an election by the legislature for that purpose, be in the city of Santa Fe, but no such election shall be called prior to Dec. 31, 1925.

STATE OF ARIZONA.

Enabling act passed by 61st congress and approved by the president June 20, 1910.

Delegates to constitutional convention elected Sept. 12, 1910.

Convention began work Oct 10; constitution completed and signed Dec. 9, 1910.

Constitution ratified by people at special election Feb. 9, 1911.

BILL OF RIGHTS.

The bill of rights declares, among other things, that the constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land; that no law granting irrevocably any privilege, franchise or immunity shall be enacted; that no law shall be enacted granting to any citizen, class of citizens or corporation other than municipal, privileges or immunities which, upon the same terms, shall not equally belong to all citizens or corporations; that no standing army shall be kept up in the state in time of peace; that any person having knowledge of facts that tend to establish the guilt of any other person or corporation charged with bribery or illegal rebating shall not be excused from giving testimony when legally called upon to do so on the ground that it may tend to incriminate him under the laws of the state, but no person shall be subject to any penalty on account of any transaction concerning which he may testify; and that no hereditary emoluments, privileges or powers shall be granted, and no law shall be enacted permitting any perpetuity or entailment in the state. The remaining provisions are similar to those contained in other state constitutions.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

Senate—The senate of the state legislature shall consist of nineteen members, elected for two years. They must be citizens of the United States, at least 25 years of age and residents of Arizona at least three years.

House—The house shall consist of thirty-five members, with qualifications the same as those of senators.

Sessions—The regular sessions of the legislature (except the first) shall be held biennially and shall begin on the second Monday of January after the election of its members.

Compensation—Members of the legislature shall receive $7 per day for not to exceed sixty days in any one session and mileage at the rate of 20 cents a mile, one way, by shortest practicable route.

Passes—It shall not be lawful for any person holding office in the state to accept or use a pass or to purchase transportation from any railroad or other corporation except as such transportation may be purchased by the general public.

Initiative and Referendum—The people reserve the power to propose laws and amendments to the constitution and to enact or reject such laws and amendments at the polls, independently of the legislature; they also reserve the right to approve or reject at the polls any act, or item, section, or part of any act, of the legislature. Under the power of initiative 10 per cent of the electors shall have the right to propose any measure, and 15 per cent the right to propose any constitutional amendment. Under the power of referendum the legislature or 5 per cent of the electors may order the submission to the people at the polls of any measure enacted by the legislature, except such measures as require early operation for the preservation of the public peace, health or safety.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

The executive department of the state shall consist of a governor, secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer, attorney-general and superintendent of public instruction, each of whom shall be elected for two years. No person is eligible for any of these offices unless he is a male person, at least 25 years of age and a resident of Arizona at least five years. The state treasurer is not eligible to succeed himself. Annual compensation: Governor, $4,000; secretary of state, $3,500; auditor and treasurer, $3,000 each; attorney-general and superintendent of instruction, $2,500 each.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

The judicial power of the state shall be vested in a supreme court, superior courts, justices of the peace and such inferior courts as may be provided by law. The Supreme court shall consist of three judges, elected for six years, except those first elected, whose terms are coterminous with the term of the first governor. There shall be a superior court in each organized county. In the election of both supreme and superior judges, the names of the candidates shall be placed on the ballots in alphabetical order without any partisan designation.

ELECTIVE FRANCHISE.

No person shall be entitled to vote at any election, other than a school election, unless such person be a male citizen of the United States, 21 years of age or over and a resident of the state for one year. No person under guardianship, non compos mentis or insane shall be qualified to vote, nor shall any person convicted of treason or felony be qualified to vote unless restored to civil rights.

ELECTIONS.

There shall be a general election of representatives in congress and of state, county and precinct officers on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November of the first even numbered year after the year in which Arizona is admitted to statehood and biennially thereafter.

REMOVAL FROM OFFICE.

Every public officer holding an elective office, either by election or appointment, except judicial officers, is subject to recall by the electors of the district from which candidates are elected to such office. Such district may include the whole state. Petitions for recall must be signed by 25 per cent of the electors. The recall petition must contain a statement of not more than 200 words giving the reason for the proposed recall, and the officer sought to be removed may justify his course in office in the same number of words. If he does not resign within five days after the recall petition is filed a special election shall be called and if he does not request otherwise in writing his name will be placed on the ballot with those of other candidates. The candidate receiving the highest number of votes shall be declared elected to fill the remainder of the term.

EDUCATION.

The legislature shall provide for the establishment and maintenance of a general and uniform public school system, including kindergarten, common, high, normal and industrial schools and a university. The public schools shall be under the direction and supervision of a state board of education, a state superintendent of public instruction and county school superintendents.

CORPORATION COMMISSION.

A corporation commission is created, to be composed of three persons, who shall be elected for terms of six years each (except the first). The commission shall have full power to prescribe just and reasonable classifications to be used and rates to be made by public service corporations.

COMPACT WITH UNITED STATES.

The requirements of the enabling act with regard to religious toleration, polygamy, the sale of liquor to Indians, etc., are consented to and confirmed.

CAPITAL.

The capital of the state, until changed by the electors voting at an election provided for by the legislature, shall be at Phoenix, but no such election shall be called prior to Dec. 31, 1925.

VETO POWER OF BRITISH LORDS CURBED.

The veto power of the British house of lords was largely restricted when, by a vote of 131 to 114, the peers accepted the liberal government's veto or parliament bill, Aug. 10, 1911. This ended a bitter struggle between the commons and the lords, dating from the fall of 1909, when the upper house rejected the budget presented by David Lloyd-George, on the ground that it was socialistic in principle and consistorial in effect. Parliament was dissolved and an appeal to the country taken. In the elections the liberals were sustained, retaining about the same majority in the new as in the old parliament. The veto bill was introduced in the house of commons by Premier Asquith, Feb. 21, 1911, and passed its first reading the following day by a vote of 351 to 227. It passed its third and final reading May 15 by a vote of 363 to 241.

May 16 the measure was introduced in the house of lords, where, after a series of stormy debates, it was radically amended and passed July 20. The following day a letter from Premier Asquith to the opposition leader, Arthur J. Balfour, was made public, announcing that should the necessity arise the government would ask the king to exercise his privilege of appointing a sufficient number of new liberal peers to secure the passing into law of the bill in substantially the same form in which it had left the house of commons. The king, the letter stated, had consented to do so. The lords' amendments were rejected by the government and then the lords, rather than have the king create a large number of new peers, accepted the measure. The more important features of the new law are as follows:

If a money bill, having been passed by the house of commons, and sent up to the house of lords at least one month before the end of the session, is not passed by the house of lords without amendment within one month after it is so sent up, the bill shall, unless the house of commons direct to the contrary, be presented to his majesty and become an act of parliament on the royal assent being signified, notwithstanding that the house of lords has not consented to the bill.

A money bill is described as one which, in the opinion of the speaker of the house of commons, contains only provisions dealing with all or any of the following subjects, namely: the imposition, repeal, remission, alteration or regulation of taxation; charges on the consolidated fund or the provision of money by parliament; supply; the appropriation, control or regulation of public money; the raising or guaranty of any loan or the repayment thereof; or matters incidental to those subjects or any of them.

No amendment to a money bill which, in the opinion of the speaker of the house of commons, prevents the bill retaining such a character will be permitted.

If any bill other than a money bill is passed by the house of commons in three successive sessions (whether of the same parliament or not) and, having been sent up to the house of lords at least one month before the end of the session, is rejected by the house of lords in each of those sessions, that bill shall, on its rejection for the third time by the house of lords, unless the house of commons direct to the contrary, be presented to his majesty and become an act of parliament on the royal assent being signified thereto, notwithstanding that the house of lords has not consented to the bill.

Two years must elapse, however, between the date of the first introduction of the bill in the commons and the date on which it passes the house of commons for the third time.

DECLARATION OF LONDON ON LAWS OF NAVAL WAR.

What is popularly known as the "Declaration of London" is the agreement entered into Feb. 26, 1909, at a naval conference closing on that date in London, England, between representatives of the following powers: Germany, United States, Austria-Hungary, Spain, France, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Russia. The conference was held at the invitation of Great Britain in order to arrive at an agreement as to what are the generally recognized rules of international law within the meaning of article 7 of the convention of Oct. 18, 1907 (at The Hague), relative to the establishment of an international prize court. The agreement contains nine chapters and seventy-one articles, embodying what the signatory powers declare to correspond in substance with the generally recognized principles of international law. The subjects of the chapters are as follows: Chapter I., blockade in time of war; chapter II., contraband of war; chapter III., unneutral service; chapter IV., destruction of neutral prizes; chapter V., transfer to a neutral flag; chapter VI., enemy character; chapter VII., convoy; chapter VIII., resistance to search; chapter IX., compensation.

The signatory powers undertake to insure the mutual observance of the rules contained in the present declaration in any war in which all the belligerents are parties thereto. Ratifications are to be deposited in London. Powers not represented at the naval conference were requested to accede to the declaration of London, those doing so being placed on the same footing as the signatory powers.

REBELLION IN KWANTUNG PROVINCE, CHINA.

Kwangtung province, China, was the scene of an attempted rebellion in the latter part of April, 1911. The official residence of the viceroy of Canton was burned and Li, the faotal of the same city, was assassinated. There was considerable pillaging and for a time it was feared that the revolt would assume serious proportions. The government troops remained loyal, however, and the uprising was suppressed. Many of the rebels, who were led by Wu Zhen, a Chinese educated in Japan, were killed. The movement had for its object the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty.

ILLINOIS LEGISLATION IN 1911.

Summary of important laws enacted by the regular biennial session of the forty-seventh general assembly, beginning Jan. 4, 1911, and ending June 1, 1911.

EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION ACT.

The law is entitled "An act to promote the general welfare of the people of this state, by providing compensation for accidental injuries or death suffered in the course of employment." It provides in section 1 that any employer covered by the provisions of the act in this state may elect to provide and pay compensation for injuries sustained by any employee arising out of and in the course of the employment according to the provisions of the act, and thereby relieve himself from any liability for the recovery of damages, except as herein provided. If, however, any such employer shall elect not to pay such compensation he shall not escape liability for injuries sustained by an employee because:

1. The employee assumed the risks of the employer's business.
2. The injury or death was caused in whole or in part by the negligence of a fellow servant.
3. The injury or death was proximately caused by the contributory negligence of the employee, but such contributory negligence shall be considered by the jury in reducing the amount of damages.

(a) Every such employer is presumed to have elected to provide and pay compensation according to the provisions of this act unless he shall have given notice to the contrary to the state bureau of labor statistics.

(b) Every employer within the provisions of the act failing to file such notice shall be bound hereby as to all his employees who shall elect to come within the provisions of the act until Jan. 1 of the next year and for terms of each year thereafter: Provided, any such employer may elect to discontinue the payments of compensation only at the expiration of any such calendar year by filing notice of such intention with the state bureau of labor statistics at least sixty days before the end of the year, and by posting such notice in his plant, office or place of work or by personal service.

(c) In the event that any employer elects to provide and pay compensation, then every employee of such employer shall be deemed to have accepted all the provisions of the act and shall be bound thereby unless within thirty days after being hired or after the taking effect of the act, he shall file a notice to the contrary with the secretary of the state bureau of labor statistics, whose duty it shall be immediately to notify the employer, and if so notified the employer shall not be deprived of any of his common law or statutory defenses, and until such notice to the contrary is given to the employer, the measure of liability of the employer for any injury shall be determined according to the compensation provisions of this act: Provided, however, that before any such employee shall be bound by the provisions of this act his employer shall either furnish to such employee at the time of his hiring, or post in a conspicuous place in the room or plant where he is to be employed, a legible statement of the compensation provisions of this act.

Sec. 2. The provisions of this act shall apply to every employer in the state engaged in building, maintaining or demolishing of any structure; in any construction or electrical work; in the business of carriage by land or water and loading and unloading in connection therewith (except as to carriers who shall be construed to be excluded herefrom by the laws of the United States relating to liability to their employes for personal injuries while engaged in interstate commerce where such laws are held to be exclusive of all state regulations providing compensation for accidental injuries or death suffered in the course of employment); in operating general or terminal storehouses; in mining, surface mining or quarrying; in any enterprise, a branch thereof, in which explosive materials are manufactured, handled, used, generated, stored or conveyed in dangerous quantities; in any enterprise wherein molten metal or injurious gases or vapors or inflammable fluids are manufactured, used, generated, stored or conveyed in dangerous quantities; and in any enterprise in which statutory regulations are now or shall hereafter be imposed for the guarding, using or the placing of machinery or appliances, or for the protection and safeguarding of the employes therein, each of which employments is hereby determined to be especially dangerous, in which, from the nature, conditions and means of prosecution of the work therein, extraordinary risks to life and limb of the employe engaged therein are inherent, necessary or substantially unavoidable, and as to each of which employments it is deemed necessary to establish a new system of compensation for accidents to employes therein.

Section 3 provides that no common law or statutory right to recover damages for injury or death sustained by any employee while engaged in the line of his duty other than the compensation herein provided shall be available to any employee who has accepted the provisions of this act or to any one dependent upon him: Provided, that when the injury to the employe was caused by the intentional omission on the part of the employer to comply with the statutory safety regulations, nothing in this act shall affect the civil liability of the employer. If the employer is a partnership, such omission must be that of one of the partners thereof, and if a corporation, that of an elective officer thereof.

Sec. 4. The amount of compensation which the employer who accepts the provisions of this act shall pay for injury to the employe which results in death shall be:

(a) If the employe leaves any widow, child or children, or parents or other lineal heirs to whose support he had contributed within five years previous to the time of his death, a sum equal to four times the average annual earnings of the employe, but not less in any event than $1,500, and not more in any event than $3,500. Any weekly payments, other than necessary medical or surgical fees, shall be deducted in ascertaining such amount payable on death.

(b) If the employe leaves collateral heirs dependent upon his earnings, such a percentage of the sum provided in article (a) as the contributions which the deceased made to the support of these dependents bore to his earnings.

(c) If the employe leaves no widow or child or children, parents or lineal or collateral heirs dependent upon his earnings, a sum not to exceed $150 for burial expenses.

(d) All compensation provided for in this section to be paid in case injury results in death shall be paid in installments equal to one-half the average earnings, at the same intervals at which the wages or earnings of the employe were paid while he was living, or if this shall not be feasible, then the installments shall be paid weekly.

(e) The compensation to be paid for injuries which result in death, as provided for in this section, shall be paid to the personal representative of the deceased employe and shall be distributed by such representative to the beneficiaries entitled thereto, in accordance with the laws of this state relating to the descent and distribution of personal property.

Sec. 5. The amount of compensation which the employer who accepts the provisions of this act shall provide and pay for injury to the employe resulting in disability shall be:

(a) Necessary first aid, medical, surgical and hospital services; also medicine and hospital services for a period not longer than eight weeks, not to exceed, however, the amount of $200; also necessary services of a physician or surgeon during such period of disability, unless such employe elects to secure his own physician or surgeon.

(b) If the period of disability lasts more than six working days, and such fact is determined by the physician or physicians, as provided in section 9, compensation equal to one-half of the earnings, but not less than $5 nor more than $12 per week, beginning on the eighth day of disability, and as long as the disability lasts, or until the amount of compensation paid equals the amount payable as a death benefit.

(c) If any employee, by reason of any accident arising out of and in the course of his employment, receive any serious and permanent disfigurement to the hands or face, but which injury does not actually incapacitate the employe from pursuing his usual employment so that it is possible to measure compensation in accordance with the methods of computing the same herein provided, such employe shall have the right to resort to arbitration for the purpose of determining a reasonable amount of compensation which must not exceed one-quarter the amount of compensation in case of death.

(d) If it shall appear that the employe has been partially, though permanently, incapacitated from pursuing his usual line of employment, he shall receive compensation equal to one-half the difference between the average amount which he earned before the accident, and the average amount which he is earning, or is able to earn, after the accident, if suitable employment is secured.

(e) In the case of complete disability which renders the employe wholly and permanently incapable of work, compensation for the first eight days after the injury was received, equal to 50 per cent of his earnings, but not less than $5 nor more than $12 per week. If complete disability continues after the payment of a sum equal to the amount of the death benefit or after the expiration of eight years, then a compensation during life, equal to 8 per cent of the death benefit which would have been payable had the accident resulted in death. Such compensation shall not be less than $10 per month and shall be payable monthly.

1. In case death occurs before the total payments made equal the amount payable as a death benefit, as provided in section 4, article (a), then in the case the employe leaves any widow, child or dependent, the amount which they are to receive shall be paid the difference between the compensation for death and the sum of such payment, but in no case shall this sum be less than $500.

2. In cases of complete disability after compensation has been paid at the specified rate for a term of at least six months, the employe shall have the privilege of filing a petition asking for a lump sum in payment of the difference between the sum of the payments received and the compensation to which he was entitled when such permanent disability has been definitely determined. For the purpose of this section, blindness or the total irrecoverable loss of sight, the loss of both feet or above the ankle, the loss of both hands at or above the wrists, the loss of one hand and one foot, an injury to the spine resulting in permanent paralysis of the legs or arms, and a fracture of the skull resulting in incurable imbecility or insanity, shall be considered complete and permanent disability. Provided, these specific cases of complete disability shall not be construed as excluding other cases.

3. In fixing the amount of the disability payments, regard shall be had to any payments, allowance or benefit which the employe may have received from the employer during the period of his incapacity, except the expenses of necessary medical or surgical treatment. In no event, except in cases of complete disability as defined above, shall any weekly payment payable under the compensation plan in this section provided exceed $12 per week or extend over a period of more than eight weeks from the date of the accident. In case an injured employe shall be incompetent at the time when any right or privilege accrues to him, a conservator or guardian, appointed according to law, may claim and exercise such right or privilege.

Section 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ provides that any person entitled to compensation under this act, or any employe who shall be found to pay compensation under the act, who shall desire to have such compensation or any part of it paid in a lump sum, may petition any court of competent jurisdiction in the county asking that the compensation shall be so paid, and if it appears to be for the best interest of the parties concerned, the court shall order the payment of a lump sum, and where necessary a guardian, conservator or administrator shall be appointed for any person under disability, who may be entitled to such compensation.

Sec. 6. The basis for computing the compensation shall be as follows:

(a) The compensation shall be computed on the basis of the annual earnings which the injured person received as salary, wages or earnings in the employment of the same employer during the year next preceding the injury.

(b) The employment of the same employer shall be taken to mean employment by the same employer in the grade in which the employe was at the time of the accident, uninterrupted by absence from work due to illness or any other unavoidable cause.

(c) The annual earnings if not otherwise determinable shall be regarded as 300 times the average daily earnings in such computation.

(d) If the injured person has not been engaged in the employment for a full year immediately preceding the accident, the compensation shall be computed according to the annual earnings which persons of the same class in the same or neighboring employments of the same kind have earned during such period. If this is impossible or unreasonable, 300 times the amount which the injured person earned on an average on those days when he was working shall be used as the basis.

(e) In the case of injured employes who earn either no wages or less than 300 times the usual daily wage or earnings of the adult day laborers in the same line of industry of that locality, the yearly wage shall be reckoned as 300 times the average daily local wage.

(f) In employments in which it is customary to operate for a part of the whole number of working days in each year, such number shall be used as a basis of computation, provided the minimum number shall not be less than 200.

(g) Earnings for the purpose of this section shall be based on the earnings for the number of hours commonly regarded as a day's work for that employment and shall exclude overtime earnings.

(h) In computing the compensation to be paid to any employe who, before the accident for which he claims compensation, was disabled and drawing compensation under this act, the compensation for each subsequent injury shall be apportioned according to the proportion of incapacity and disability caused by the respective injuries which he may have suffered.

Section 7 provides that the compensation under the act shall not be reduced in any way by contributions from employes. Section 8 provides that if it is proved that the injury to the employe resulted from his deliberate intention to cause such injury, no compensation shall be allowed.

Sec. 9. Any employe entitled to receive disability payments shall be required, if requested by the employer, to submit himself for examination at the expense of the employer to a duly qualified medical practitioner or surgeon selected by the employer as soon as practicable after the injury and also at stated intervals thereafter to determine the extent of the injury and the amount of compensation: Provided, that such examination shall be made in the presence of a doctor paid for by the employe if he so desires. In the event of a disagreement they may agree upon a third doctor, or, failing to agree, the judge of the County court shall select the third physician. The majority report of the three physicians shall be used in estimating the amount of compensation payable.

Sec. 10. Any question of law or fact arising in determining the compensation shall be settled either by agreement or by arbitration. In case an agreement cannot be reached the employer and employe shall each select a disinterested person and the judge of the County court shall select a third disinterested person, the three to constitute a board of arbitrators who shall hear and determine all disputed points of law or fact. The finding of the third arbitrator shall be binding upon both the employer and employe except for fraud or mistake. An appeal, however, may be taken to the Circuit court or the court that appointed the third arbitrator.

Sec. 11. Any person entitled to payment under the compensation provisions of this act shall have the same preferential claim therefor against the property of the employer as is now allowed by law for a claim by such person against such employer for unpaid wages or for personal service; the payments shall not be subject to attachment, levy, execution, garnishment or satisfaction of debts, except to the same extent as wages or personal service earnings are now subject to similar legal processes, and shall not be assignable.

Sec. 12. Any contract or agreement made by any employer or his agent or attorney with any employee or any other beneficiary of any claim under the provisions of the act within seven days after the injury shall be deemed to be fraudulent.

Sec. 13. No employee or beneficiary shall have power to waive any of the provisions of this act in regard to the amount of compensation which may be payable to such employee or beneficiary hereunder.

Section 14 provides that no proceedings for compensation shall be maintained unless notice of the accident shall have been given the employer as soon as practicable and unless claim for compensation has been made within six months after the injury. Section 15 provides that the act shall not affect the continuance of any existing insurance, mutual aid, benefit or relief association or department, whether maintained in whole or in part by the employer or by the employees, the payment of such association being guaranteed by the employer or by some person or corporation for him: Provided the employer contributes to such association an amount sufficient to insure the employee or other beneficiary the full compensation provided, exclusive of the cost of the maintenance of such association without any expense to the employee. The act shall not prevent the organization and maintaining of any benefit or insurance company for the purpose of insuring against the compensation provided for in this act, the expense of which is maintained by the employer. The act shall not prevent the organization and maintaining of any voluntary mutual aid, benefit or relief association among employees for the payment of additional accident or sick benefits. Any contract of employment, relief benefit or insurance or other device whereby the employee is required to pay any premium or premiums for insurance against the compensation provided for in the act shall be null and void and any employer withholding from the wages of any employee any amount for the purpose of paying any such premium shall be guilty of misdemeanor punishable by a fine of from $10 to $25 for each offense.

Section 16 provides that any person who shall become entitled to compensation under the act shall, in case he is unable to recover such compensation on account of his employer's insolvency, be subrogated to all the rights of such employer against any insurance company which may have insured such employer against loss growing out of the compensation required by the provisions of the act. In section 17 it is provided that where the injury was caused under circumstances creating a legal liability in some person, other than the employer, to pay damages, the employee may take proceedings both against that person to recover damages and against the employer for compensation, but the compensation shall be reduced by the amount of damages recovered.

Section 18 provides that an agreement or award may, at any time after six months and before eighteen months, be reviewed upon the application of either party, on the ground that the incapacity of the employee has increased or diminished. Such application shall be made to a court of competent jurisdiction which may modify such agreement or award. Section 19 provides that it shall be the duty of every employer within the provisions of the act to report all accidents for which compensation is paid to the state bureau of labor statistics. Section 20 provides that employers who engage others to do for them or have done for them hazardous work shall be included in the term "employer" and with the immediate employer shall be jointly and severally liable to pay the compensation required by the act. Sections 21 and 22 exclude from the term "employee" as used in the act persons whose employment is of a casual nature and does not necessarily involve danger.

Section 23 provides that violations of the act shall be punishable by fines of not less than $10 nor more than $500. According to section 23½ the right of action for damages caused by any such injury prior to the taking effect of the act is not affected by it. Section 24 declares that the invalidity of any portion of the act shall not affect the validity of any other portion which can be given effect without such part. The last section (25) provides that the act shall take effect on and after May 1, 1912. (Approved June 10, 1911.) [For other information on workmen's compensation laws, see index to this volume.]

OCCUPATIONAL DISEASES.

Every employer in the state engaged in carrying on any work or process which may produce any illness or disease peculiar to such work, or which subjects employees to danger of illness or disease to which they are not ordinarily exposed in other lines of employment, shall adopt and provide reasonable and approved devices, means or methods for the prevention of such occupational diseases.

Every employer in the state engaged in the carrying on of any process of manufacture or labor in which sugar of lead, white lead, lead chromate, litharge, red lead, arsenate of lead or paris green is used or handled, or the manufacture of brass or the smelting of lead or zinc, which processes and employments are declared to be especially dangerous to the health of the employees engaged in them or in any process of manufacture or labor in which poisonous chemicals, minerals or other substances are used or handled by the employees therein in harmful quantities or under harmful conditions, shall provide without cost to the employee proper working clothing to be kept and used exclusively for the employees while at work. All employees shall be required to wear such clothing. In all processes which are productive of noxious or poisonous dusts, adequate and approved respirators shall be furnished by the employer without cost to the employees, who shall use them while at work.

Every employer engaged in carrying on any of the dangerous employments referred to shall at least once a month cause his employees who come in direct contact with poisonous agencies and injurious processes to be examined by a licensed physician. Cases of illness or disease found by such physician are to be reported to the state board of health, which is to trace the causes of such reports to the department of factory inspection.

Every employer engaged in carrying on any process or manufacture referred to in the act shall set apart from the workshop in which the employees are engaged a dressing room and lavatory for the use of employees who are exposed to poisonous or injurious dusts, fumes and gases, and such lavatory shall be kept in a clean and wholesome manner and be provided with a sufficient number of basins or splotts, with adequate washing facilities, including hot and cold water, clean towels and soap and shower bath, and the dressing rooms shall be furnished with clothes presses or compartments so that the ordinary street clothes of the employees shall be kept separate from their working clothes.

No employee shall be allowed to take any food or drink into the working room nor shall they be permitted to remain there during meal time. The employer must make provision enabling employees to take their meals elsewhere in the place of employment and he must provide sanitary closed receptacles containing wholesome drinking water. Employers are required to provide adequate devices for carrying off all poisonous fumes from furnaces and dust from the rooms. The floors are to be smooth and hard and no sweeping shall be allowed during working hours unless the floors are dampened. They are to be washed at least once a day. The act requires employers to take certain precautions in the use of flues, hoppers, chutes or similar devices to prevent employees from coming into unnecessary contact with injurious gases, fumes and dust.

The act is to be enforced by the state department of factory inspection. Any person, firm or corporation violating any of the terms of the act, or who omits or fails to comply with any of its requirements or interferes with any investigation by the factory inspectors, or any employee who violates any of the provisions of the act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction shall be punished for the first offense by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100; for the second or subsequent offenses he shall be fined not less than $50 nor more than $200. For any injury to health caused by a willful failure to comply with the law, a right of action shall accrue to the party whose health has been injured for any direct damages sustained. In case death is caused by such willful failure, a right of action shall accrue to the widow or heirs to recover damages not to exceed $10,000. (Approved May 26, 1911.)

HOURS OF WORK OF WOMEN.

Sections 1 and 2 of the act of 1909 regulating the hours of labor of women are amended and section 5 is added. The title is also amended. Section 1 now provides that no female shall be employed in any mechanical or mercantile establishment or factory or laundry or hotel or restaurant or telegraph or telephone establishment or office thereof or in any place of amusement or by any person, firm or corporation engaged in any express or transportation or public utility business or by any common carrier or in any public institution, incorporated or unincorporated, in this state more than ten hours in any one day. The hours of work may be so arranged as to permit the employment of females so that they shall not work more than ten hours during the twenty-four hours of any day. Violations of the act are punishable by a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100 for each offense.

Section 5 provides that every employer to whom this act shall apply shall keep a time book or record showing for each day that the establishment is open the hours during which each female in his employ, to whom the act applies, is employed. Failure to keep such a record or any false statement therein is punishable by a fine of $25 for each offense. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

MINING COMMISSION.

There is to be established a commission to be known as the mining investigation commission of the state of Illinois, consisting of three coal mine owners and three coal miners appointed by the governor, together with three qualified men not interested in coal mining in any way, who shall be appointed by the governor. The commission shall have the power to investigate the methods and conditions of mining coal in the state of Illinois with special reference to the safety of human lives and property and the conservation of the coal deposits. The members who are coal mine owners or coal miners shall receive no compensation, but the other three members are to be paid at the rate of $10 per day for each day actually employed by them as commissioners. The sum of $10,000 is appropriated for the expenses of the commission. (Approved May 27, 1911.)

MINERS' AND MECHANICS' INSTITUTES.

In order to prevent accidents in mines and other industrial plants and to conserve the resources of the state, by the education and training of all classes of workers in mines and industrial plants, there shall be established a form of educational betterment work to be known as the Illinois Miners' and Mechanics' Institutes. In the development of this purpose any and all means may be employed, such as traveling libraries, lectures, correspondence, work, classes for systematic instruction or meetings for the reading and discussion of papers. The administration of the institutes is placed in the trustees of the University of Illinois. (Approved May 25, 1911.)

SAFETY IN COAL MINES.

The laws in relation to coal mines and subjects relating thereto and providing for the health and safety of persons employed therein are revised. The act provides for the appointment of a state mining board by the governor, the board to consist of five members, two of whom shall be coal miners, one a coal mine hoisting engineer and two coal operators. They are to serve for two years and shall be paid at the rate of $5 a day for not exceeding 100 days in any one year, with allowances for actual expenses. The salary of the chief clerk shall be $2,000 a year. Numerous provisions are made for inspection and for the operation of coal mines. (Approved June 6, 1911.)

FIRE APPARATUS.

The act of March 8, 1910, in relation to the fire fighting equipment of coal mines is revised. It provides for the use of water supply pipes and hose connections, automatic sprinklers and fire extinguishers; regulates the construction of underground stables and requires the use of telephones and the drilling of employes to meet fire and other emergencies. (Approved June 7, 1911.)

OIL AND GAS WELLS.

No oil or gas well shall hereafter be drilled nearer than 250 feet to any mine opening used as a means of egress or ingress by mine employes. Information concerning and maps of gas and oil wells are to be filed with the state mining board. Provision is made for the proper casing of such wells and for their plugging in case of abandonment. (Approved June 7, 1911.)

BLACK BLASTING POWDER.

The act specifies the kind of black blasting powder to be used in coal mines and provides for the testing of such powder. (Approved June 7, 1911.)

FACTORY INSPECTORS.

Section 2 of the factory inspection act of 1907 is amended so as to authorize the governor to appoint a chief state factory inspector at a salary of $3,000 a year, one assistant chief factory inspector at a salary of $2,250, one physician at a salary of $1,500, thirty deputy factory inspectors at a salary of $1,200 each and an attorney for the department at a salary of $1,500. (Approved June 5, 1911.)

CIVIL SERVICE.

STATE.

The act amends sections 3, 4, 6, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 14 and adds sections 2a and 3b to the act of 1905. Section 3a is as follows:

"The commission shall ascertain the duties of each office and place in the classified service and designate by rule the grade of each position. Each grade shall comprise offices and places having substantially similar duties. The commission shall by rule indicate the lines of promotion from each lower grade to a higher grade wherever the experience derived in the performance of the duties of such lower grade tends to qualify for performance of duty in such higher grade. The commission shall by rule prescribe standards of efficiency for each grade and for examinations of candidates for appointment thereto. For the purpose of establishing uniformity of pay and title for all offices and places of employment classified in the same grade, it shall be the duty of the commission to prescribe by rule the maximum and minimum pay for each grade and the title thereof and to report to the governor annually, and at such times as he may direct, the name and address of each officer and employe paid more or less than the pay prescribed for his grade or designated by a title other than that prescribed for his grade by the commission.

"The commission shall standardize employment in each grade and keep a record of the relative efficiency of each officer and employe in the classified service. It shall provide by rule methods for ascertaining and verifying the facts from which such record of relative efficiency shall be made, which shall be uniform for each grade of the classified service."

Section 3b follows: "All persons who, when this act takes effect, shall hold offices or places of employment, other than those exempted in section 11 of this act, shall be classified under the provisions of this act and shall become members of the classified state civil service without original examination."

Section 11 of the act specifies what state officers and employes are not included in the classified service as follows: All officers elected by the people; all officers, boards and commissioners appointed by the governor subject to confirmation by the senate;

all officers and employes of the general assembly or either house thereof; judges and officers appointed by judges of any court, clerks of court, notaries public; persons employed in the military service of the state; all presidents, deans, professors, instructors, scientific staff and other teachers in the University of Illinois and the normal schools; employes at the executive mansion; all regular and special assistants attorney-general, including the inheritance tax attorney and assistant inheritance tax attorney of Cook county and all special attorneys employed by the attorney-general, or by any board, superintendent or officer; building and loan and bank examiners, superintendents, wardens and chaplains of the state charitable, correctional and penal institutions; one private secretary and stenographer in each of the elective offices and in the office of the presidents of the University of Illinois and the normal schools, and all clerks and watchmen in the respective offices of governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, state treasurer, auditor of public accounts and superintendent of public instruction.

The other amendments relate to rules, examinations, promotion, removals, reductions, suspensions and investigations and are of less importance. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

COUNTY (COOK).

It is enacted that in all counties of this state having 150,000 or more inhabitants, all the offices and places of employment in the service of such counties, and all offices and places of employment the salaries or wages for which are paid in whole or in part out of funds appropriated by the county board of such county, except those exempted in section 11 of the act, shall be classified and filled in the manner provided for. The president of the county board shall, with the consent of a majority of the members of the county board, appoint three persons who shall constitute the county civil service commission. No county civil service commissioner shall be removed except for palpable incompetence or malfeasance in office upon written charges and after an opportunity to be heard in his own defense. Charges shall be heard and determined by a trial board consisting of the county judge, the circuit judge or chief justice of the Circuit court if there be more than one judge and a third person to be selected by the two judges which third person shall be a circuit judge in the same or an adjoining circuit.

The commission shall within six months after the act goes into effect classify all offices and places of employment in the county and the offices and places so classified shall constitute the classified civil service of the county. As a part of such classified service all officers and employes of the commission, except special examiners, shall be included; Provided, that all attending physicians and surgeons, who serve without compensation, in any public institution in such county devoted to the care of the sick, poor and insane, and who are made a part of the classified civil service, shall be appointed for such term as the commission shall by rule prescribe, and that the physicians and surgeons usually designated as internes, who are also made a part of the classified civil service, shall be appointed for such term as the commission shall by rule prescribe; provided, further, that there may also be a consulting staff of physicians and surgeons appointed by the county board.

The standardization provision in the county civil service act is the same as in the state civil service act. (See section 3a in preceding summary of state civil service act.)

Section 11 specifies the offices and places of employment not included in the classified civil service of the county as follows: All elective offices; all officers whose appointment is provided for by the constitution; judges and officers appointed by judges of any court; the county attorney and assistant county attorneys; the superintendent of public service; judges and clerks of elections; jailer, one assistant sheriff, a chief deputy and a confidential clerk or private secretary and all attorneys employed by or for each elective official, all assistant state's attorneys in the state's attorney's office and the attorney for the civil service commission, the warden of the county hospital, the superintendent of the county hospital, the superintendent of the poorhouse, the county agent, the county physician, the county architect and the committee clerk of the county board; Provided, however, that officers of any election commission in such county shall be included in the classified civil service.

The provisions of the act regarding rules, examinations, registers, promotions, appointments, transfers, removals, efficiency investigations and reports are practically the same as in other civil service laws. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

IN PARK SYSTEMS.

All offices and places of employment other than the office of park commissioner in any park district having 150,000 or more inhabitants shall be classified and filled in accordance with the provisions of this act. There is established in each park district a civil service board to consist of three persons, one of whom is to be a superintendent of employment and two of whom are to be park commissioners. The superintendent of employment is to be appointed for a term of six years and be paid a salary of not less than $3,000 a year. The other two members are to receive not more than $500 each a year. All persons who at the time when this act takes effect hold offices or places of employment in any park district to which the act applies and who are not exempted shall become members of the classified civil service of such park district without original examination. The exemptions are: All elective officers, the general superintendent, the attorneys and one confidential clerk or secretary. The provisions as to rules, examinations, appointments, removals, etc., are the same as in the other civil service acts. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

PENSION FUNDS.

MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEES.

Hereafter in cities, villages and incorporated towns having a population exceeding 100,000 there shall be created and maintained a pension fund for municipal employes who are in the civil service of such cities, villages or towns and for those who were appointed prior to the passage of the civil service act of 1895 and who are now in the service; Provided, however, that this act shall not apply to probationary or sixty day employes, nor to any employe who is 60 years or more of age and who has not been in the service for at least ten years, nor to those participating in other municipal pension funds. Laborers also are excluded except under certain conditions.

The pension fund shall consist of $2 a month retained or deducted by the comptroller from the salaries or wages of each employe. A board composed of the comptroller and treasurer and three employes shall constitute a board of trustees to carry out the provisions of the act. The three members of the board who are employes shall be elected the first time for terms of one, two and three years and after that for terms of three years. The first election shall be arranged for by the comptroller and treasurer, but subsequent elections shall be held under rules established by the board of trustees. The board shall hold quarterly meetings on the first Tuesday of July, October, January and April of each year.

The board shall have power to authorize all payments from the pension fund, which shall include pensions to beneficiaries of the fund at the rate of $50 per month, to determine all applications for pensions, to audit the accounts, to accept gifts or bequests and to invest the funds. It also has the power to authorize the payment to any employe who may be separated from the service by the abolition of his or her position before such employe shall have qualified for a pension, an amount equal to the amount deducted from the salary or wages of such employe. The treasurer of the city, village or town shall be the custodian of the fund. No employe shall become a beneficiary, nor shall pensions or benefits of any kind be allowed or paid until five years after the act is in force.

Any employe who shall have been in the service not less than twenty years and who shall have attained the age of 55 years shall have the right to retire from the service of the city, village or town at any time after this act is in force and become a beneficiary at any time subsequent to five years from the date when this act is in force: Provided, such employe shall in the event that he or she shall retire from the service within the five year period pay into the fund the sum of $2 per month until he or she shall become a beneficiary hereunder: Provided, further, that any such employe who shall retire from the service before deduction shall have been made from the salary or wages of such employe for a period of twenty years shall agree to pay into the fund within three years from the date when such employe shall become a beneficiary of the fund the sum which together with all moneys previously deducted is equal to the full amount which would have been deducted during a period of twenty years and interest thereon at 5 per cent per annum.

Any employe who has been in the service not less than twenty years and who shall retire from the service before attaining the age of 55 years shall have the right to continue paying into the fund monthly at the prescribed rate and may thereby remain in good standing and shall have the right to become a beneficiary upon attaining the age of 55 years; Provided, such employe shall, in the event that he or she retires from the service before deduction shall have been made for a period of twenty years, pay into the fund within thirty days from the date of retirement a sum which, together with all moneys previously deducted, is equal to the full amount which would have been deducted during a period of twenty years.

Any employe who has been in the service for five years or more from the date when this act is in force shall have the right to retire on account of serious disability and be entitled to receive the full benefits for a period of not more than two years, which period may be extended upon satisfactory proof of continued disability.

Pensions are not subject to attachment or garnishment or levy for debt, and are not transferable or assignable by way of mortgage or otherwise. (Approved May 31, 1911.)

HOUSE OF CORRECTION.

The board of inspectors of the various houses of correction in cities having a population exceeding 150,000 inhabitants is required to create a house of correction employes' pension fund to consist of 2 per cent of the wages of the employes, deducted in equal monthly instalments, and 2 per cent of the earnings of the house of correction. The city treasurer is to have charge of the fund, which is to be administered by a board of trustees of five members consisting of the chairman of the board of inspectors, the superintendent of the house of correction, two employes contributing to the fund and one other of the board of inspectors. Any contributor to the fund who shall have attained the age of 50 years and shall have been in the service twenty years, having contributed for the same period, shall have the right to retire and become a beneficiary under the act and to receive an annuity proportionate to the amount of his contributions. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

MUNICIPAL COURT.

Sections 8, 15 and 17 of the Municipal court act of 1905 are amended and sections 14a and 14b are added. In section C it is provided that the chief justice shall appoint in accordance with the city civil service act such number of assistants, not exceeding four, as he may deem necessary, whose salaries shall be fixed by the majority of judges. Sections 14a and 14b provide that all offices and places of employment, except the offices filled by election, in the Municipal court of Chicago, shall be deemed to be within the city civil service act. If the act is approved by the people the civil service commissioners of Chicago shall, within ninety days after the adoption of the act, classify all the offices and places of employment in the service of the Municipal court, other than those filled by election, and all persons then holding office or employment shall be deemed to be members of the classified service without examination. The chief justice, the clerk and the bailiff of the Municipal court shall be deemed to be heads of departments within the meaning of the civil service act.

Section 15 provides that the clerk of the Municipal court shall appoint his deputies in accordance with the city civil service act and such deputy clerks shall not be removed or discharged except in accordance with the city civil service act. Section 17 makes the same provisions with regard to the deputy bailiffs. The act is to be submitted to a vote of the legal electors of Chicago at the first regular municipal, judicial, general or special election held after July 1, 1911. If a majority of those voting on the question favor consenting to the act it shall at once become operative. (Approved June 9, 1911.)

PARK POLICE.

Whenever any board of park commissioners have established a police force there shall be set apart for a park police pension fund 1½ per cent per month, deducted from the salary of each member of the force: Provided, no such member shall pay more than $3 a month from his salary; all moneys from fines imposed upon members of the police force; all rewards given the police except such as shall be excepted by the chief officer of the department, and all fines and penalties collected for violations of park ordinances in all cases in which arrests are made by officers of the department. A board of five trustees shall administer the fund. Three of the trustees to be appointed by the president of the board of commissioners, one shall be chosen from among the active police and one from the pensioners. The length of service required is twenty years and the retiring pension is to be one-half the amount of the salary received during the last year of service, but the maximum pension shall not exceed $900 a year nor the minimum be less than $600 a year. (Approved May 31, 1911.)

POLICE MATRONS.

The police pension fund act of 1887 is amended by the addition of a new section bringing police matrons within the provisions of the law. The period of service required is twenty years and the yearly pension is an amount equal to half the salary attached to the rank occupied during last year of service. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

TEACHERS.

The teachers' pension law is amended so as to include districts of 1,000 to 100,000 population. (Approved June 6, 1911.)

COURTS.

MUNICIPAL COURT OF CHICAGO.

Sections 2, 8, 14, 16, 17, 22, 28, 29, 30, 32, 48, 62 and 63 of the Municipal court act of 1905 are amended and section 50e is added. Among the amendments are the following: At least one associate judge must be in attendance at some convenient branch court in the first district from 7:30 p. m. to midnight on each day of the week except Sunday for the hearing and disposition of such criminal and quasi criminal business as may be brought before him. The chief justice may appoint a number of assistants, not exceeding four, who shall have power to administer oaths and shall perform such duties as may be assigned to them, but shall not exercise judicial functions.

The salary of the chief justice shall be $10,000 per annum and the salary of the associate judges shall be $9,000 per annum, but the salary of no judge shall be increased or diminished during the term for which he was elected. The salary of the clerk of the Municipal court shall be fixed by the city council until the first Monday of December, 1912, and thereafter it shall be $9,000 per year. The salary of the bailiff of the Municipal court shall be $9,960 after December, 1912. The salary of the chief deputy bailiff shall be $4,000 per annum; of the assistant chief deputy bailiff, $2,500 per annum. One additional deputy bailiff may be appointed at a salary of $2,500 and two additional bailiffs may be appointed at a salary of $2,000 each per annum. The salary of no other deputy bailiff shall exceed $2,000 per annum. Other amendments relate to appeals and methods of practice. The act must be consented to by a vote of the legal voters of Chicago before going into effect. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

SUPERIOR COURT JUDGES.

Each of the sitting judges of the Superior court of Cook county shall hold his office until the expiration of the term for which he was elected and from and after the passage of this act the twelve judges of the Superior court of Cook county shall be elected as follows:

One judge on the first Monday in June, 1915, and every six years thereafter.

Six judges on the first Monday in June, 1916, and every six years thereafter.

Four judges on Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, 1911, and every six years thereafter.

One judge on the first Tuesday in April, 1913, and every six years thereafter.

Each of the judges so elected shall enter upon the duties of his office on the first Monday in December next after his election. (Approved June 5, 1911.)

INCREASE IN NUMBER.

As it appears by the federal census of 1910 that the number of inhabitants in Cook county is over 2,400,000, and as therefore the general assembly is authorized under the constitution of the state to provide for additional judges of the Circuit or Superior courts of Cook county, the number of Superior court judges is increased from twelve to eighteen. On the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in 1911 and every six years thereafter six additional Superior court judges shall be elected to hold their offices for a term of six years. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

PROBATION SYSTEM.

Courts having criminal and quasi criminal jurisdiction are given power to release on probation first offenders, adult or juvenile, found guilty of violations of municipal ordinances where the offense is also a violation of a statute; misdemeanors, the obtaining of money or property under false pretenses where the value does not exceed $200; larceny, embezzlement and malicious mischief where the property taken or injury done does not exceed $200 in value; burglary in a place other than a business house or habitation where amount taken does not exceed $200, and attempted burglary of like nature. Various conditions to be imposed upon persons released upon probation are specified and provision is made for the appointment by the Circuit courts of probation officers. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

APPELLATE COURTS.

The judges of the Supreme court are empowered to employ such a number of competent judges as they may deem necessary to assist the judges of any Appellate court for the speedy disposition of the business of such court. Such employment may be terminated by the Supreme court. (Approved May 29, 1911.)

BRANCH APPELLATE COURTS.

Whenever the number of cases reported as pending before any Appellate court and each branch thereof shall exceed 250 it shall be the duty of the Supreme court to assign three other judges of the Circuit court or of the Superior court of Cook county to duty in such Appellate court. (Approved June 6, 1911.)

FEES OF JURORS.

Fees of grand and petit jurors in courts of record are fixed at $3 per day and 5 cents a mile for necessary traveling expenses. Fees of jurors in trials of insane are fixed at $2 per day. (Approved June 5, 1911.)

PARKS.

STARVED ROCK STATE PARK.

It shall be the duty of the governor to appoint a commission to be known as the Illinois park commission, to consist of three members, only two of whom are to be of the same political party. One is to serve one year, one two years and the third three years; after that the term is to be three years for all. They are to serve without compensation. The park commission shall have power to take care of and manage all state parks acquired under this act or acquired hereafter, to make rules for the same and to have charge of all the necessary employes. Section 4 of the act provides that a tract of land in LaSalle county consisting of 1,155.56 acres shall be secured by the commission and be set apart for a state park, which shall be known as "The Starved Rock State Park." The land so acquired shall make one contiguous and compact tract and shall include within its area Starved Rock proper. The sum of $150,900 is appropriated for the acquisition of the property by negotiation or by condemnation proceedings. No liquor is to be sold in any state park. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

PARK DISTRICTS.

The park district act of 1893 is amended so as to make the park engineer, the chairman of the finance committee and the president of the board a board of local improvements; the secretary of the board of trustees shall be secretary ex-officio of the board of local improvements and collector of special taxes or special assessments. The mode of making such special assessments shall be the same as provided by law for making special assessments for improvements in cities of more than 50,000 inhabitants. Power is conferred upon the park trustees to appropriate money for musical concerts. The regular election of president and trustees of any park district shall take place on the third Tuesday of July every two years. (Approved June 7, 1911.)

PARK ADDITIONS.

Whenever in any park district located in cities having a population in excess of 100,000 the number of inhabitants shall exceed the ratio of 500 inhabitants to each acre of parks, the commissioners are authorized to buy or obtain by gift or condemnation or otherwise land for the purpose of creating additional parks and pleasure grounds. Power to issue bonds for the acquisition of such land is given and to levy additional taxes for the payment of the interest and principal of such bonds. (Approved May 25, 1911.)

PARKS IN CONTIGUOUS TERRITORY.

Every board of public park commissioners shall have the power to locate and maintain parks and boulevards in any territory directly contiguous to the park district over which it now has jurisdiction with the consent of the voters and authorities of such contiguous territory. (Approved May 25, 1911.)

LINCOLN PARK BOND ISSUE.

The commissioners of Lincoln park, Chicago, are authorized to issue from time to time bonds not exceeding the total amount of $875,000 for the purpose of enlarging and improving Lincoln park and for completing work already begun. The question of issuing bonds must, however, be submitted to the voters of the district for their consent. (Approved March 21, 1911.) [At the election held April 5, 1911, the voters of the Lincoln park district approved an ordinance for the issuing of $875,000 in bonds.]

FIELD MUSEUM SITE.

The act concerning museums in public parks is amended so as to permit the directors or trustees of any museum devoted to the collection and display of objects pertaining to natural history or the arts and sciences to erect and maintain its museum within any public park. (Approved May 25, 1911.) [The act applies to the Field museum site in Jackson park, Chicago.]

LAND FOR EVANSTON PARK.

All the state land in the city of Evanston south of University place, extended east, and north of Greenleaf street, extended east, adjacent to and fronting on Lake Michigan, and all the right, title and interest of the state in and to the submerged land beyond the tract described to the line of commercial navigability, are granted and conveyed to the city of Evanston for park and boulevard purposes. (Approved May 22, 1911.)

WILMETTE PARK LAND.

All the land made by the sanitary district of Chicago at Wilmette by filling in the bed of Lake Michigan, having for its outer boundary the breakwater, is granted to the Wilmette park district for park purposes. (Approved May 25, 1911.)

RAILROAD AND WAREHOUSE COMMISSION.

The act of 1871 establishing a board of railroad and warehouse commissioners is revised by amendments to many sections and by the addition of several new sections. The chairman of the commission is to receive $6,000 a year, the other commissioners $4,000 each, and the secretary $3,500. Every railroad company or other common carrier is to report to the commissioners, specifying:

1. Names and residences of stockholders and amount of stock owned by each.
2. Assets and liabilities.
3. Names and residence of officers.
4. Funded debt.
5. Floating debt.
6. Estimated value of roadbed.
7. Value of rolling stock.
8. Value of stations, buildings and fixtures.
9. Value of other property.
10. Length of single main track.
11. Length of main double track.
12. Length of branches and whether single or double track.
13. Aggregate length of other tracks.
14. Miles run by passenger trains in year.
15. Number of miles run by freight trains.
16. Tons of through freight carried.
17. Tons of local freight carried.
18. Expenses of running passenger trains.
19. Expenses of running freight and mixed trains.
20. All other expenses of road; salaries of officers to be reported separately.
21. Expenditures for repairs of road and maintenance of way.
22. Expenditures for improvement.
23. Expenditures for motive power and cars.
24. Expenditures for stations, buildings and fixtures.
25. All other expenses for maintenance of way.
26. All other expenditures.
27. Rate of passenger fares, through and way, separately.
28. Tariff of freights, showing changes, with copies of such tariffs.
29. Copies of each published rate of fare for passengers and tariff of freight, issued for the government of its agents.
30. Whether such rates and tariffs are the same as those actually received; if not, what were received.
31. What express companies run on its roads, on what terms and conditions and kind of business done by them.
32. What freight and transportation companies run on its road and on what terms.
33. Whether such freight and transportation companies use cars of the road or cars furnished by themselves.
34. Whether the freight cars of such companies are given any preference in speed or order.
35. What running arrangements it has with other railroads and the contracts for the same.

Various sections of the act are amended so as to apply to "other common carriers" not included in the original act. The new sections give the commission jurisdiction over all common carriers within the state, including in that term all railroad corporations, express companies, steamboat lines, private car line companies, sleeping car companies, fast freight line companies and all corporations, persons, trustees, lessees and receivers operating the same. The commission is given power to establish joint classifications, through rates and joint rates as the maximum to be charged by common carriers for the transportation of persons and property between points wholly within the state. It is also empowered to fix rates, rules and regulations regarding demurrage, storage and all other charges incident to transportation, to compel physical connections between railroad companies; to establish switching rates, rules and regulations; to inquire into the business management of all common carriers, their rates and the relation of such carriers to the public and to each other; to receive and adjust complaints of shippers for loss or damage to property in the hands of common carriers and in general to hear and determine all questions arising under the act. The commissioners are directed to make for each of the common carriers in the state a schedule of reasonable maximum rates or charges, classification, rules and regulations for the transportation of persons or property on or by each of such common carriers between points wholly within the state. Such schedule is to be taken in all courts as prima facie evidence that the rates therein fixed are reasonable maximum rates. The commissioners may from time to time revise these schedules. The act, in effect, gives the railroad and warehouse commission the same powers with respect to common carriers within the state of Illinois as the interstate commerce act gives the interstate commerce commission with respect to common carriers engaged in interstate business. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

EXPRESS BUSINESS REGULATED.

It is enacted that all express companies engaged in carrying merchandise, property, parcels, packages, money and other commodities between points within the state of Illinois shall be placed under the jurisdiction of the railroad and warehouse commission of the state. Such commission is given power to establish reasonable and just rates or schedules of maximum express charges and, in general, to exercise the same powers with respect to express companies as it is authorized to exercise with respect to railroads and other common carriers in the state as set forth in the preceding summary. (Approved June 9, 1911.)

RIVERS AND LAKES COMMISSION.

The governor is to appoint a rivers and lakes commission for Illinois to consist of three members, not more than two of whom shall be of the same political party. One shall be a civil engineer, one a lawyer and one a man intimately acquainted with the lakes and rivers of the state, but who is neither a lawyer nor a civil engineer. One is to be appointed for one year, one for two years and one for three years, but thereafter the terms are all to be three years. The salary of the chairman is to be $5,000 a year and of the other two members $3,500 each a year. The members are to devote their entire time to the duties of the commission.

The commission shall have jurisdiction and supervision over all of the rivers and lakes of Illinois in which the state has any right or interest. It shall be the duty of the commission to obtain all possible information, including surveys, maps, river gauges and other data, with reference to the waters of the state, and to see that such waters shall not be encroached upon in any way by private interests. Where such encroachments are found, legal action is to be taken to protect the interests of the state. Complaints are to be investigated as to attempts to interfere with the free and unobstructed navigation of any of the public bodies of water and as to attempts to assert any unlawful rights or exclusive privileges or franchises with reference to docks, landings, wharves or the free access to and egress from any navigable body of water in the state. If such complaints are found to be justified the commission is to take such action as may be necessary to correct the wrongful act or evil.

It shall be the duty of the commission to collect all obtainable data with reference to deep waterways within the state, to disseminate such information and to take such action as will permit and encourage every available use of the public bodies of water in the state for navigation and carrying trade. It shall be the duty of the commission to make a careful investigation of rivers and lakes in the state and ascertain to what extent, if at all, the same have been encroached upon by private interests or individuals, and wherever they believe that the same have been encroached upon to begin appropriate action either to recover full compensation for such wrongful encroachment or to recover the use of the same or of any lands unlawfully made in connection with public river or lake for the use of the people of Illinois.

It shall be the duty of the commission to devise methods for the preservation and beautifying of the public waters of the state and to furnish at actual cost to any person or persons who may wish to reclaim, drain or cultivate any wash or overflowed lands in connection with the public waters of the state all needful data available. It shall also be the duty of the commission to devise plans for the reservation by the state of desirable tracts of land in connection with the public waters of the state to the end that public reservations or preserves may be made for the use of all the people, to obtain data as to the availability of the various streams for water power, to make particular research into the natural resources of the state in connection with the public waters, to co-operate with the fish commission in devising ways and means of propagating fish in such waters, to make a careful investigation of the streams of the state with reference to their carrying capacity in times of flood and to see to it that such carrying capacity is not limited and impaired by encroachments.

It shall be the duty of the commission to carefully examine the shore lines of Lake Michigan and the Chicago river not less than four times each year, for the purpose of seeing that encroachments are not made upon these bodies of water and that land is not made encroaching upon the lake or river. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

MOTOR VEHICLES AND ROADS.

Motor vehicles, including automobiles and motorcycles, must be registered in the office of the secretary of state. The registration fee for motorcycles is $2 a year and for automobiles of twenty-five horse power or less, $4; of more than twenty-five up to thirty-five horse power, $6; of more than thirty-five up to fifty horse power, $8, and of more than fifty horse power, $10; and for electric automobiles, $10. The number plates to be issued by the secretary of state shall be of a distinctly different shape and color each year.

No person shall drive an automobile or motorcycle upon any public highway at a speed greater than is reasonable and proper, having regard to the traffic, or so as to endanger the life or limb or injure the property of any person. Speed in the business portions of cities, towns or villages shall not exceed ten miles an hour, in the residence portions of such places it shall not exceed fifteen miles an hour, in other places within the limits of such places it shall not exceed twenty miles an hour and on the country roads it shall not exceed twenty-five miles an hour. The speed in turning corners is limited to six miles an hour.

No owner of an automobile or motorcycle, except motor trucks and motor driven commercial vehicles, who has paid the state registration fee shall be required to pay any tax or license imposed by local ordinances in excess of $10 for motor vehicles of less than thirty-five horse power or more than $20 for vehicles of more than thirty-five horse power used for the transportation of persons after May 1, 1912, nor shall he be subject to any other speed ordinances except those fixed by this act or by park or cemetery ordinances. Violations of the act are punishable by fines of from $10 to $100 and revocation of license. All fines shall be used in repairing and improving the roads within the city, town, village or road district where the violations occur and the fines are imposed. All the registration and other fees received by the secretary of state under the provisions of the act, less expenses, shall be deposited in the state treasury and set apart as a road fund, which shall be used solely for the permanent improvement of the public highways of the state outside the cities, towns and villages. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

WIDTH OF TIRES.

It shall be unlawful for any person to haul over any turnpike, gravel or macadam road at any time when it is raining or rough or by reason of wet weather is in a condition to be cut up and injured by heavy hauling, a load on any vehicle with tires less than three inches in width, when the combined weight of load, vehicle and driver is more than 2,500 pounds; when such weight is more than 3,000 pounds the tires must not be less than four inches in width; when it is 3,500 pounds the tires must not be less than five inches in width and when it is more than 3,500 pounds the tires must be five inches or more in width. (Approved June 5, 1911.)

MUNICIPAL HARBORS.

Every city in this state shall have the power to acquire, own, construct, maintain and operate any where within the limits of the city or in, over or upon any public waters bordering thereon, harbors, canals, wharves, docks, piers, slips, levees and all appropriate harbor facilities and in connection therewith to own, build and maintain such elevators, vaults and warehouses as may be a necessary adjunct to transportation, railroad tracks and terminals, and all other necessary terminal facilities; to lease particular portions of any of these utilities to persons, firms or private corporations for the purpose of using the same for a period not longer than twenty years, and to fix and regulate the rates and charges for the use of such utilities whether owned and operated by the city or by persons, firms or private corporations: Provided, that except as to railroad facilities at least one-third capacity of each utility shall not be leased for a period to exceed one year and that at least one-half of the one-third shall at all times be reserved by the city for public use, and that not to exceed 50 per cent in capacity of the remaining two-thirds capacity of each such utility shall be leased to any one person, firm or private corporation: Provided, that no leases shall contain conditions admitting of any unjust or undue preference between lessees.

Every city in the state shall also have the right to use, occupy or reclaim submerged lands under the public waters of the state for harbor purposes. Any city may grant its consent to the construction of harbor facilities by any municipal or public corporation other than a city, authorized by law to construct and operate such utilities, and such city shall have the right to purchase the same.

No ordinance providing for the leasing by any city of a particular portion of any harbor or harbor facility for any period in excess of five years, or prescribing the location where the harbor or harbor utilities shall be constructed, shall go into effect until ninety days after the passage thereof and if within such ninety days a petition shall be filed in the office of the city clerk signed by at least 5 per cent of the registered voters of the city, as shown by the last preceding election for mayor, requesting that such ordinance be submitted to popular vote, it shall be the duty of the election officials to submit to the voters a question of whether or not such ordinance shall be approved and such ordinance shall not go into effect until it shall have been approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

MANUAL LABOR AND PUBLIC WORK.

It is enacted in an amendment to the act of 1872 providing for the incorporation of cities and villages that any work or public improvement, except such as is paid for by special assessment, when the expense exceeds $500, shall be constructed either by contract let to the lowest bidder, or by the commissioner of public works, who shall employ for the performance of manual labor exclusively laborers and artisans whom the city or village shall pay by the day or hour. (Approved May 26, 1911.)

FOOD AND SANITARY INSPECTION.

It is enacted that every building, room, basement or inclosure used as bakery, confectionery, cannery, packing house, slaughter house, creamery, cheese factory, restaurant, hotel, grocery, meat market or as a factory, shop, warehouse or establishment for the preparation, manufacture, packing, storage, sale or distribution of any food, which is intended for sale, shall be properly and adequately lighted, drained, plumbed and ventilated and shall be conducted with strict regard to the health of the persons employed therein and the purity and wholesomeness of the food therein prepared, packed, stored or sold. Floors, sidewalks, ceilings, furniture, receptacles, implements and machinery in such places shall not be permitted to remain in an unclean or insanitary condition. Such condition shall be deemed to exist if food is not securely protected from flies, dust and dirt. Sidewalks and ceilings must be so constructed as to be easily kept clean and floors must be made of material that can be flushed and washed. Buildings and other places containing food shall be provided with proper doors and screens and with adequate lavatories separate from the rooms where food is kept. Buildings and rooms not kept according to the foregoing requirements shall be declared nuisances. Cuspidors are to be provided for employes and no employe shall be permitted to expectorate on floors, sidewalks or utensils. No person shall be allowed to sleep in any room where food is prepared. The state food commissioner is empowered to enforce the provisions of the act. Violations of the act are misdemeanors punishable by fines of from $10 to $200 or by imprisonment for ninety days or both. (Approved June 5, 1911.)

COMMON DRINKING CUP PROHIBITED.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, directly or indirectly, connected in any public or private school or in any state institution, halls used for public meetings or entertainments, hotels, lodging houses, theaters, factories or public or municipal buildings in the state of Illinois to use or permit for use a common drinking cup, glass or other utensil used for public drinking purposes.

It shall be unlawful for any person or corporation in charge of any railroad trains or any station to permit the use of any common drinking cup in or about any train operated by it or in any building used by it.

Any person, firm or corporation who shall violate any of the provisions of the act shall, upon conviction, be fined for each offense not less than $5 nor more than $50. (Approved June 5, 1911.)

TUBERCULIN TEST.

It shall be unlawful for any city, village, incorporated town, county or other incorporated authority by ordinance or otherwise to require the tuberculin test to be applied to dairy animals as a means of regulating and purifying milk, skimmed milk, cream and other dairy products. Every such ordinance or regulation passed by any corporate authority other than the state of Illinois is declared void. (Filed June 12, 1911; became a law without the governor's signature.)

ARMORIES.

The act creates a commission to consist of the adjutant-general, division commander and the regimental commanders of the organizations concerned to select suitable sites and to erect armories for the use of the following organizations:

1. Second Infantry, Chicago; cost, $200,000.
2. Company E, 5th Infantry; company I, 8th Infantry, and the Illinois naval reserve, Quincy; $45,000.
3. Headquarters, company D and company I, 3d Infantry, Aurora; $35,000.
4. Company G, 3d Infantry, Woodstock; $15,000.
5. Eighth Infantry, Chicago; $100,000.

The sum of $395,000 is appropriated to carry the act into effect. (Approved June 9, 1911.)

SECOND REGIMENT ARMORY.

The governor and the adjutant-general are constituted a commission for the purpose of selling and conveying all the right, title and interest of the state in and to the building and land now owned by the state and occupied by the 2d regiment, I. N. G., Chicago, for an armory. The money received is to be covered into the state treasury. (Approved June 9, 1911.)

THE ADJUTANT-GENERAL.

The adjutant-general and his assistants shall be men of military training and experience and each shall have had service as an officer of not less than five years, at least three of which shall have been in the line. (Approved June 2, 1911.)

SURGICAL INSTITUTE FOR CHILDREN.

There is authorized to be established an institution for the surgical treatment of children under the age of 14 years suffering from physical deformities or injuries of a nature which may yield to surgical treatment, and which unless so treated will probably make such children, in whole or in part, in after life, public charges. Such institute shall be known as the Illinois surgical institute for children. The children to be received are such as have parents and guardians who are financially unable to provide surgical treatment. It is to be under control of the state board of administration.

(Approved June 6, 1911.) There is appropriated for the construction of a suitable building $60,000 and for the furnishing of the same $15,000. (Approved June 6, 1911.)

STATE HOSPITAL AT DUNNING.

The sum of $111,000 is appropriated for new buildings and for the wrecking of the old almshouse and tubercular building at Dunning, Cook county. (Approved June 7, 1911.) [The insane asylum at Dunning is thus to be transferred from the jurisdiction of the Cook county commissioners to the state board of administration.]

OTHER NEW STATE INSANE HOSPITALS.

There is created and established a state hospital for the insane to be located upon grounds to be selected by the board of administration and to cost, including site of 1,900 acres, not to exceed $1,500,000. The hospital is to accommodate not more than 1,500 inmates. (Approved June 7, 1911.)

There is appropriated to the state board of administration for the purchase of a site and the drawing of plans and the preliminary construction of a state hospital for the insane the sum of $500,000. (Approved May 31, 1911.)

EDUCATION OF DEAF AND DUMB AND BLIND.

Boards of education and school directors are empowered to establish classes and schools for the deaf and dumb and blind between the ages of 3 and 21 and to employ duly qualified superintendents and teachers for such classes and schools. The aggregate excess cost of the maintenance of such classes and schools shall be made a charge against the state and be paid to the board of education. Such excess cost shall not exceed $110 for each deaf and dumb pupil or $160 for each blind pupil. (Approved June 2, 1911.)

EDUCATION OF DELINQUENT CHILDREN.

Boards of education and school directors are empowered to establish classes and schools for delinquent children committed by courts of competent jurisdiction. The excess cost, not exceeding $190 for each pupil, shall be paid by the state. (Approved June 2, 1911.)

COMMISSION FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

Sections 9, 10, 11, 12, 24, 26, 27, 28, 34 and 42 of article XIII, amendatory of the act of 1872 providing for the incorporation of cities and villages, are amended in various particulars. The changes are of a relatively unimportant character with the exception of that in section 42 providing for the recall. The original section made every incumbent of an elective office, whether elected by popular vote or appointed to fill a vacancy, subject to recall and removal. The amended section provides that "every incumbent of an elective office, except a judicial officer and officers of a court, whether elected by a popular vote or appointed to fill a vacancy, is subject to recall and removal." Another important change is that reducing the number of signatures to a recall petition from 75 per cent to 55 per cent. (Approved May 12, 1911.)

BALLOT ARRANGEMENT.

The election law of 1891 is amended so as to require the secretary of state to certify to the county clerk of each county, where more than one candidate has been nominated for any public office, the names of such candidates according to the number of votes received by each at the primary election, the one receiving the largest number of votes to be certified first under the name of the office and so on. The names of candidates of any group of petitioners shall be certified in the order in which such names appear in the petitions. The names of the candidates must be printed on the official ballot in the order in which they are certified by the secretary of state. (Approved June 5, 1911.)

BUILDING LAWS COMMISSION.

The governor is empowered and directed to appoint a commission to be known as "the commission to revise and codify the building laws of the state of Illinois" to be composed of seven members selected as follows: Two architects, one of whom shall be a member of the state board of examiners of architects; two structural engineers, one fire protection expert, one building contractor and one member whose appointment need not be limited as above. The duties of the commission shall be to investigate the building laws of other states and to consider the building laws of this state for the purpose of revising and codifying the building laws of Illinois. The sum of $5,000 is appropriated for the expenses of the commission. (Approved May 25, 1911.)

SUPERVISING ENGINEER.

There is created the office of supervising engineer, whose duties shall be to consult with and advise the general assembly and the board of administration in all matters relating to the construction, repair, equipment and management of state institutions and to prepare necessary plans and estimates. He shall be appointed by the board of administration and shall be paid $4,000 a year. He is not under the civil service. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

EDUCATIONAL BUILDING COMMISSION.

It is enacted that a commission consisting of the governor, secretary of state, superintendent of public instruction, president of the board of trustees of the state historical library, president of the state historical society, auditor of public accounts and the department commander of the state G. A. R. be constituted with power to procure plans and specifications for a suitable building to be erected by the state where all the property pertaining to the history, science, literature, education and patriotism of Illinois now housed in different departments of the state buildings may be placed. To enable the commission to carry out the provisions of the act the sum of $5,000 is appropriated. (Approved May 26, 1911.)

LEVY FOR STATE UNIVERSITY.

There shall be levied and collected for the year 1912 and annually thereafter a mill tax for each dollar of the assessed valuation of the taxable property of the state to be paid into the state treasury and set apart as a fund for the use and maintenance of the University of Illinois. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

INSPECTION OF APIARIES.

The governor shall appoint a state inspector of apiaries, who shall hold office for two years and receive compensation at the rate of $4 per day for each day actually spent in the performance of his duties. It shall be the duty of every person maintaining any colony or colonies of bees to keep the same free from the disease known as foul brood and from other contagious diseases among bees. If the inspector of apiaries shall have reason to believe that any apiary is infected with foul brood or other disease he shall have power to enter upon the premises during reasonable business hours to inspect the apiary. All apiaries where foul brood exists are declared nuisances and the state inspector of apiaries has power to abate them after giving notice, charging the cost to the owners in case they refuse to abate the nuisances themselves. (Approved June 7, 1911.)

EDWARDSVILLE MEMORIAL.

There is appropriated the sum of $5,000 to be expended in the construction and dedication of a suitable monument to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the inauguration of a representative form of government by the election of a legislature by the people of Illinois, the election of the first delegate to congress by popular vote, the establishment of the county of Madison and the seat of justice therein and the erection of Fort Russell as a base of military operation in the war of 1812; the monument to be erected on the site of the first seat of justice of Madison county, in the city of Edwardsville, Ill., or at some other suitable place in that city. (Approved May 25, 1911.)

LAWLER MONUMENT.

The governor is authorized to appoint three commissioners, who are to serve without compensation, to secure a suitable site in the city of Equality, Gallatin county, on which to erect a suitable memorial in the form of a statue to Gen. Michael Kelly Lawler, a hero of the Mexican and civil wars. The sum of $5,000 is appropriated for the purpose. (Approved May 26, 1911.)

KENESAW MOUNTAIN MONUMENT.

There is appropriated the sum of $20,000 to be used for the erection of a monument on the battle field of Kenesaw mountain, Georgia, to the memory of the Illinois soldiers who died there June 27, 1864. (Approved June 9, 1911.)

BATHING BEACHES, FIREWORKS, GARAGES, ETC.

The act of 1872 providing for the incorporation of cities and villages is amended so as to give the city council in cities and the board of trustees in villages power to regulate and prevent the use of fire crackers, torpedoes, skyrockets and other pyrotechnic displays; to regulate sanatoria and undertaking establishments and to direct their location; to direct the location and regulate the use and construction of garages, laundries and bathing beaches; to acquire private lands bordering upon public waters useful for bathing beaches and recreation piers. (Approved June 5, 1911.)

USE OF MUNICIPAL FUNDS.

Every city, incorporated town or village, holding in its treasury any fund set aside for use for some particular purpose, that is not immediately necessary for such purpose, may by ordinance use the money in such fund for the purchase of tax anticipation warrants issued against taxes levied by the city, town or village; such warrants to bear interest not to exceed 4 per cent. (Approved June 5, 1911.)

ANNEXATION LAW.

The annexation act of April 25, 1889, is amended so as to prohibit another election on an annexation question within two years after the same has been voted on. Some minor changes are also made. (Approved June 5, 1911.)

OIL INSPECTORS.

The act of 1874 relating to oil inspection is amended so as to require oil inspectors to turn in all fees to the city, county, village or town treasury. Oil inspectors shall be appointed for terms of one year at a salary not to exceed $5,000. (Approved May 29, 1911.)

DRINKING ON RAILROAD CARS.

Any person who shall drink any intoxicating liquor or who shall be intoxicated in any railroad smoking car, parlor car, day coach, interurban car or caboose car shall upon conviction be fined not less than $25 nor more than $100 or imprisoned in jail for not less than thirty nor more than 100 days or both. Every railroad conductor while on duty is empowered to enforce the act and to arrest any person violating it. Failure on the part of any conductor to comply with this provision shall subject him to a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $25. (Approved May 25, 1911.)

LIQUOR AND SOLDIERS' HOMES.

It shall be unlawful to sell, distribute or give away any malt, spirituous, vinous or intoxicating liquors within two-thirds of mile of the land owned by the state as a soldiers' and sailors' home. (Approved June 10, 1911.)

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION.

The governor of the state is appointed a commissioner for the purpose of making an exhibit of the products and resources of the state at an international exhibition to be held in San Francisco in 1915, known as the Panama-Pacific International exposition. He is to have full charge of the exhibit with power to appoint deputy commissioners. The sum of $2,500 is appropriated for the expenses of the commissioner or a deputy commissioner to visit the site of the exposition and select a location for the Illinois building. (Approved May 31, 1911.)

OTHER LEGISLATION.

Among other laws enacted were these:

Making an appropriation enabling the state entomologist to instruct farmers as to the best methods of combating the chinch bug.

Appropriating $215,000 for new state fair buildings.

Appropriating $5,015 for the expenses of bringing a torpedo boat from Charleston, S. C., to Chicago.

Permitting widows of soldiers or sailors in the soldiers' and sailors' home to remain there during life if they so desire.

Amending incorporation act of 1872 so as to permit the discontinuance of minority representation in the city council.

Authorizing cities and villages to levy for street and bridge purposes a tax in addition to the tax of 1-2-10 per cent on the aggregate valuation as now prescribed by law.

Providing for water districts in counties bordering on Lake Michigan.

Providing for uniform bills of lading.

Making an attempt to injure railroad property a crime punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary for from one to ten years.

Regulating sales by itinerant vendors and punishing frauds in sales by them.

Creating sanitary district (in Lake county).

Prohibiting the use of emery belts or wheels in basements.

Amending game and fish laws.

Fixing fees of circuit and county clerks in counties of the first and second class.

Authorizing governor to offer rewards for arrest of kidnapers.

Providing for the payment into the state treasury of fees, fines and other moneys by state officials and departments.

JOINT RESOLUTIONS.

That a joint committee of ten be appointed to make a general revision of the laws relating to county and township organization.

That a committee of six members be appointed for the purpose of revising and codifying the drainage laws of the state.

That a joint committee of ten be appointed to make an investigation of the questions of classification of physical conditions of property as a basis of fire insurance rates and of old age insurance and to consider and arrange a codification of insurance laws.

LINCOLN WAY.

It is the sense of the people of Illinois that a fitting and permanent memorial to Abraham Lincoln would be the consecration and dedication of the route which he traveled from the place of his birth in Kentucky, through Indiana and thence to his tomb in Illinois, to be known as the "Lincoln Way." The board of trustees of the Illinois State Historical society are requested to make investigations to determine the exact route traveled by Abraham Lincoln on his removal from Kentucky to Illinois and to report to the assembly, making such recommendations as they may deem advisable. (Adopted by house May 2, 1911; by senate May 9.)

PUBLIC UTILITIES.

There has been and now is a wide agitation for the passage of an act to create in this state a commission to have power to regulate the public utilities doing business within the state or to grant authority to municipalities to regulate such public utilities. It is therefore resolved that a committee of five representatives and five senators be appointed to make an investigation of the relations of the public utilities of this state to the people thereof. (Adopted by house April 28, 1911; amended by senate May 18, and concurred in by house May 18.)

EXTRA SESSION OF THE ILLINOIS ASSEMBLY.

Because of the failure of the 47th general assembly, at its regular session, to enact legislation concerning a deep waterway from Lockport to Utica and the development of water power incident thereto, Gov. Deneen, on June 6, 1911, called an extra session to enact the legislation in question. The legislature met June 14 and on the same day the waterway bill was reported favorably by the senate waterway committee. The measure passed its second reading June 16 by a vote of 30 to 7 and then, after it had been amended so as to limit waterway development to the issuance of $500,000 in bonds to conserve the water power rights along the proposed channel, it passed its third reading by a vote of 33 yeas to 7 nays. The bill went to the house, but before any action was taken the assembly adjourned to Oct. 24.

At the regular session the waterway bill was passed by the senate by a vote of 36 to 17, but in the house Speaker Charles Adkins prevented any action from being taken. When the session was resumed Oct. 24 the bill was reported to the house and passed its second reading. It was made a special order for the following day, when it was defeated by a vote of fifty-nine to sixty-five. It needed seventy-seven votes for its passage. The vote was as follows.

ELECTORAL AND LEGISLATIVE REFORM.

To solve the problem of making representative government more representative and thus give the people firmer control in municipal, state and national affairs, various agencies have been adopted. Some are comparatively old as to origin, though new as to extent and manner of application, while others are of more recent date. Among those which have attracted the most attention in late years and which are being tested in many communities are the following:

- The short ballot.
- Commission form of city government.
- Initiative.
- Referendum.
- Recall.
- Improved registration methods.
- Nonpartisan ballots.
- Direct primaries.
- Preferential voting.
- Corrupt practice acts.
- Direct election of United States senators.

THE SHORT BALLOT.

The short ballot principle is defined by the Short Ballot organization as follows:

"The dangerously great power of politicians in our country is not due to any peculiar civic indifference of the people, but rests on the fact that we are living under a form of democracy that is so unworkable as to constitute in practice a pseudo democracy. It is unworkable because:

"1. It submits to popular election offices which are too unimportant to attract (or deserve) public attention; and,

"2. It submits to popular election so many offices at one time that many of them are inevitably crowded out from proper public attention; and,

"3. It submits to popular election so many offices at one time that the business of making up the elaborate tickets necessary at every election makes the political machine an indispensable instrument in electoral action.

"Many officials, therefore, are elected without adequate public scrutiny, and owe their selection not to the people, but to the makers of the party ticket, who thus acquire an influence that is capable of great abuse.

"The 'short ballot' principle is:

"1. That only those offices should be elective which are important enough to attract (and deserve) public examination.

"2. That very few offices should be filled by election at one time, so as to permit adequate and unconfused public examination of the candidates.

"Obedience to these fundamental principles explains the comparative success of democratic government in the cities of Great Britain and other foreign democracies, as well as in Galveston, Des Moines and other American cities that are governed by 'commissions.'"

The Short Ballot organization has its headquarters at 383 4th avenue, New York, N. Y. The secretary is Richard S. Childs.

COMMISSION FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

The main features of the commission form of government, as ascertained by Ernest S. Bradford of Washington, D. C., after comparing the various plans in operation in Iowa, Kansas, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Mississippi, Kentucky, Illinois, South Carolina, Louisiana and other commonwealths, are the following:

1. The governing body is made up of a small number of members. The usual number is five. Three is the next most common number, occurring most frequently in the smaller cities. Other places have from four to nine. The Illinois act calls for five commissioners and the Wisconsin law for three.

2. Wards as election units are abolished. Each commissioner is voted for by all the electors and is responsible to the entire city rather than to a section of it. Under this arrangement each voter wields more power, as he votes for all the commissioners instead of for one or two of a large number of aldermen. Better men are elected and the influence of a bad ward is less than when it is represented by its own special aldermen.

3. Ample powers are conferred upon the commission. By this is meant that it exercises not only the usual ordinance making power, but it also oversees the administrative departments of the city and appoints the officers. In other words, it decides by ordinance what shall be done, appoints the men to do it—department subordinates and employees—and sees that it is done.

4. Each commissioner is assigned to be the head of a definite department, for the conduct of which he is responsible to the commission, and to some extent directly to the people. Commissioners do not look after the details of their departments; they have superintendents who do this under their direction. In most commission charters it is provided that the mayor shall be one of the council, voting but not having the veto power. He usually presides at meetings, signs ordinances, contracts and warrants on the treasury and performs other ministerial acts.

5. Control by the people is insured by means of the following checks: (a) Publicity of proceedings, ordinances (including franchises), and of the general and financial condition of the city; (b) the referendum; (c) the initiative; (d) the recall; (e) nonpartisan primary and election methods; (f) a civil service commission. Nearly every commission charter has one or more of these checks.

ILLINOIS LAW.

The Illinois law providing for the voluntary adoption of the commission form of government by cities of not to exceed 200,000 population was approved March 9, 1910. Its main features are these:

In cities adopting the commission form of government elections of officers take place quadrennially on the third Tuesday of April, beginning with 1911.

Four commissioners and a mayor are elected at large without reference to wards.

Primary tickets for the nomination of candidates are nonpartisan and without a circle at the head. Two candidates for mayor and eight for commissioners are nominated.

The commission is called the council. It exercises all the legislative, executive and supervisory powers heretofore exercised by the mayor, city council and other city, town or village officials. The mayor is without the veto power.

The executive and administrative powers are distributed among five departments as follows:

1. Public affairs.
2. Accounts and finances.
3. Public health and safety.
4. Streets and public improvements.
5. Public property.

The mayor is commissioner of public affairs. The council may, in its discretion, elect a city clerk, corporation counsel, city attorney, treasurer, comptroller, city physician, police chief, fire chief, harbor master, market master, three library trustees and other officers.

Salaries are fixed by the council according to the size of the city or village. The mayor's salary ranges from $50 to $6,000 a year and that of each commissioner from $40 to $5,000.

Recall—All elective officials except judges are subject to recall on the petition of 55 per cent of the voters.

Initiative—Any proposed ordinance may be submitted to the council on the petition of 10 to 25 per cent of the voters and must be adopted within thirty days or be submitted to a general or special election. (See "The Initiative" following.)

Referendum—All ordinances, with certain exceptions, must be submitted to the voters for approval by a majority vote.

THE INITIATIVE.

The "initiative" is a political device by which the people are enabled to pass laws or ordinances without change or modification by the ordinary legislative bodies. It has been called the positive or constructive side of direct legislation, just as the referendum, which enables the people to reject proposed laws, is the negative side. By this method a minority ranging in number from 5 to 25 per cent may file a petition for a law, or, when a city, an ordinance. The measure must then, without change or revision, go before the people for their judgment, and, if it is approved by a majority of the votes cast, it becomes law without further process. Laws and ordinances so passed are not subject to veto.

In 1891 the initiative was adopted by Switzerland as a means of introducing proposals for the amendment of the constitution. The first state in America to adopt it was South Dakota, which in 1898 amended its constitution so as to reserve to the people the right to propose measures, "which measures the legislature shall enact and submit to a vote of the electors of the state." Initiative petitions in South Dakota must be signed by 5 per cent of the voters. In the constitution of the new state of Oklahoma, adopted in 1907, the "people reserve to themselves the power to propose laws and amendments to the constitution and to enact or reject the same at the polls independent of the legislature." The initiative has also been adopted in connection with the referendum in state legislation in Maine, Michigan, Montana, Missouri, Utah, Nevada, California and Oregon. (See "The Oregon Plan" subjoined.)

It is in connection with the commission form of city government, however, that the initiative has been put to the widest use. Nearly all the states in which cities are permitted to organize under this system, by special charter or otherwise, provide for recourse to the initiative. This is the case in Massachusetts, South Carolina, Kentucky, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, South Dakota, Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado, California, Washington, Idaho.

In the case of cities the initiative operates normally in the following manner, according to the Digest of School Charters: "The ordinance proposed is submitted to the board of commissioners by a petition of a certain number of voters or a percentage of the total vote cast at the last preceding municipal election. The board of commissioners then have the option of (1) taking the initiative into their own hands and passing the proposed ordinance, or (2) submitting the same to the voters at either a general or special election." Usually to have a measure submitted to the voters at a special election the percentage of petitioners required is 25; to have it submitted at a general election, 10.

Section 47 of the Illinois act provides that any proposed ordinance may be submitted to the council (commission) by petition signed by a certain percentage of the voters. If the petition is signed by 25 per cent of the voters and contains a request that the ordinance be submitted to a vote of the people, if not passed by the council, such council shall either (a) pass such ordinance without alteration within thirty days, or (b) within thirty days from the date of the filing of the petition call a special election unless a general municipal election occurs within ninety days thereafter, when such ordinance shall be submitted without alteration to the vote of the electors of the city.

If the petition is signed by not less than 10 per cent and not more than 25 per cent of the electors, the council shall within thirty days pass such ordinance without change or submit the same at the next general municipal election.

THE REFERENDUM.

The referendum may be defined as the submission of a proposed law or ordinance, which has been passed by the people's representatives in a legislature or council, to a vote of the people for ratification or rejection. It has been in use in Switzerland since the sixteenth century and, in a restricted form, in the United States for many years, especially in passing upon constitutions and constitutional amendments. It is only since 1898, however, that the referendum, in connection with the initiative, has been used as an instrument of direct legislation both by states and cities. In the year named South Dakota amended its constitution so as to reserve to the people the right to require that any laws which the legislature enacted should be submitted to a vote of the electors of the state before going into effect. As in the case of the initiative, not more than 5 per cent of the voters are required in that state for invoking the referendum.

Since 1898 it has been brought into use for state purposes, to a greater or less degree, in Maine, Utah, Nevada, Montana, Missouri, Michigan, Oklahoma, Oregon (see "The Oregon Plan" subjoined), New Mexico, California and Arizona. Under a law adopted in 1901 10 per cent of the registered voters of the state of Illinois may secure an expression of opinion by electors on questions of public policy at any general or special election. In the case of an incorporated town, village, city, township, county or school district, the petition for the submission of any question for an expression of public opinion must be signed by 25 per cent of the registered voters.

In commission governed cities the referendum is in general use. As a rule all ordinances passed by the council, except those for the immediate preservation of public health or safety, are suspended from operation for a specified period. While so suspended the ordinance is subject to a protest, in the form of a petition, against its final passage. If the petition is in proper form the commissioners must either (1) rescind its former action, or (2) submit the ordinance to the people for their approval or disapproval. Referendum petitions require the signature of from 5 to 25 per cent of the voters. As in the case of the initiative, it is common to require 25 per cent to submit the question to a special election and 10 per cent to a general election. In Illinois cities a petition must be signed by electors equal in number to at least 10 per cent of the entire vote cast for all the candidates for mayor at the last preceding general election.

THE RECALL.

The "recall" is a method of procedure by which the people are enabled to remove from his position any public elective official at will. This requires a petition signed by a certain specified percentage or number of voters. The usual percentage in such cases is 25. In Oregon all state officials, including judges and members of the legislature, are subject to recall (see "The Oregon Plan" subjoined). In the proposed constitution of Arizona it was provided that every public officer in the state, holding an elective office, either by election or appointment, should be subject to recall from such office by the qualified electors of the district from which candidates were elected to such office. President Taft vetoed this provision so far as the judiciary was concerned. Such district may include the whole state. Twenty-five per cent of the electors may file a recall petition.

In most of the cities under the commission form of government the recall of elective public officers is provided for through the filing of petitions signed by from 15 to 75 per cent of the voters. When the sufficiency of a petition has been established the commissioners must call an election for filling a prospective vacancy in the position of the officer sought to be removed. The officer in question may be a candidate for re-election. If at the recall election he does not receive the highest number of votes he is thereby automatically removed from office. Many of the charters provide for an interval of immunity after the installation of the officer, during which the recall petition may not be presented.

Though 25 per cent is the usual percentage of voters whose signatures are required on recall petitions, it is not uniform. In South Dakota cities it is only 15, while in Illinois it is 55. In Louisiana it is 33.

In Illinois every incumbent of an elective office, except a judicial office, is subject to recall and removal by the electors, at any time. A petition signed by electors equal in number to 55 per cent of the total vote for mayor at the last preceding general municipal election is filed with the city or village clerk, which petition must contain a statement in not more than 200 words of the ground on which the removal or recall is sought to be made. The petition being sufficient, the clerk immediately submits the same to the council and the council fixes a day for holding an election to fill the vacancy caused by the recall. If the officer whose removal is sought resigns within five days after the petition is filed the council appoints his successor and no election is held.

REGISTRATION OF VOTERS.

Under the direct primary system the tendency is to throw more safeguards around the registration of voters. In cities having a large floating population of the kind that resorts to cheap lodging houses there has been much complaint of illegal voting as the result of lax registration methods. An example of the strict requirements established in communities having improved systems of registration will be found in the outline of "The Oregon Plan" given herewith.

NONPARTISAN BALLOTS.

In many of the cities that have adopted the commission form of government nonpartisan ballots are required both at the primaries and elections. This is the case in Illinois, where the statute provides that the ballots at the primary shall have no party, platform or principle designated and that there shall be no circle printed at the top. It also provides that the ballots to be used at the election are to be similar to those at the primary and are to be without party designations or a circle at the head. The same rule prevails in commission governed cities in Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, South Dakota (except that no primaries are held), California and Washington.

In some states certain judicial offices are excluded from the direct primaries and nominations are made on a nonpartisan basis. Nebraska, North Dakota, Tennessee, Washington and Wisconsin have laws of this kind.

DIRECT PRIMARIES.

More than a score of states now have mandatory direct primary election laws, covering practically all offices, and nearly as many other states have either optional direct primary laws for nearly all offices or optional or mandatory direct primary laws for certain offices or localities. The tendency in all parts of the country is to do away entirely with the old convention system, under which nominations are practically made by a few party leaders. Under the new direct system the names of all candidates whose petitions are signed by a certain percentage of the party voters are placed on the ballot and are voted on by the registered party voters. The primaries are conducted by the regular election officials at the usual polling places and at the public expense.

States having mandatory direct primary election laws include Arizona, California, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Washington, Wisconsin.

Five states have laws that permit their party voters to indicate directly at the primaries their choice for president and vice-president of the United States. These states are North Dakota, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Oregon and New Jersey.

PREFERENTIAL VOTING.

The preferential voting system was first adopted in Grand Junction, Col., Sept. 14, 1909. According to Robert Tyson, ex-secretary of the American Proportional Representation league, the following advantages were thereby secured:

1. Abolition of primary elections.
2. A clear majority at one balloting.
3. Freedom of nomination, that is, several candidates representing a given policy can be nominated for one office without dividing the vote and thereby defeating the policy.

The petition of nomination in each case must consist of not less than twenty-five individual certificates submitted by qualified electors. Each of these electors certifies that he believes the person named is qualified to fill the office specified and is of good moral character. "I further certify," continues the elector, "that I join in this petition for the nomination of the above named person believing that he has not become a candidate as the nominee or representative of, or because of any promised support from, any political party or any committee or convention representing or acting for any political party." The certificate is signed under oath and before a notary public.

On the tenth day before election the clerk certifies a list of candidates nominated for the several offices and prepares ballots which contain the full list of names nominated for each office with three columns opposite each name for indicating first, second and third choice for each office. No ballot has printed on it any party or political designation or mark, nor is any such mark permitted to appear after the name of any candidate. The person receiving more than one-half of the total number of ballots cast as the first choice for any office is elected to that office. If no candidate receives such majority of first choice ballots then the name of the candidate printed on the ballot having the smallest number of first choice votes, and all names written on the ballot having a less number of votes than such last named candidate, are excluded from the count. A canvass is then made of the second choice votes received by the remaining candidates for the office; the second choice votes are then added to the first choice votes received by each of the remaining candidates for the office, and the candidate receiving the largest number of such first and second choice votes, if such votes constitute a majority of all the ballots cast at the election, is elected. If, however, there is still no majority, the name of the candidate then having the smallest number of first and second choice votes is excluded from the count. A canvass of the third choice votes received by the remaining candidates is then made; the third choice votes are then added to the first and second choice votes received by each of the remaining candidates for the office, and the candidate receiving the highest number of first, second and third choice votes is elected. A tie between two or more candidates is decided in favor of the one having the greatest number of first choice votes. If all are equal in this respect then the greatest number of second choice votes will decide; in case it does not decide then the tie is determined by lot.

The Grand Junction system of preferential voting is in use in Spokane, Wash., in a somewhat modified form to suit local conditions. Both cities are under the commission form of government.

Under the Hare plan, which is used in West Australia, when a second choice has to be used it is substituted for the first choice on the same ballot and is not added to the first choice. This also holds good as to the third and subsequent choices. There are other minor differences.

CORRUPT PRACTICES ACTS.

Several states have "corrupt practices acts" intended to prevent the undue use of money in securing nominations at primaries. In general the laws require candidates to limit their campaign expenses to a certain maximum and to file statements of all contributions received and payments made. States having acts of this kind include Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Massachusetts, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon, Wisconsin.

Corporations are prohibited from contributing to campaign funds in Georgia, Massachusetts, Mississippi and Ohio.

Congress in 1910 passed a law providing for the publication of the source and use of all contributions to political campaigns toward the expenses of candidates in congressional elections in two or more states. This law was broadened and made much more stringent by an amendment adopted in 1911. [See "Publicity of Campaign Contributions" under "Work of 62d Congress, First Session."]

SENATORIAL ELECTION REFORM.

Because of the increasing frequency of deadlocks in state legislatures, the use of money or patronage in securing votes and the improper influence of corporations, a widespread demand has arisen for the direct election of United States senators by the people. In some of the states this has been practically accomplished by pledging members of the legislature to carry out the will of the people and elect the man who gets the largest vote at the senatorial primary. This part of the Oregon plan is shown in the outline given of that system. In other states the result of the primary is merely advisory and is regarded as not legally or morally binding upon the legislators.

Efforts were made in the final session of the 61st congress and the first (extra) session of the 62d congress to pass a joint resolution providing for the direct election of United States senators by the people, but failed. [See "Direct Election of Senators" under "Work of 62d Congress, First Session."]

THE OREGON PLAN.

The following outline of the so-called "Oregon plan" of direct legislation is based on a speech on "Popular Versus Delegated Government," delivered in the United States senate May 5, 1910, by Senator Bourne of Oregon. The system in use in that state has been made the model of similar legislation, proposed or enacted, in other states.

AUSTRALIAN BALLOT.

Oregon in 1891 adopted the Australian ballot, which insures secrecy, prevents intimidation and reduces the opportunity for bribery.

REGISTRATION LAW.

In 1899 Oregon enacted a registration law applying to general elections and in 1904 enlarged its scope through the law creating a direct primary. This law requires registration prior to voting in either the general or the primary election. Before voting in a party primary the voter must, under oath, register his party affiliation. Registration begins fifteen months before the general election. The registration books are closed ten days prior to the primary election, are opened four days after the primary and are then kept open until about twenty days before the general election. Upon these books are entered the full name of the voter, his registration number, date of registration, his occupation, age, nativity, date and place of naturalization, if any, and his place of residence. It is required that the voter, if he is not the head of the house he occupies, must show that fact and specify the room in which he lives and on what floor it is located. He must sign the register, if he can write. If unable to do so the reason must be given. If it is due to illiteracy, a physical description of the man must be noted on the register.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM.

In June, 1902, the initiative and referendum amendment to the constitution was adopted. It provides that the legislative authority shall be vested in a legislative assembly, but that the people reserve to themselves the power to propose laws and amendments to the constitution and to enact or reject the same at the polls independent of the legislative assembly, and also reserve power to approve or reject at the polls any act of the legislature. An initiative petition must be signed by 8 per cent of the legal voters, as shown by the vote for supreme judge at the last preceding election. A referendum petition must be signed by only 5 per cent of the voters. The legislature may itself refer to the people any act passed by it. The veto power of the governor does not extend to any measure referred to the people.

PUBLICITY PAMPHLETS.

The law provides that the secretary of state shall, at public expense, mail to every registered voter in the state a printed pamphlet containing a true copy of the title and text of each measure to be submitted to the people and the proponents and opponents of the law have the right to insert in the pamphlet, at the actual cost to themselves of paper and printing only, such arguments as they see fit to make. These pamphlets must be mailed not later than fifty-five days before a general election and twenty days before a special election.

DIRECT PRIMARY LAW.

In 1904 a direct primary law was adopted. It provides for a primary election to be held forty-five days prior to the general election at the usual polling places and with the usual officials. Any party polling 25 per cent of the vote at the previous election is brought under the law. Any legal voter can become a candidate in the primaries for any office by filing a petition signed by a certain per cent of the voters. Names of candidates are arranged in alphabetical order on the ballots. Registration of party affiliation is a prerequisite to participation in a party primary. It is also provided that the candidate in his petition shall, among other things, agree that he will "accept the nomination and will not withdraw," and, if elected, "will qualify as an officer." Each candidate is entitled to have placed in his petition a statement not to exceed 100 words and on the ballot after his name a legend not to exceed twelve words, setting forth any measures or principles he especially advocates.

PLEDGES BY LEGISLATIVE CANDIDATES.

In the case of a legislator's nomination, the candidate may, in addition to his statement of measures and principles, also subscribe to one of two statements, but if he does not so subscribe he shall not on that account be debarred from the ballot. He has three courses open to him. He may subscribe to "statement No. 1," as follows:

"I further state to the people of Oregon, as well as to the people of my legislative district, that during my term of office I shall always vote for that candidate for United States senator in congress who has received the highest number of the people's votes for that position at the general election next preceding the election of a senator in congress without regard to my individual preference."

Or he may subscribe to "statement No. 2," as follows:

"During my term of office I shall consider the vote of the people for United States senator in congress as nothing more than a recommendation, which I shall be at liberty to wholly disregard if the reason for doing so seems to me to be sufficient."

Or he may be perfectly silent on the election of United States senator.

POPULAR VOTE FOR UNITED STATES SENATOR.

The primary law further provides that United States senators may be nominated by their respective parties in the party primaries, and the candidate receiving the greatest number of votes becomes the party nominee. Then, in the general election, the party nominees are voted for by the people and the individual receiving the highest number of votes becomes the people's choice for United States senator. In 1908 the advocates of the election of senators by the people and the enforcement of statement No. 1 submitted to the people the following bill:

"Be it enacted by the people of the state of Oregon: Section 1. That we, the people of Oregon, hereby instruct our representatives and senators in our legislative assembly, as such officers, to vote for and elect the candidates for United States senators from this state who receive the highest number of votes at our general election."

This bill became a law by a vote of 69,565 to 21,182.

CORRUPT PRACTICES ACT.

In 1908 Oregon by popular vote adopted a corrupt practices act. This provides that no candidate for office shall expend in his campaign for nomination more than 15 per cent of one year's compensation of the office for which he is a candidate, provided that no candidate shall be restricted to less than $100. The act provides for the publication by the secretary of state, for the information of the voters, of a pamphlet, in which a candidate in the primary campaign may have published a statement setting forth his qualifications, the principles and policies he advocates and any other matter in support of his candidacy. Each candidate must pay for at least one page, the amount to be paid varying from $100 for the highest office to $10 for the lowest. Any person may use space in this pamphlet in opposition to any candidate, the space being paid for the same as by the candidates. Information regarding state and congressional candidates is printed in a pamphlet issued by the secretary of state, one copy being mailed to each registered voter in the state. Pamphlets regarding county candidates are issued by the county clerk and mailed to each voter in the county. Similar pamphlets are printed and distributed prior to the general election, the party committees or managers filing the matter they want published with the secretary of state. In the campaign preceding the general election each candidate is limited in expenditures to 10 per cent of one year's compensation. Among the acts prohibited by the act are these:

Promises of appointments in return for political support.

Publication or distribution of anonymous letters or circulars regarding candidates or measures before the people.

Solicitation or acceptance of campaign contributions from or payment of contributions by persons holding appointive positions.

Sale of editorial support or the publication of paid political advertising without marking it "paid advertising."

Use of carriages in conveying voters to the polls. Active electioneering or soliciting votes on election day.

Campaign contributions by quasi public or certain other important classes of corporations generally affected by legislation.

Intimidation or coercion of voters in any manner. Contribution of funds in the name of any other than the person furnishing the money.

Treating by candidates as a means of winning favor.

Betting on an election by a candidate or betting on an election by any other person with intent to influence the result.

PUBLICITY OF CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES.

The corrupt practices act further requires that every candidate shall file an itemized account of his campaign expenditures within fifteen days after the primary election, including in such statement all debts contracted and promises made. Every political committee must have its treasurer and cause him to keep a detailed account of its receipts, expenditures and liabilities. An itemized statement must be published within ten days after the election. The books must be open to the inspection of the chairman and treasurer of any opposing party. The candidate violating any part of the corrupt practices act forfeits his right to the office. He or any other person violating the law is subject to imprisonment for a year or a fine of not more than $1,000, or both.

THE RECALL.

The recall amendment to the constitution of Oregon was adopted in 1908. Any public officer may be recalled by the filing of a petition signed by 25 per cent of the voters. The petition must set forth the reasons for the recall, and if the officer does not resign within five days after the petition is filed a special election must be ordered to be held within twenty days to determine whether the people will recall such official. On the ballot at such election the reasons for demanding the recall of the officer may be set forth in not more than 200 words and his justification may be given in a similar number of words. No petition can be circulated against any officer until he has held the office six months, except that in the case of a member of the legislature it may be filed at any time within five days after the opening of the session. At the special election on the candidate receiving the highest number of votes is declared elected. The special election is held at the public expense, but a second recall petition cannot be filed against an officer unless the petitioners first pay the entire expenses of the first recall election.

DIRECT VOTE FOR PRESIDENT.

In 1910 a bill was prepared and submitted to the people of Oregon, under the initiative, proposing an amendment to the direct primary law, providing that in each year of presidential election the primaries shall be held in April and that opportunity shall be given the voters to express their preference for party candidates for president and vice-president, and to select delegates to the national conventions and nominate their party candidates for presidential electors. This bill was adopted on a referendum vote at the November election and became a law. The first primaries under its provisions will be held in April, 1912, and Oregon will therefore be the first state to indicate its preference for presidential candidates. This preference will be in the nature of an instruction to the state's delegations in the national conventions, but the delegates will not be bound to vote for the choice of their state if they find that by so doing votes would be thrown away. There is a moral though not a legal obligation upon them to support the choice of the members of their respective parties in Oregon so long as the candidates endorsed have a chance of winning the nomination.

RESULTS.

In a statement issued by the advocates of the system of direct legislation it is claimed that the "Oregon plan" provides a speedy, peaceful and definite method of determining questions of public policy without undue expense. The total cost to the state for postage, printing, binding and distributing the pamphlet of thirty-two measures and arguments to every voter in the state in 1910 was less than 20 cents for each registered voter. The total cost to the state for the initiative and referendum in four elections on sixty-four measures was $47,610.61. The cost to seventy-one private organizations for conducting educational campaigns for and against measures was about $125,000. The questions of public policy declared to have been definitely settled by the direct vote of the people of Oregon up to the end of 1910 were these:

1. That they will not tolerate a return to anything like the convention method of making nominations, but will retain their direct primary system until something better is offered.

2. That they will enforce election by the legislature of that candidate for United States senator in congress who receives the highest number of the people's votes.

3. Complete prohibition of railroad passes for all persons except employes of the railroads.

4. Abolition of the power of city councils to give away public franchises.

5. Abolition of the temptation and opportunity to buy or sell votes in the legislature.

6. That the people of every city or town shall have power to make and amend their city charters on all local matters at their own pleasure, absolutely free from special acts by the legislature.

7. That they will retain the initiative and referendum in lawmaking.

8. That they will have power to recall any elected public officer from constable to governor, including judges of the courts.

9. That they approve the principle of election of members of the legislature by proportional representation, though they have not yet agreed on the method.

10. That they will provide liberally by taxes for support of higher education in the state university.

11. That they will maintain one efficient normal school.

12. That corporations having little or no tangible property should pay a gross income and license tax.

13. That the expenditures of any candidate for public office shall be limited to practically one-fourth of one year's salary of the office he seeks, and the state will provide the greater part of the expense for publicity of the merits of candidates and of political parties.

14. That edible fish, especially salmon, shall be conserved in the navigable rivers of the state.

15. That measures of chiefly local interest will be rejected if submitted to the voters of the whole state.

16. Abolition of the convention system of electing delegates to national conventions, establishing direct election of such delegates by the voters of the great parties, and permitting expression by the voters of their choice for their party candidates for president and vice-president.

17. That three-fourths of a jury shall be able to render a verdict in all civil cases, and court procedure shall be so simplified as to discourage appeals to the Supreme court for delay and new trials because of technical errors, if substantial justice has been obtained in the lower court.

18. That they do not approve state wide prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquor.

19. That they have established and will maintain local option on the liquor question.

20. That they require a reasonable measure of employers' liability for workmen's accidents.

21. They have granted the people of each county power to exempt from all taxation any class or classes of property, subject to any general laws approved by the people of the state.

22. That no citizen shall be tried in a Circuit court for crime unless accused by a grand jury.

23. That general elections shall be held in November when most other states vote, instead of in June.

24. That the public credit shall not be used to aid, build or operate private or government railroads.

25. That counties may issue bonds to build permanent highways.

26. That private schemes for looting the public treasury cannot be worked by the initiative method.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACTS.

IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

To distinguish them from employers' liability laws the term "workmen's compensation laws" is used to designate those acts which provide for the award of fixed sums to employes injured by industrial accidents, without the necessity of litigation and without reference to the question of negligence upon which employers' liability acts are based. It is provided in most such laws, however, that gross negligence on the part of the employe injured will bar his right to compensation, while such negligence on the part of the employer sometimes gives the right to increased compensation. Usually the disablement must last a specified number of days before compensation becomes due.

The industries usually covered by the acts are manufacturing, mining and quarrying, transportation, building and engineering work, and in some countries agriculture, forestry and navigation. In Greece and New South Wales they are limited to mining and quarrying. In Belgium and Great Britain the laws apply practically to all employments. In Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Italy, Luxemburg, the Netherlands, Norway, Russia, Spain and Sweden only wage earners, in some cases those exposed to the same risks, such as overseers and technical experts come within the scope of the law. In France, Great Britain, the British colonies and Hungary the laws apply to salaried employes and workmen equally. Overseers and technical experts earning more than a prescribed amount are excluded in Belgium, Denmark, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Luxemburg and Russia. Employes of the state, provincial and local governments usually come within the provisions of the acts.

The entire burden rests on the employer in all but six countries, Austria, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Luxemburg and New South Wales, where the employes bear part of the expense. The laws fix the compensation to be paid and with but one or two unimportant exceptions the compensation is based upon the wages received by the injured person. It consists of allowances for temporary disability, and annual pensions or lump sum payments for permanent disability or death, to which are added frequently the expenses of medical and surgical treatment and a funeral benefit.

The acts of nearly all the countries are framed with the view of obviating the necessity of legal proceedings. If disputes arise the acts specify the necessary procedure for settlement by arbitration tribunals or by law courts.

So far as the method of organization of insurance is concerned, the countries may be divided into two groups, according to whether insurance is compulsory or voluntary. In the case of compulsory insurance it may be in prescribed institutions or associations controlled by the state or it may be in private companies or mutual associations; in the case of voluntary insurance it may be in private companies or mutual associations with or without state competition.

Wherever there is compulsory insurance in prescribed institutions controlled by the state, there is no question as to the security of payments. Such is the case in Norway, where a government bureau provides the insurance. In Germany, Austria, Hungary, Luxemburg and the Netherlands the law either specifically states or implies the guaranty of the solvency of the institutions providing the insurance. In the Netherlands the injured workman is protected by the equivalent of insurance in the Royal Insurance bank, irrespective of the institution in which the employer carries the insurance; the uninsured employer and the private insurance companies are required to give satisfactory guaranties to the Royal Insurance bank. In Greece the payments are guaranteed by the national miners' fund.

The second method of state guaranty is by a special national fund from which the compensation is paid in cases of insolvency, either of the employer or of the insurance carrier. The sources of revenue of these funds show considerable difference. In Italy the fund is supported by fines for noncompliance with the requirement to insure, or other fines, and by the compensation due in fatal cases, but not paid because of absence of survivors. In France the guaranty fund is supported by special taxes upon all employes covered by the act, but this fund guarantees pension payments only; compensation for temporary disability is secured by a preferred claim on the assets of the employer. In Belgium the fund is supported by a tax levied only on those employes who do not carry insurance.

Where no state guaranties exist guaranties must be exacted from the insurance companies or from the individual employer. Wherever insurance is voluntary or there is a choice of insurance institutions, the government protects the insured employe by requiring the insurance company to maintain proper reserves or to make guaranty deposits with the government, or by both methods combined. In the case of uninsured employes, their interests are usually protected by giving them a preferred claim upon the assets of the employer.

As examples of the rates of compensation provided for by these laws, the following from the French, German and British acts may be given:

FRANCE.

FOR DEATH—(a) Funeral expenses not exceeding 100 francs ($19.30).

(b) Pensions to dependent heirs not exceeding 60 per cent of annual wages of deceased distributed to: Widow or widower, 20 per cent until death or remarriage, in which latter case a final sum equal to three annual payments.

Children under 16 years of age if one parent survives—15 per cent if there is but one child, 25 per cent if there are two children, 35 per cent if there are three children, 40 per cent if there are four or more children.

Each child under 16 years of age if neither parent survives, 20 per cent.

Each ascendant and each descendant under 16 years of age dependent upon deceased, if no widow or children survive, 10 per cent, the aggregate not to exceed 30 per cent.

(c) If annual wages exceed 2,400 francs ($463.20), only one-fourth of the excess is considered in computing pensions.

FOR DISABILITY—(a) Expenses of medical or surgical treatment.

(b) If permanently disabled, a pension of 66 2/3 per cent of annual wages; for total disability and if one-half loss of earning capacity for partial disability, or, if demanded, one-fourth the capital value of pension in cash, the pension to be reduced accordingly.

(c) If temporarily disabled, an allowance of 50 per cent of daily wages, beginning with fifth day, and including Sundays and holidays, unless disability lasts more than ten days, when payments become due from the first day.

(d) If annual wages exceed 2,400 francs ($463.20), only one-fourth of the excess is considered in computing pensions.

(e) Payments of pensions of not over 100 francs ($19.30) per annum may by mutual consent, when the beneficiary is of age, be replaced by a cash payment.

GERMANY.

FOR DEATH—(a) Funeral benefits of one-fifteenth of annual earnings of deceased, but not less than 50 marks ($11.90).

(b) Pensions to dependent heirs not exceeding 60 per cent of annual earnings of deceased, as follows: Widow, 20 per cent of annual earnings until death or remarriage, in latter case a final sum equal to three annual payments; dependent widower, 20 per cent of annual earnings; each child 15 years of age or under 20 per cent; payments to consort and to children to be reduced proportionately if the total would exceed 60 per cent; dependent heirs in ascending line, 20 per cent or less, if there is a residue after providing for the above heirs; orphan grandchildren, 20 per cent or less, if there is a residue after providing for above heirs.

(c) If annual earnings exceed 1,500 marks ($357), only one-third of the excess is considered in computing pensions.

FOR DISABILITY—(a) Free medical and surgical treatment paid first thirteen weeks by sick benefit funds and afterward by employers' associations.

(b) For temporary or permanent total disability, 50 per cent of daily wages of persons similarly employed, but not exceeding 3 marks (71 cents), paid by sick benefit funds from third day to end of fourth week; from fifth to end of thirteenth week, above allowance by sick benefit fund plus 16 2-3 per cent contributed by employer direct; after thirteen weeks, 66 2-3 per cent of average annual earnings of injured person paid by employers' associations.

(c) For complete helplessness necessitating attendance, payments may be increased to 100 per cent of annual earnings.

(d) For partial disability, a corresponding reduction in payments.

(e) If annual earnings exceed 1,500 marks ($357) only one-third of excess is considered in computing pensions.

GREAT BRITAIN.

FOR DEATH—(a) A sum equal to three years' earnings, but not less than £150 ($729.98), nor more than £300 ($1,453.95), to those entirely dependent on earnings of deceased.

(b) A sum less than above amount if deceased leaves persons partially dependent on his earnings, amount to be agreed upon by the parties or fixed by arbitration.

(c) Reasonable expenses of medical attendance and burial, but not to exceed £10 ($48.67) if deceased leaves no dependents.

FOR DISABILITY—(a) A weekly payment during incapacity of not more than 50 per cent of employee's average weekly earnings during previous twelve months, but not exceeding £1 ($4.87) per week; if incapacity lasts less than two weeks no payment is required for the first week.

(b) A weekly payment during partial disability not exceeding the difference between employee's average weekly earnings before injury and average amount he is earning or able to earn after the injury.

(c) Minor persons may be allowed full earnings during incapacity, but the weekly payments may not exceed 10 shillings ($2.43).

(d) A sum sufficient to purchase a life annuity through the postoffice savings bank of 75 per cent of annual value of weekly payments may be substituted, on application of the employer, for weekly payments after six months, but other arrangements for redemption of weekly payments may be made between employer and employee.

IN THE UNITED STATES.

WISCONSIN COMPENSATION LAW.

The Wisconsin legislature in 1911 passed an employers' liability and workmen's compensation act, of which the following is an outline: The law abrogates the common law defenses of implied or expressed assumption by the employe of the risk complained of, and the negligence of a fellow servant, and provides an optional system of compensation on a uniform scale. Liability for compensation, in lieu of any other liability, shall exist against an employer for any personal injury accidentally sustained by his employe, and for his death if the injury shall proximately cause death, in cases where (1) both employer and employe have elected to be subject to the act, (2) where at the time of the accident the employe is performing service growing out of and incidental to his employment, and (3) where the injury is proximately caused by accident and not by willful misconduct.

All employers who have filed notice thereof with the industrial accident board are subject to the provisions of the act and all employes except such as have given their employers notice that they elect not to be subject to the provisions of the law. The schedule of compensation follows:

1. Such medical and surgical treatment, medicines, medical and surgical supplies, crutches and apparatus, as may be reasonably required at the time of the injury and thereafter during the disability, but not exceeding ninety days, the same to be provided by the employer, and in case of his neglect or refusal seasonably to do so, the employer to be liable for the reasonable expense incurred by or on behalf of the employe in providing the same.

2. If the accident causes disability, an indemnity which shall be payable as wages on the eighth day after the injured employe leaves work as the result of the injury and weekly thereafter, which weekly indemnity shall be as follows:

(a) If the accident causes total disability, 65 per cent of the average weekly earnings during the period of such total disability: Provided that if the disability is such as not only to render the injured employe entirely incapable of work, but also so helpless as to require the assistance of a nurse, the weekly indemnity during the period of such assistance after the first ninety days shall be increased to 100 per cent of the average weekly earnings.

(b) If the accident causes partial disability, 65 per cent of the weekly loss in wages during the period of such partial disability.

(c) If the disability caused by the accident is at times total and at times partial, the weekly indemnity during the periods of each such total or partial disability shall be in accordance with subdivisions (a) and (b), respectively.

(d) Subdivisions (a), (b) and (c) shall be subject to the following limitations:

Aggregate disability indemnity for injury to a single employe caused by a single accident shall not exceed four times the average annual earnings of such employe. The aggregate disability period shall not, in any event, extend beyond fifteen years from the date of the accident.

If the period of disability does not last more than one week from the day the employe leaves work as the result of the injury, no indemnity whatever shall be recoverable.

3. In case death results from the injury the employer, in lieu of any further disability indemnity, becomes liable for the following death benefits:

(a) In case the deceased employe leaves a person or persons wholly dependent upon him for support, a sum equal to four times his average annual earnings.

(b) In case he leaves one or more persons only partially dependent upon him, the benefit shall be such a percentage of four times his average annual earnings as the average annual amount devoted by him to the support of such person or persons bears to his average annual earnings.

(c) Liability for death benefits provided for in subdivisions (a) and (b) shall only exist where the accident is the proximate cause of death.

(d) If the deceased leaves no person dependent upon him the death benefit shall be reasonable funeral expense, not to exceed $100.

The act creates an industrial accident board to consist of the commissioner of labor and industrial statistics, ex officio, and two other members appointed by the governor, each to receive an annual salary of $5,000. They are to hear and determine all controversies arising under the act.

NEW YORK COMPENSATION LAW.

New York state has two acts providing for workmen's compensation in case of injury. One is compulsory and is applicable to specified dangerous employments (see note) and the other is elective and of general applicability. The former became a law May 24, 1910, and the latter June 25, the same year. The elective compensation plan may be adopted by mutual consent by an employer and an employe and such consent must be in writing. It bars all other legal action except where the injury is caused by serious or willful misconduct of the employer.

If the injury does not disable the employe for a period of at least two weeks from earning full wages the employer shall not be liable. Notice of accidents must be given employers as soon as practicable and claim for compensation must be made within six months. The amount of compensation shall be:

FOR DEATH—(a) If the employe leaves a widow or next of kin wholly dependent upon his earnings, a sum equal to 1,200 times the daily earnings of the employe at the time of the accident, but not more in any event than $3,000.

(b) If such widow or next of kin are in part only dependent upon his earnings, such sum as may be deemed reasonable and proportionate to the injury to such dependents.

(c) If he leaves no widow or next of kin, the reasonable expenses of medical attendance and burial, not exceeding $100.

FOR DISABILITY—Where total or partial disability results from the accident, a weekly payment beginning at the end of the second week after the injury and continuing during incapacity, not exceeding 50 per cent of his average weekly earnings when at work on full time during the preceding year. Where the incapacity is partial the weekly payment shall in no case exceed the difference between the amount of the average weekly earnings of the workman before the accident and the amount he is able to earn after the accident, but shall amount to one-half of such difference. In no event shall any payment exceed $30 a week or extend over more than eight years from the time of the accident.

Any person entitled to weekly payments under the plan shall have the same preferential claim therefor against the assets of the employer as now allowed by law for unpaid wages or personal services.

Any question of law or fact arising in regard to the application of the plan in determining the compensation payable shall be settled by agreement, arbitration or by an action at law as provided in the act.

The rates of compensation in the compulsory act applying to persons engaged in dangerous work are the same as in the elective act. The occupations specified are bridge building, operating elevators or derricks, working on scaffolding, construction or alteration of wires, cables or apparatus charged with electric currents, working in close proximity to gunpowder, dynamite or other explosives where they are used as instrumentalities of an industry, operating locomotives, trains, motors or cars on rail and electric roads or working on railroad tracks, construction of tunnels and all work carried on under compressed air.

NOTE—The compulsory compensation act was declared unconstitutional by the New York Court of Appeals March 24, 1911, on the ground that it deprived the employer of his property without due process of law.

AMERICAN TRADE AND NAVIGATION TREATY WITH JAPAN.

Feb. 21, 1911, the United States and Japan signed a new treaty of commerce and navigation to replace that of 1894. The text of the document was laid before the senate in Washington, D. C., the same day and was ratified Feb. 24. The treaty took effect July 17, 1911. It is to continue in force twelve years and also thereafter unless six months' notice to the contrary is given. The new treaty differs from the old chiefly in the fact that it omits all reference to immigration. In article 2 of the treaty of 1894, following provisions declaring the right of the citizens of the two countries to full liberty of travel and residence and trade in both countries, was this qualification:

"It is, however, understood that the stipulations contained in this and the preceding article do not in any way affect the laws, ordinances and regulations with regard to trade, the immigration of laborers, police and public security which are in force or which may hereafter be enacted in either of the two countries."

This clause is omitted from the new treaty, but attached to the document, though not forming a part of the convention itself, is the following declaration:

"In proceeding this day to the signature of the treaty of commerce and navigation between Japan and the United States, the undersigned, Japanese ambassador in Washington, duly authorized by his government, has the honor to declare that the imperial Japanese government is fully prepared to maintain with equal effectiveness the limitation and control which it has for the last three years exercised in the regulation of the emigration of laborers to the United States.

Y. UCHIDA.

*Feb. 21, 1911.

The first article of the treaty asserts the right of citizens or subjects of the two countries to enter, travel or reside in the territories of the other, to carry on trade and lease houses and shops and residences.

The second article guards against domiciliary visits or searches of subjects of one country in another, except upon the same conditions as are imposed upon nationals.

The third article contains the right to appoint consular officers.

Article 4 guarantees reciprocal freedom of commerce and navigation.

Article 5 provides for the regulation of import duties.

Article 6 exempts citizens from transit duties.

Article 7 deals with corporations.

Article 8 provides that there shall be no discrimination between the vessels of the two countries in their right to carry imports without being liable to other or higher charges of duties than national vessels.

Articles 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 relate to shipping, their general purport being to prevent discrimination.

Article 14 promises that any trade or navigation privilege extended to another country shall be enjoyed by the signatories to this treaty.

Article 15 contemplates protection for patents, etc.

The remaining three articles are functional and concern the life of the treaty and other matters.

PALACE OF PEACE.

April 24, 1903, Andrew Carnegie gave to the government of the Netherlands, the sum of $1,500,000, to be used in the construction of a "palace of peace" at The Hague. The corner stone of this structure was laid July 30, 1907, at Zorgvliet in the wooded park stretching from The Hague to Scheveningen.

CARNEGIE ENDOWMENT FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE.

Dec. 14, 1910, Andrew Carnegie transferred to a board of trustees $10,000,000 in 5 per cent first mortgage bonds, the revenue of which will be used to "hasten the abolition of international war" and to establish lasting world peace. The formal transfer was made at a meeting in the rooms of the Carnegie Research foundation in Washington, D. C. The trustees organized by choosing as president United States Senator Elihu Root, permanent representative of the United States at The Hague tribunal. President Taft consented to be honorary president of the foundation. The method by which the annual income of half a million dollars shall be expended is left by Mr. Carnegie entirely to the trustees. The foundation is to be perpetual, and when the establishment of universal peace is attained the donor provides that the revenue shall be devoted to the banishment of the "next most degrading evil or evils," the suppression of which would "most advance the progress, elevation and happiness of men."

The members of the first board of trustees were: Elihu Root, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, Joseph H. Choate, Albert K. Smiley, Dr. Charles W. Elliot, James Brown Scott, John W. Foster, Andrew J. Montague, William M. Howard, Thomas Burke, James L. Slayden, Andrew D. White, Robert S. Brookings, J. G. Schmittapp, Arthur W. Foster, R. A. Franks, Charlemagne Tower, Oscar Straus, Austen G. Fox, John L. Cadwallader, John Sharp Williams, C. L. Taylor, George W. Perkins.

OFFICERS.

President—Elihu Root.
Vice-President—Joseph H. Choate.
Secretary—James Brown Scott.
Treasurer—Walter M. Gilbert.

THIRD NATIONAL PEACE CONGRESS.

The third national peace congress was held in Baltimore, Md., May 3-5, 1911, under the presidency of Hamilton Holt of New York, N. Y. Addresses were made by President Taft, Cardinal Gibbons, James Speyer, Richard Bartholdt, James L. Slayden, T. Iyenaga, Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, Andrew Carnegie and many others. It was resolved to change the name of the organization to the American Peace Congress and to make it a permanent body. Other resolutions indorsed the pending arbitration treaty with Great Britain, requested the president to appoint the American members of the international peace commission without waiting for action by other governments, approved the idea of an international league of peace, suggested by Hamilton Holt, and the suggestion of James Speyer that war loans by bankers of neutral nations be prohibited. The proposition of Congressman James L. Slayden of Texas that the status quo of all the Latin-American republics be mutually guaranteed by a general American treaty was also indorsed.

AMERICAN PEACE SOCIETY.

President—Senator Theodore E. Burton, Washington, D. C.
 Secretary—Benjamin F. Trueblood, LL. D., 313 Colorado building, Washington, D. C.

NOTES ON NATIONAL PARKS.

Antietam—Battle field of the civil war in Washington county, Maryland.

Casa Grande Ruin—Remains of a large prehistoric building near Florence, Ariz.

Chickamauga and Chattanooga—Battle fields of the civil war in the vicinity of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Crater Lake—Park contains remarkable mountain lake and fine scenery in the Cascade range, Klamath county, Oregon; may be reached from Klamath Falls or from Medford on the Southern Pacific road.

General Grant—In Fresno and Tulare counties, California; forest and mountain scenery; reached from Sanger on the Southern Pacific line.

Gettysburg—Battle field of the civil war in southeastern Pennsylvania.

Glacier—Tract of mountainous country in northern Montana with glaciers, lakes, forests and peaks.

Hot Springs Reservation—Tract of land in Garland county, Arkansas, noted for its springs of warm mineral waters.

Mesa Verde—In the extreme southwestern part of Colorado; contains pueblo and other ruins; reached from Mancos on the Rio Grande Southern road.

Mount Rainier—Mountain district in southern Washington; reached from Ashford on the Tacoma Eastern railroad and from Fairfax on the Northern Pacific road.

Platt—Tract of land containing sulphur springs in Murray county, Oklahoma; reached by Santa Fe and St. Louis & San Francisco railroads.

Rock Creek—Park in outskirts of Washington, D. C.

Sequoia—Mountain tract in Tulare county, California, containing forest of big trees; reached from Visalia.

Shiloh—Battle field of civil war in Hardin county, southern Tennessee.

Sully's Hill—On the shore of Devil's lake, North Dakota; contains elevation on which Gen. Alfred Sully with a few men withstood a band of Indians for several days in 1863; reached from Devil's Lake, Narrows and Tokio stations on the Great Northern railroad.

Vicksburg—Battle field of civil war near city of same name in Mississippi.

Wind Cave—Canyon and extensive cave in Custer county, South Dakota, twelve miles from Hot Springs; on the Northwestern and Burlington roads; in Black Hills region.

Yellowstone—Famous park in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho containing geysers and many other natural phenomena as well as beautiful mountain, lake and river scenery; reached from stations on the Northern Pacific, Burlington and Oregon Short Line roads.

Yosemite—Splendid valley in the Sierras in Mariposa county, California; reached from Merced on the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific roads by way of the Yosemite Valley railroad.

Zoological—Park in Washington, D. C., devoted to the zoological collection of the government; adjoins Rock Creek park.

PRESERVATION OF AMERICAN ANTIQUITIES.

By law approved June 8, 1906, entitled "An act for the preservation of American antiquities," the president of the United States is authorized, in his discretion, to declare by proclamation historic landmarks, historic and prehistoric structures and other objects of historic or scientific interest that are situated upon lands owned or controlled by the United States to be national monuments. Under such authority the following monuments have been created:

NOTES ON NATIONAL MONUMENTS.

Chaco canyon—Located in San Juan and McKinley counties, New Mexico; contains extensive prehistoric communal or pueblo ruins.

Cinder cone—An elevation in Lassen county in northern California; is of importance as illustrating volcanic activity in the vicinity 200 years ago.

Devil's tower—A lofty and isolated rock in Crook county, Wyoming; is an extraordinary example of the effect of erosion in the higher mountains.

El Morro—An elevation near Wingate station on the Santa Fe railroad in New Mexico; contains prehistoric ruins and interesting rock inscriptions.

Gila cliff dwellings—In the Mogollon mountains, New Mexico; known also as the Gila Hot Springs cliff houses; are among the best preserved remains of the cliff dwellers of the southwest.

Gran Quivira—Ruined town not far from Manzano

In the central part of New Mexico: remains of large cathedral and chapel and of many houses thought to date from prehistoric times.

Grand canyon—In northwestern Arizona; greatest eroded canyon within the United States.

Jewel cave—A natural formation of scientific interest within the Black Hills national forest in Custer county, South Dakota.

Lassen peak—In national forest of same name in Shasta county, northern California; marks the southern terminus of the long line of extinct volcanoes in the Cascade range, from which one of the greatest volcanic fields in the world extends.

Lewis and Clark cavern—An extraordinary limestone cavern near Limespur, Jefferson county, Montana.

Montezuma castle—Large prehistoric ruin or cliff dwelling on Beaver creek, Arizona.

Mount Olympus—Mountain in the state of Washington; has extensive glaciers and on its slopes are the breeding grounds of the Olympic elk.

Muir woods—In Marin county, California; an extensive growth of redwood trees of great age and size; land presented to the government by William Kent of Chicago.

Mukuntuweap—Canyon in southwestern Utah through which flows the north fork of the Rio Virgin or Zion river; an extraordinary example of canyon erosion.

Natural bridges—Rock formations in southeastern Utah extending over streams or chasms; have loftier heights and greater spans than any other similar formations known; reserved as extraordinary examples of stream erosion.

Navajo—Within the Navajo Indian reservation in Arizona; includes a number of prehistoric cliff dwellings and pueblo ruins new to science.

Oregon caves—Within the Siskiyou national forest in Oregon; caves are of natural formation and of unusual scientific interest and importance.

Petrified forest—Deposits of fossilized or mineralized wood in Gila and Apache counties, Arizona.

Pinnacles—A series of natural formations of rock with a number of caves underlying them; located within Pinnacles national forest in California.

Rainbow bridge—An extraordinary natural bridge in southeastern Utah, having an arch which in form and appearance is much like a rainbow; is 309 feet high and 278 feet span; of scientific interest as an example of eccentric stream erosion.

Shoshone cavern—A cave in Big Horn county, Wyoming, of unknown extent, but of many windings and ramifications and containing vaulted chambers of large size, magnificently decorated with sparkling crystals and beautiful staurolites, and containing pits of unknown depth.

Sitka—Tract of about fifty-seven acres within public park, near Sitka, Alaska; battle ground of Russian conquest of Alaska in 1804; site of former village of Kik-Siti tribe, the most warlike of Alaska Indians; contains numerous tottem poles constructed by the Indians, recording the genealogical history of their several clans.

Tonto—Comprises two prehistoric ruins of ancient cliff dwellings in Gila county, Arizona.

Tumacacori—Remain of an ancient Spanish mission of brick, cement and mortar in Santa Cruz county, Arizona.

Wheeler—Volcanic formations illustrating erratic erosion; in Rio Grande and Cochetopa national forests in southwestern Colorado.

ALIEN CONTRACT LABOR.

Following is a resume of United States laws relating to alien contract labor and of court decisions relating thereto. The data has been secured chiefly from the reports of the commissioner of labor in Washington, D. C., and the revised statutes of the United States. The first general law prohibiting the importation or immigration of alien contract labor was passed by congress in 1834-1855 (approved Feb. 26, 1855). Section 1 of this act provides that it shall be unlawful for any person, company, partnership or corporation, in any manner whatsoever, to prey the transportation or in any way assist or encourage the importation or migration of any alien, or aliens, any foreigner or foreigners, into the United States, its territories or the District of Columbia, under contract or agreement, parcel or special, express or implied, made previous to the importation or migration of such alien or aliens, foreigner or foreigners, to perform labor or service of any kind in the United States, its territories, or the District of Columbia.

Section 2 declares all such contracts or agreements to be utterly void and of no effect. Section 3 provides that every violation of any of the provisions of section 1 of the act shall be punishable by a fine of $1,000, payable into the treasury of the United States. Section 4 provides that the master of any vessel who shall knowingly bring within the United States on any such vessel and land, or permit to be landed, from any foreign port or place any alien laborer, mechanic or artisan who, previous to embarkation on such vessel, had entered into contract or agreement to perform service in the United States shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 for each such alien so brought, and may also be imprisoned for a term not exceeding six months.

Section 5 (as amended by the acts of 1890-1891) provides that nothing in the act shall be so construed as to prevent any citizen of any foreign country temporarily residing in the United States, either in private or official capacity, from engaging, under contract or otherwise, persons not residents or citizens of the United States to act as private secretaries, servants or domestics for such foreigner; nor shall the act be so construed as to prevent any person or persons, partnership or corporation from engaging, under contract or agreement, skilled workmen in foreign countries to perform labor in the United States in or upon any new industry not at present established in the United States: Provided, that skilled labor for that purpose cannot be otherwise obtained; nor shall the provisions of this act apply to professional actors, artists, lecturers or singers, nor to persons employed strictly as personal or domestic servants: Provided, that nothing in the act shall be construed as prohibiting any individual from assisting any member of his family to migrate from any foreign country to the United States for the purpose of settlement here, nor to ministers of any religious denomination, nor persons belonging to any recognized profession, nor professors for colleges and seminaries.

Sections 6 and 7 (added by the acts of 1886-1887) charge the secretary of the treasury with the duty of executing the provisions of the act. Section 8 (added by acts of 1886-1887) provides that all persons included in the prohibitions in this act upon arrival shall be sent back to the nations whence they came, the expense to be borne by the owners of the vessels on which they came. An amendment adopted in the act of 1887-1888 authorizes the secretary of the treasury, in case he is satisfied that an immigrant has been allowed to land contrary to the prohibition of the alien contract law, to cause such immigrant within the period of one year after landing or entry, to be taken into custody and returned to the country whence he came. (See immigration act of 1907 subjoined.) Another amendment authorizes the secretary of the treasury to pay to an informer who furnishes information that the law has been violated such a share of the penalties recovered as he may deem reasonable, not exceeding 50 per cent.

By the act of March 3, 1891, it is provided that it shall be deemed a violation of the act of Feb. 26, 1855, to assist or encourage the importation or migration of any alien by promise of employment through advertisements printed and published in any foreign country, and any alien coming to this country in consequence of such advertisement shall be treated as coming under a contract. This, however, does not apply to states and state immigration bureaus advertising the inducements they offer for immigration to such states.

IMMIGRATION ACT OF 1907.

The immigration act of Feb. 20, 1907, practically embodies in its provisions all the earlier alien contract labor enactments, and also the provisions relating thereto in the immigration law of March 3, 1903. In section 2 it includes among the excluded classes "persons hereinafter called contract laborers, who have been induced or solicited to migrate to this country by offers or promises of employment or in consequence of agreements, oral, written or printed, express or implied, to perform labor in this country of any kind, skilled or unskilled; those who have been, within one year from the date of application for admission to the United States, deported as having been induced or solicited to migrate as above described. * * * Provided, that skilled labor may be imported if labor of like kind unemployed cannot be found in this country; And provided further, that the provisions of this law applicable to contract labor shall not be held to exclude professional actors, artists, lecturers, singers, ministers of any religious denomination, professors for colleges or seminaries, persons belonging to any recognized learned profession, or persons employed strictly as personal or domestic servants."

Section 4 of the same act provides that it shall be a misdemeanor for any person, company, partnership or corporation, in any manner whatsoever, to prey the transportation or in any way to assist or encourage the importation or migration of any contract laborer or contract laborers into the United States, unless such contract laborer or contract laborers are exempted under the last two provisions contained in section 2 of this act.

Section 5 provides that for every violation of any of the provisions of section 4 of this act the persons, partnerships, company or corporation violating the same, by knowingly assisting, encouraging or soliciting the migration or importation of any contract laborer into the United States, shall forfeit and pay for every such offense the sum of $1,000, which may be sued for and recovered by the United States or by any person who shall first bring his action therefor in his own name and for his own benefit, including any such alien thus promised labor or service of any kind, as debts of like amount are now recovered in the courts of the United States, and separate suits may be brought for each alien thus promised labor or service of any kind. And it shall be the duty of the district attorney of the proper district to prosecute every such suit when brought by the United States.

Section 6 provides that it shall be unlawful and be deemed a violation of section 4 of this act to assist or encourage the importation or migration of any alien by promise of employment through advertisements printed and published in any foreign country, and any alien coming to this country in consequence of such an advertisement shall be treated as coming under promise or agreement as contemplated in section 2 of this act, and the penalties imposed by section 5 of this act shall be applicable to such a case: Provided, that this section shall not apply to states or territories, the District of Columbia or places subject to the jurisdiction of the United States advertising the inducements they offer for immigration thereto, respectively.

Section 7 provides that no transportation company or owner or owners of vessels or others engaged in transporting aliens into the United States, shall, directly or indirectly, either by writing, printing or oral representation, solicit, invite or encourage the immigration of any aliens into the United States, but this shall not be held to prevent transportation companies from issuing letters, circulars or advertisements stating the sailings of their vessels and terms and facilities of transportation therein. For a violation of this provision, any such transportation company, and any such owner or owners of vessels, and all others engaged in transporting aliens into the United States, and the agents by them employed, shall be severally subjected to the penalties imposed by section 5 of this act.

Section 8 provides that any person, including the master, agent, owner or consignee of any vessel, who shall bring into or land in the United States, by vessel or otherwise, or who shall attempt, by himself or through another, to bring into or land in the United States, by vessel or otherwise, any alien not duly admitted by an immigrant inspector or not lawfully entitled to enter the United States shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall on conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000, or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or by both such fine and imprisonment for each and every alien so landed or brought in or attempted to be landed or brought in.

Section 20 provides that any alien who shall enter the United States in violation of law shall, upon the warrant of the secretary of commerce and labor, be taken into custody and deported to the country whence he came at any time within three years after the date of his entry into the United States. Such deportation, including one-half of the entire cost of removal to the port of deportation, shall be at the expense of the contractor, procurer or other person by whom the alien was unlawfully induced to enter the United States, or, if that cannot be done, then the cost of removal to the port of deportation shall be at the expense of the "immigrant fund," and the deportation from such port shall be at the expense of the owner or owners of such vessel or transportation line by which such aliens respectively came. Pending the final disposition of the case of any alien taken into custody he may be released on a bond of $500.

COURT DECISIONS.

The act of Feb. 26, 1885, is constitutional as regulating commerce with foreign nations; the offense of assisting the immigration of a laborer under contract to work here is not complete until such alien has entered the territory of the United States and a civil action for the penalty prescribed by section 3 will lie in the district in which he enters, or in any other district in which the defendant may be found. (U. S. Circuit court, eastern district of Michigan, 1886; U. S. Circuit court, southern district of New York, 1890; Florio case.)

This act (Feb. 26, 1885,) clearly forbids the immigration of an alien who is under contract to labor in the United States. Such an immigrant may be prevented from landing under a decision of the collector, finding the facts which under the statute forbid his coming. Such decision, if rendered upon competent evidence, is conclusive and cannot be reviewed on a judicial review on habeas corpus. An immigrant coming bound by a contract to labor on an ordinary dairy farm is not a person excepted by section 5 from the provisions of the law. (U. S. Circuit court, southern district of New York, 1887; Cummings case.)

A woman who engages as a milliner is not a "professional artist" within the meaning of the law. (U. S. Circuit court, southern district of New York, 1889; Thompson case.)

This act does not apply to a contract between an alien, residing out of the United States, and a religious society incorporated under the laws of a state, whereby he engages to remove to the United States and to enter the service of the society as its rector or minister. (U. S. Supreme court, 1891; Church of Holy Trinity case.)

In order to sustain a suit under this act for the recovery of the penalty authorized by the same the contract or agreement must be one made previous to the importation or migration of the alien or foreigner claimed to have been imported in violation of the act. The mere proposal made by an alien to a person within the United States to come here and enter the service of such person on condition that transportation be furnished, followed by prepayment of his passage money to enable him to come to the United States, coupled with the promise, "We can give you steady work and have places for six or eight more smelters if they want to come," and followed by the arrival of the alien at a port in the United States, does not constitute such a contract. (U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, eighth circuit, 1891; Edgar case.)

Neither the prepayment of transportation, nor the assisting or encouraging in any wise the importation of an alien, is a violation of this act (Feb. 26, 1885,) without the contract or agreement, made previous to the importation or migration, binding the alien to perform labor or service in the United States, its territories or the District of Columbia. (U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, 1893; Moller case.)

An "under coachman," whose principal duties are to drive the horses when his employer or any of the family go out in carriages, and who boards with his employer's coachman, is a "personal or domestic servant" within the meaning of the law. (U. S. Circuit court, southern district of New York, 1894; Howard case.)

The acts regulating immigration, existing when chapter 551, acts of 1890-1891, was passed, refer to aliens who are imported into or who migrate to this country, and do not exclude a person already resident here, though not naturalized, who temporarily departs with the intention to return. (U. S. Circuit court, southern district of New York, 1894; Martorelli case.)

The action of the secretary of the treasury in ordering the deportation of immigrants who have arrived within a year, on the ground that they were landed in violation of the contract labor laws, cannot be reviewed or questioned in the courts, and hence there is no jurisdiction to discharge them on writs of habeas corpus when held in custody by immigrant inspectors for the purpose of deportation pursuant to an order of the secretary. (U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, fifth circuit, Florida, 1895; Arteago case.)

This act, prohibiting the importation of aliens under contract to perform labor in the United States, is constitutional. (U. S. Supreme court, 1893; Lees case.)

OPINIONS OF U. S. ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Geronimo Garcia arrived at New Orleans, La., Aug. 5, 1907, from Havana, Cuba, his passage having been paid by an agent of the Louisiana state board of agriculture out of funds appropriated by the state legislature. He was assured that employment as a farm laborer would be secured for him on his arrival in Louisiana, the expectation being that he would return within a year the money advanced for his passage. The attorney-general, whose opinion was asked by the secretary of commerce and labor, held that the promise to him of employment brought him within the classes of aliens excluded by the act of 1907. "There is," he said, "no exception in favor of a state in reference to specific promises of employment to individual immigrants."

An inquiry was submitted by the secretary of commerce and labor to the attorney-general on the subject of the admission of two lithographic artists coming from Germany. An agent of a lithographic company in New York made the contract abroad and prepaid the passage of the persons in question. They were detained as violators of the contract labor law. The attorney-general deemed it unnecessary to determine whether they were "artists" within the meaning of the law, but in his opinion they were clearly entitled to admission under the proviso that "skilled labor may be imported if labor of like kind unemployed cannot be found in this country," it having been shown that for many years there had been a scarcity of men here capable of giving the skilled service required of lithographic artists.

UNITED STATES GEOGRAPHIC BOARD.

The United States geographic board passes on all unsettled questions concerning geographic names which arise in the departments of the government, as well as determining, changing and fixing place names within the United States and its insular possessions. The decisions of the board are to be accepted by all departments as standard authority. The board has advisory powers with respect to the preparation of maps in the various offices and bureaus of the government.

THE CONTROLLER BAY CONTROVERSY.

The elimination of 12,800 acres from the Chugach national forest in Alaska by an executive order dated Oct. 28, 1910, led to the charge in the spring of 1911 that this step was a blunder which would probably result in the Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate obtaining a monopoly in the transportation of coal from the rich Alaskan fields, through securing the only remaining available outlet to the sea. The matter was made the subject of an official inquiry, the senate of the United States adopting a resolution June 27, 1911, calling upon the president for all documents and other information relating to the elimination of national forest land fronting on Controller bay and the applications of the Controller Railway and Navigation company for rights of way or confirmation of its maps of rights of way or harbor rights in or near Controller bay or upon the lands eliminated from the Chugach national forest.

July 26 President Taft sent to the senate a special message in which he gave the information called for. After quoting the resolution of the senate and the executive order of Oct. 28, 1910, eliminating 12,800 acres from the Chugach national forest as not being chiefly valuable for national forest purposes, the president described Controller bay as upward of twenty miles in length, five or six miles in width and landlocked by a number of islands. The bay was for some time supposed to be too shallow for navigation, but in 1907 a channel was discovered, which passed from the ocean to the southeast of the island of Kunaka and curving into the bay extended southeasterly some seven miles. Further investigation showed that for a distance of six miles the frontage of Controller bay was on deep water, to be reached by trestles of ordinary length.

"All the territory surrounding Controller bay," contained in the message, "was included in the Chugach forest reservation in 1909 by a proclamation of President Roosevelt. The importance of Controller bay is that it lies about twenty-five miles from very valuable coal deposits known as the Bering coal fields. Katala bay is to the west of Controller bay and almost immediately adjoins it. It is an open roadstead, upon the shore of which an attempt was made by the Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate to establish a railway terminal, and thence to build a road to the Bering coal fields, already mentioned. The attempt failed for the reason that the breakwater protecting the terminals was destroyed by storms and the terminals became impracticable. Some fifty miles or more farther west of Katala bay is the mouth of the Copper river, where there is an excellent harbor, on which is the town of Cordova. There the Copper River railroad, owned by the Morgan-Guggenheim interests, has its terminals, and the line runs to the northeast along the Copper river and has nearly reached certain rich copper mines in the interior. A branch from this main line is projected to the Bering coal fields and is feasible."

Reference was made to the fact that Mr. Tittman, superintendent of the coast survey, considered Controller bay to be of great value and suggested that it be maintained as a naval reservation because of its proximity to the coal fields. The director of the geological survey, to whom the suggestion was referred, reported that the harbor was not as good for naval purposes as one already selected, but he thought private capital ought to be encouraged to construct a railway from the channel over the mud flats to the shore and thence to the coal fields. In December, 1909, Richard S. Ryan, representing the Controller Railway and Navigation company, applied to Mr. Pinchot, the then forester, for an elimination from the Chugach forest reserve of a tract of land to enable his company to secure railroad terminals, bunkers, shops, etc., upon the northeast shore of Controller bay. This application was referred to the district forester at Portland, Ore., and by him to the forester in Alaska. Early in 1910 Mr. Graves, who had then become forester, reported that there was no objection from the standpoint of forestry to the elimination of the tract indicated, or of 18,000 acres on the northeast shore of Controller bay.

"The matter," said the message, "was considered by the forestry bureau, by the secretary of agriculture, by the secretary of the interior and by the general land office, and the result was a recommendation to me in May, 1910, that an elimination be made of 320 acres, with a frontage of 160 rods, on the northeast shore of Controller bay. I entertained some question about the matter, and stated my objections at a cabinet meeting. Thereafter, some time in June, I had an interview with Richard S. Ryan, the promoter of the Controller Railway and Navigation company, to whom the secretary of the interior had stated my objections, which led to Ryan's sending a communication to the secretary of the interior under date of July 13, 1910. This letter was, in the secretary's absence, sent by the department to me at once. I considered the whole case in August, 1910, and directed that the 320 acres, recommended by both departments, be eliminated. Nothing was done, however, in the matter until my return to Washington in October, 1910, when a formal order, which had been drawn in the interior department and was subsequently specifically approved by the secretary of agriculture and returned to the interior department, was submitted by me to the acting secretary of the interior, with the approval of that department. (This order eliminated 320 acres only.)

"The question finally came before the cabinet late in October. After a full discussion of the matter, and after a consideration of the law, I expressed dissatisfaction with the order because it purported on its face to make the elimination for the benefit of a railroad company of a tract of land which the company could not secure under the statute, for it was a tract of 320 acres in one body when only 160 acres could be thus acquired. In the second place, I preferred to make a much larger elimination of a tract facing the entire channel and with sufficient room for a railway terminal to be built to the shore, because of the fact that the restrictions in the law sufficient to prevent the possibility of any monopoly of either the upland or the harbor or channel by the Controller Railway and Navigation company or any other persons or company. For lack of time sufficient to draft a memorandum myself, I requested the secretary of the interior, who, with the secretary of agriculture, after full discussion, had agreed in my conclusion, to prepare a letter setting forth the reasons for making the larger elimination, so that it might become a part of the record.

"It had been originally suggested by the forestry bureau that 18,000 acres might safely be eliminated, so far as forestry purposes were concerned, but fear had been expressed by one of the district foresters that such a large elimination would offer an opportunity to the company to use land scrip and acquire title to extensive town sites, and the result of the joint consideration of both departments had been the reduction to 320 acres.

"I wish to be as specific as possible upon this point and to say that I alone am responsible for the enlargement of the proposed elimination from 320 acres to 12,800 acres, and that while I proposed the change and stated my reasons therefor, and while both secretaries cordially concurred in it, the suggestion was mine."

The president in his message then pointed out that Mr. Ryan had been properly vouched for and that he had produced letters showing that the company he represented had expended $75,000 in preparations for the building of a railroad from Controller bay to the coal fields, but that it was obstructed in doing so by the order establishing the Chugach forest reserve, which covered all of the Controller bay shore. Mr. Ryan had given every assurance that Messrs. Morgan and Guggenheim had no connection with this company, which was engaged in an independent enterprise in good faith to build an independent railroad.

"Of course," continued the message, "it was possible that the owners of the Copper River Railway company might attempt to buy this railroad when, and if, it was built. It was possible that Mr. Ryan was acting in the interests of the Copper River railroad, although I did not believe it; but whether this was true or not it was clear that the order of elimination, by reason of the restrictions of the act of congress hereafter explained, would not permit the owners of either railroad to shut out any other capitalists who might desire to construct a railroad from the channel of Controller bay to the coal fields, and if by this order we could secure the construction of a railroad from Controller bay to the coal fields it would be a distinct step in the useful development of Alaska. The rates of freight for coal to be charged, of course, would always be subject to congressional control, and, if government ownership seemed a wise policy under the peculiar circumstances, ample land for right of way, harbor frontage and terminals must always remain available under the law for government use, or, if it is preferred to take over to the government a railway built by private enterprise, condemnation is easy."

The president referred to the federal statutes giving authority for the location of railroads and the acquisition of a right of way over public lands in Alaska, including forest reservations. He also cited previous eliminations from forest reserves of water front lands at Cordova (now Cordova) and Valdez. Attention was called to the fact that the Copper River railway, owned by the Merzan-Guggenheim syndicate, had established its terminals at Cordova, and that it proposed to build a branch line to the coal fields. That company would not therefore be interested in building a direct line to Controller bay, where it would be necessary for it to duplicate the terminal facilities it already had at Cordova on a better harbor and where coal was not the only commodity seeking transportation.

"If a railroad," said the president, "was to be constructed from Controller bay to the Bering coal fields it was perfectly evident that there must be a terminal town on the shore of Controller bay, and I was therefore glad and anxious to throw it open to entry and settlement as one important step in encouraging railroad settlement. I was certain that congress had provided, in the statutes affecting the entry and settlement of land in Alaska, limitations which would prevent the possibility of the exclusive appropriation of the harbor and channel of Controller bay or its shores or upland to any one railroad. This I propose now to show.

"The only practicable method for securing title from the government in such a tract as this after its elimination is by use of what is called 'soldiers' additional homestead right' evidenced by scrip. The statutory limitations upon this method of acquiring title are threefold:

"First. No more than 160 acres can be entered in any single body by such scrip.

"Second. No location of scrip along any navigable waters can be made within a distance of eighty rods of any lands already located along such waters. No entry can be allowed extending more than 160 rods along the shore of any navigable water and along such shore a space of at least eighty rods must be reserved from entry between all such claims. Moreover, the statute expressly provides that a roadway sixty feet in width, parallel to the shore line as near as may be practicable, shall be reserved for the use of the public as a highway.

"Third. Nothing in the act contained is to be construed to authorize entries to be made or title to be acquired to the shore of any navigable waters within said district.

"Under the first limitation the navigation company and every other person is prevented from locating more than 160 acres in one body. By the construction of the land department, as shown in the record, this requires a separation between any two entries by the same person or in the same interest of a tract of forty acres. This would prevent the possibility of any one person or any one interest acquiring an entire tract like that of the 12,500 acres.

"The second limitation is important in that it prevents the entry of claims at any point on the shore greater in frontage than half a mile and requires that between the one and the next claim there shall be a frontage reserved and kept in public control of a quarter of a mile. The consequence is that in the seven miles of the frontage of this eliminated tract there must be reserved for government control and use and such disposition as congress may see fit to make, and free from private appropriation, a frontage of about two and three-quarters miles and so distributed along the shore in frontages of eighty rods as to make certain a public frontage of this width having all the advantage that any private frontage can have. * * *

"Since the executive order was issued, Oct. 25, 1910, there have been four locations under soldiers' scrip—three of them of 160 rods each along the bay, separated by two divisions of eighty rods, dated Nov. 1, Nov. 10 and Nov. 11, 1910, respectively. I shall assume that all of them are in the interest of the Controller Railway and Navigation company. None of them has been approved or passed to patent, but I shall assume that they can be passed to valid patent. Where the fourth one, dated March 11, 1911, is, does not appear, but it is understood to front 160 rods on the bay shore on the east side of the Campbell river. In addition, upon one of the eighty rod intervals, there is filed what is termed a terminal railroad claim of forty acres covering the entire frontage of eighty rods. This was scrip Dec. 14, 1910, after the location of the two scrip entries which it connects. It is plainly invalid because placed on the interval of eighty rods expressly reserved by statute for the public.

"Of the shore frontage unlocated which may be appropriated by scrip, there remain six frontages of 160 rods each on the shore of the tract opened by the executive order, facing the bay and channel, and in addition about two and three-fourths miles of frontage distributed in eleven eighty rod strips, subject to public use and the disposition of congress. There is thus ample room for many other railroads to reach high water mark on Controller bay, and there to acquire tracts for terminals."

The president further pointed out that there was a third reason why the opening of this tract to settlement and limited private appropriations could not lead to a monopoly in the Controller Railway and Navigation company or any one else. This was the fact that the distance from the dry or shore land—the line of high water mark—to the line of low water mark was between two and three miles and the distance to deep water a mile farther, making it necessary, if a harbor were to be reached and used, to construct a trestle three or four miles long. This tidal flat was owned by the United States, and the acquisition under the public land laws of tracts on the shore abutting these tidal flats gave no right or title to the flats.

"The order," continued the message, "has been criticised because it was not in the form of a proclamation instead of an order. * * * The fact is that in law there is in effect no difference between a proclamation and an executive order. In practice the same publicity is given to each."

The president declared that the charge that the order was secret and that while it was made in October, 1910, no one knew of it until April, 1911, was utterly unfounded. It was announced at the time it was issued by various special correspondents and also by The Associated Press.

"Before closing," said the president, "I desire to allude to a circumstance which the terms of this resolution make pertinent and relevant. It is a widely published statement attributed to a newspaper correspondent that in an examination of the files of the interior department a few weeks ago a postscript was found attached to a letter of July 13, 1910, addressed by Richard S. Ryan to Secretary Ballinger, urging the elimination of land enough for terminals for the Controller Railway and Navigation company. The postscript was said to read as follows:

"Dear Dick: I went to see the president the other day. He asked me who it was I represented. I told him, according to our agreement, that I represented myself. But this didn't seem to satisfy him. So I sent for Charlie Taft and asked him to tell his brother, the president, who he was really represented. The president made no further objection to my claim. DICK."

This postscript the president denounced as a wicked fabrication, utterly without foundation in fact. Its only significance, he said, was the light it threw on the bitterness and venom of some of those who took active part in every discussion of Alaskan issues.

WHAT TRAVELERS MAY BRING TO AMERICA.

Paragraph 709, appearing in the free list of the present tariff act, governing passengers' baggage, is as follows:

"Wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, toilet articles and similar personal effects of persons arriving in the United States; but this exemption shall only include such articles as actually accompany and are in the use of, and as are necessary and appropriate for the wear and use of such persons, for the immediate purposes of the journey and present comfort and convenience, and shall not be held to apply to merchandise or articles intended for other persons or for sale; provided, that in case of residents of the United States, returning from abroad, all wearing apparel and other personal effects taken by them out of the United States to foreign countries shall be admitted free of duty, without regard to their value, upon their identity being established, under appropriate rules and regulations to be prescribed by the secretary of the treasury, but no more than $100 in value of articles purchased abroad by such residents of the United States shall be admitted free of duty upon their return."

RESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Residents of the United States must declare all articles which have been obtained abroad by purchase or otherwise, whether used or unused, and whether on their persons, in their clothing, or in their baggage. The foreign value of each article, stated in United States money, must also be declared.

Articles taken from the United States and remodeled, repaired or improved abroad must be declared and the cost of such remodeling, repairing or improving must be separately stated.

The following articles are dutiable:

Household effects, including books, pictures, furniture, tableware, table linen, bed linen and other similar articles, unless used abroad by the owner for a period of a year or more.

Goods in the piece.

Articles of any nature intended for sale or for other persons.

The following articles are free if under $100 in value and if necessary for comfort and convenience for the purposes of the journey and not for sale nor for other persons:

Clothing.

Toilet articles, such as combs, brushes, soaps, cosmetics, shaving and manicle sets, etc.

Personal adornments, jewelry, etc.

Similar personal effects, which may include cameras, canes, fishing tackle, glasses (field, opera, marine), golf sticks, guns, musical instruments, parasols, topographs, snokers' articles, steamer rugs and shawls, toys, trunks, valises, etc.

Clothing and other personal effects taken out of the United States by the passenger if not increased in value or improved in condition while abroad. If increased in value or improved in condition, they are dutiable on the cost of the repairs.

The above lists of articles which are dutiable and nondutiable are stated for the assistance of passengers and are not exhaustive. All articles are dutiable unless specifically exempted by law.

Pack in one trunk, if practicable, all dutiable articles.

Receipted bills for foreign purchases should be presented whenever possible.

Use does not exempt from duty wearing apparel or other articles obtained abroad, but such articles will be appraised at their value in the condition as imported, due allowance being made for depreciation through wear and use.

NONRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Nonresidents of the United States are entitled to bring in free of duty, without regard to the $100 exemption, such articles as are in the nature of wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, toilet articles and similar personal effects, necessary and appropriate for their wear and use for the purposes of the journey and present comfort and convenience and which are not intended for other persons or for sale.

Citizens of the United States or persons who have at any time resided in this country shall be deemed to be residents of the United States unless they shall have abandoned their residence in this country and acquired an actual bona fide residence in a foreign country.

Such citizens or former residents who desire the privileges granted by law to nonresidents must show to the satisfaction of the collector's representative on the pier, subject to the collector's approval, that they have given up their residence in the United States and that they have become bona fide residents of a foreign country.

The residence of a wife follows that of the husband, and the residence of a minor child follows that of its parents.

GOODS OTHER THAN PERSONAL EFFECTS.

Household effects of persons or families from foreign countries will be admitted free of duty only if actually used abroad by them not less than one year, and if not intended for any other person, nor for sale. Such effects should be declared whether the passenger be a resident or a nonresident of the United States.

Articles intended for use in business or for other persons, theatrical apparel, properties and scenery, must be declared by passengers, whether residents or nonresidents.

CIGARS AND CIGARETTES.

All cigars and cigarettes must be declared. Each passenger over 15 years of age may bring in free of duty 50 cigars or 200 cigarettes if for the bona fide use of such passenger. Such cigars and cigarettes will be in addition to the articles included within the $100 exemption.

BAGGAGE DECLARATIONS.

The law provides that every person entering the United States shall make a declaration and entry of his or her personal baggage. The law further requires that the values of articles shall be determined by customs officers, irrespective of the statements of passengers relative thereto.

It will thus be seen that there is no discourtesy in the requirement that both a declaration and an independent appraisal shall be made. Taken together, these requirements place the passenger in the same position as any other importer of merchandise.

Passengers should observe that on the sheet given them there are two forms of declarations; the one printed in black is for residents of the United States; the one in red, for nonresidents.

The exact number of pieces of baggage, including all trunks, valises, boxes, packages and hand bags of any description accompanying the passenger, must be stated in the declaration.

The senior member of a family, present as a passenger, may make declaration for the entire family.

Ladies traveling alone should state that fact in their declarations in order that an expeditious examination of their baggage may be made.

When the declaration is prepared and signed, the coupon at the bottom of the form must be detached and retained by the passenger, and the form given to the officer of the ship designated to receive the same. A declaration spoiled in its preparation must not be destroyed, but turned over to the purser, who will furnish a new blank one to the passenger.

After all the baggage and effects of the passenger have been landed upon the pier, the coupon which has been retained by the passenger must be presented at the inspector's desk, whereupon an inspector will be detailed to examine the baggage. Passengers must acknowledge in person, on the pier, their signature to their declarations.

Examination of any baggage may be postponed if the passenger requests the officer taking his declaration to have it sent to the appraiser's store.

Passengers must not deduct the $100 exemption in making out their declarations. Such deductions will be made by customs officers on the pier.

CONTESTED VALUATION.

Passengers dissatisfied with values placed upon dutiable articles by the customs officers on the pier may demand a re-examination, but application therefor should be immediately made to the officers there in charge. If for any reason this course is impracticable, the packages containing the articles should be left in customs custody and application for reappraisal made to the collector of customs, in writing, within ten days after the original appraisement. No request for reappraisal can be entertained after the articles have been removed from customs custody.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

Currency (or certified checks after June 1, 1911.) only can be accepted in payment of duties, but, upon request, baggage will be retained on the piers for twenty-four hours to enable the owner to secure currency or certified checks.

The offering of gratuities or bribes to customs officers is a violation of law. Customs officers who accept gratuities or bribes will be dismissed from the service and all parties concerned will be liable to criminal prosecution.

Discourtesy or incivility on the part of customs officers should be reported to the collector at the custom house, to the deputy collector or the deputy surveyor at the pier, or to the secretary of the treasury.

RELATIVES OF KING GEORGE V.

King George V. of England is closely connected by birth or marriage with the monarchs of Germany, Russia, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Spain and Greece.

1. Emperor William of Germany is a first cousin; his mother, the late Empress Frederick of Germany, was a sister of King Edward.

2. Both the czar and the zarina of Russia are related to King George. The czar's mother, the dowager empress of Russia, is a sister of Queen Alexandra, and Nicholas II. and George V. are, therefore, first cousins. The zarina is also a cousin. She was the Princess Alix of Hesse, a daughter of the late Princess Alice, sister of King Edward.

3. The king and queen of Norway are brother-in-law and sister of King George. The queen was the Princess Maud of Wales, King Edward's youngest daughter. King Haakon is also a cousin of King George, being a grandson of the late King Christian IX. of Denmark, Queen Alexandra's father.

BAGGAGE FOR TRANSPORTATION IN BOND.

Baggage intended for delivery at ports in the United States other than the port of arrival, or in transit through the United States to a foreign country, may be forwarded tuncro without the assessment of duty at the port of arrival, by the various railroads and express companies, whose representatives will be found on the pier.

Passengers desiring to have their baggage forwarded in bond should indicate such intention and state the value thereof in their declarations before any examination of the baggage has been made.

SEALSKIN GARMENTS.

An act of congress of 1897, as amended in 1910, expressly forbids the importation into the United States of garments made in whole or in part of the skins of seals taken in the waters of the Pacific ocean; and unless the owner is able to establish by competent evidence and to the satisfaction of the collector that the garments are not prohibited, they cannot be admitted.

PENALTY FOR NOT DECLARING ARTICLES OBTAINED ABROAD.

Under sections 2802 and 2032 of the revised statutes of the United States articles obtained abroad and not declared are subject to seizure, and the passenger is liable to criminal prosecution.

4. Queen Victoria of Spain is a daughter of Princess Henry of Battenberg, the late King Edward's youngest sister, and is, therefore, a cousin of King George.

5. King George of Greece is a brother of Queen Alexandra, and an uncle of King George.

6. The crown prince of Sweden is married to Princess Margaret of Connaught, a cousin of King George.

7. Frederick Augustus III., king of Saxony, is a third cousin of King George.

8. Manuel II. of Portugal is also a third cousin through his descent from Prince Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, a first cousin of Queen Victoria.

9. King Albert of Belgium is distantly related through his father, who was a great uncle of King Edward.

10. King Ferdinand of Bulgaria is another cousin, several times removed, through his grandfather, the late Prince Augustus of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

BATTLE WITH BURGLARS IN LONDON.

London, England, was the scene of a remarkable fight between two burglars on the one hand and a large force of police and soldiers on the other, early on the morning of Jan. 3, 1911. On the night of Dec. 16 previously the police interrupted an attempted burglary in a jewelry shop in Houndsditch and in the fight which followed three of the policemen and a burglar were mortally wounded. Discoveries were made which convinced the authorities that the thieves were anarchists, and three Russians were arrested on suspicion. Further investigation caused the police to believe that the headquarters of the gang were in a house in Sidney street. This place was surrounded at an hour when it was thought the inmates would be asleep, but when the police attempted to enter they were fired upon. Then a battle lasting several hours followed, in which 1,500 police, a company of Scots guards, a battery of horse artillery and a fire brigade took part. Home Secretary Churchill and thousands of spectators watched the fight, which terminated only when the building occupied by the desperadoes caught fire and was consumed. "Peter the Painter" and "Dutch Fritz," the reputed burglars and anarchists, went down in the flames and only their charred remains were recovered. Though hundreds of shots were fired only one police officer was seriously wounded. Several spectators were slightly injured by spent bullets.

AROUND THE WORLD IN FORTY DAYS.

Andre Jager-Schmidt of the Paris Illustrated Daily Excelsior started from Paris at 1:45 p. m. July 17, 1911, in an effort to lower the time around the globe made by M. Stiegler of the Matin, who used sixty-three days. M. Jager-Schmidt's route lay to Moscow and hence to Vladivostok. From the latter place he proceeded by steamer to Yokohama, whence he sailed for Vancouver, taking there a train for Montreal and going thence to New York, where he arrived Aug. 18. On the following day he sailed on the Olympic for Cherbourg, where he arrived Aug. 25. Leaving for Paris on the same day he arrived at his starting point at 9 a. m. Aug. 26, having consumed 39 days 13 hours 43 minutes 37½ seconds in gridding the earth.

STORM AT CHARLESTON, S. C.

Fifteen lives were lost and property valued at $1,000,000 was destroyed in a storm which visited Charleston, S. C. Sunday night and Mouday, Aug. 27-28, 1911. At the height of the gale the wind reached a velocity of ninety-four miles an hour and the tide rose eight feet at the battery in front of the city. Great damage was done in the harbor and the streets were strewn with debris. Several of the fatalities occurred through drowning.

COPYRIGHT LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Approved March 4, 1909.

The act to amend and consolidate the acts respecting copyright, in force July 1, 1909, provides that any person entitled thereto, upon complying with the provisions of the law, shall have the exclusive right (a) to print, reprint, publish, copy and vend the copyrighted work; (b) to translate the copyrighted work or make any other version of it if it be a literary work; to dramatize it if it be a nondramatic work; to convert it into a novel or other nondramatic work if it be a drama; to arrange or adapt it if it be a musical work; to finish it if it be a model or design for a work of art; (c) to deliver or authorize the delivery of the copyrighted work if it be a lecture, sermon, address or similar production; (d) to perform the copyrighted work publicly if it be a drama or, if it be a dramatic work and not reproduced in copies for sale, to vend the manuscript or any record thereof; to make or to procure the making of any transcription or record thereof by which it may in any manner be exhibited, performed or produced, and to exhibit, perform or produce it in any manner whatsoever; (e) to perform the copyrighted work publicly for profit if it be a musical composition and for the purpose of public performance for profit and to make any arrangement or setting of it in any system of notation or any form of record in which the thought of an author may be read or reproduced.

So far as they secure copyright controlling the parts of instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the musical work the law includes only compositions published after the act went into effect; it does not include the works of a foreign author or composer unless the country of which he is a citizen or subject grants similar rights to American citizens. Whenever the owner of a musical copyright has used or permitted the use of the copyrighted work upon the part of instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the musical work, any other person may make a similar use of the work upon the payment to the owner of a royalty of 2 cents on each such part manufactured. The reproduction or rendition of a musical composition by or upon coin-operated machines shall not be deemed a public performance for profit unless a fee is charged for admission to the place where the reproduction occurs.

The works for which copyright may be secured include all the writings of an author.

The application for registration shall specify to which of the following classes the work in which copyright is claimed belongs:

- (a) Books, including composite and encyclopedic works, directories, gazetteers and other compilations.
- (b) Periodicals, including newspapers.
- (c) Lectures, sermons, addresses, prepared for oral delivery.
- (d) Dramatic or dramatic-musical compositions.
- (e) Musical compositions.
- (f) Maps.
- (g) Works of art; models or designs for works of art.
- (h) Reproductions of a work of art.

(i) Drawings or plastic works of a scientific or technical character.

- (j) Photographs.
- (k) Prints and pictorial illustrations.

These specifications do not, however, limit the subject matter of copyright as defined in the law nor does any error in classification invalidate the copyright protection secured.

Copyright extends to the work of a foreign author or proprietor only in case he is domiciled in the United States at the time of the first publication of his work or if the country of which he is a citizen grants similar copyright protection to citizens of the United States.

Any person entitled thereto by the law may secure copyright for his work by publication thereof with the notice of copyright required by the act, and such notice shall be affixed to each copy published or offered for sale in the United States. Such person may obtain registration of his claim to copyright by complying with the provisions of the act, including the deposit of copies, whereupon the register of copyrights shall issue to him a certificate as provided for in the law. Copyright may also be had of the works of an author of which copies are not reproduced for sale by the deposit with claim of copyright of one complete copy, if it be a lecture or similar production, or a dramatic or musical composition; of a photographic print if it be a photograph, or of a photograph or other identifying reproduction thereof if it be a work of art or a plastic work or drawing.

After copyright has been secured there must be deposited in the copyright office in Washington, D. C., two complete copies of the best edition thereof, which copies, if the work be a book or periodical, shall have been produced in accordance with the manufacturing provisions of the act, or if such work be a contribution to a periodical for which contribution special registration is requested one copy of the issue or issues containing such contribution. Failure to deposit the copies within a given time after notice from the register of copyrights makes the proprietor of the copyright liable to a fine of $100 and twice the retail price of the work, and the copyright becomes void.

The text of all books and periodicals specified in paragraphs (a) and (b) above, except the original text of a book of foreign origin in a language other than English, must in order to secure protection be printed from type set within the limits of the United States, either by hand, machinery or other process, and the printing of the text and the binding of the books must also be done within the United States. An affidavit of such manufacture is required.

The notice of copyright required consists either of the word "copyright" or the abbreviation "copr.," accompanied by the name of the copyright proprietor, and if the work be a printed literary, musical or dramatic work, the notice must also include the year in which the copyright was secured by publication. In the case, however, of copies of works specified in paragraphs (f) to (k) inclusive (given above) the notice may consist of the letter C inclosed within a circle, accompanied by the initials, monogram, mark or symbol of the copyright proprietor, provided his name appears elsewhere on the copies. In the case of a book or other printed publication the notice shall be applied on the title page or on the page immediately following, or if a periodical either upon the title page or upon the first page of text of each separate number or under the title heading; or if a musical work upon its title page or the first page of music.

Where the copyright proprietor has sought to comply with the law with respect to notice the omission of such notice by mistake from a particular copy or copies shall not invalidate the copyright or prevent recovery for infringement against any person who, after actual notice of the copyright, begins an undertaking to infringe it, but shall prevent the recovery of damages against an innocent infringer who has been misled by the omission of the notice.

In the case of a book in English published abroad before publication in this country, the deposit in the copyright office within thirty days of one copy of the foreign edition, with a request for the reservation of the copyright, secures for the author or owner an ad interim copyright for thirty days after such deposit is made.

The copyright secured by the act endures for twenty-eight years from the date of the first publication. In the case of any posthumous work, periodical, encyclopedic or other composite work upon which the copyright was originally secured by the proprietor thereof, or of any work copyrighted by a corporate body, or by an employer for whom such work is made for hire, the proprietor of such copyright shall be entitled to a renewal of the copyright in such work for the further term of twenty-eight years when application for such renewal shall have been made within one year prior to the expiration of the original term. In the case of any other copyrighted work, including a contribution by an individual author to a periodical or to a cyclopedic or other composite work, when such contribution has been separately copyrighted, the author of such work, if living, or the heirs, executors or next of kin, if the author be dead, shall be entitled to a renewal of the copyright for a further term of twenty-eight years. In default of such application for renewal the copyright in any work shall end at the expiration of twenty-eight years.

If any person shall infringe the copyright in any work protected under the copyright laws of the United States, such person shall be liable:

(a) To an injunction restraining such infringement.

(b) To pay to the copyright proprietor such damages as the copyright proprietor may have suffered due to the infringement, as well as all the profits which the infringer shall have made from such infringement, and in proving profits the plaintiff shall be required to prove sales only and the defendant shall be required to prove every element of cost which he claims, or in lieu of actual damages or profits such damages as to the court shall appear to be just, and in assessing such damages the court may, in its discretion, allow the amounts as hereinafter stated (in numbered paragraphs), but in the case of a newspaper reproduction of a copyrighted photograph such damages shall not exceed the sum of $200 nor be less than $50, and such damages shall in no other case exceed the sum of $250 and shall not be regarded as a penalty:

1. In the case of a painting, statue or sculpture, $10 for every infringing copy made or sold by or found in the possession of the infringer or his agents or employes;

2. In the case of any work enumerated in the list (given above) of works for which copyright may be asked, except a painting, statue or sculpture, $1 for every infringing copy.

3. In the case of a lecture, sermon or address, $50 for every infringing delivery.

4. In the case of dramatic or dramatic-musical or a choral or orchestral composition, $100 for the first and $50 for every subsequent infringing performance; in the case of other musical compositions, $10 for every infringing performance.

(c) To deliver up on oath all articles alleged to infringe a copyright.

(d) To deliver up on oath for destruction all the infringing copies or devices, as well as all plates, molds, matrices or other means for making such infringing copies, as the court may order.

(e) Whenever the owner of a musical copyright has used or permitted the use of the copyrighted work upon the parts of musical instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the musical work, then in case of infringement by the unauthorized manufacture, use or sale of interchangeable parts, such as disks, rolls, bands or cylinders for use in mechanical music-producing machines, no criminal action shall be brought, but in a civil action an injunction may be granted upon such terms as the court may impose and the plaintiff shall be entitled to recover in lieu of profits and damages a royalty as provided in the act.

Any person who shall willfully and for profit infringe any copyright, or willfully aid or abet such infringement, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for not exceeding one year or by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, or both, in the discretion of the court. It is provided, however, that nothing in the act shall prevent the performance of religious or secular works, such as oratorios, cantatas, masses or octavo choruses by public schools, church choirs or vocal societies, provided the performance is for charitable or educational purposes and not for profit.

Any person who shall fraudulently place a copyright notice upon any uncopyrighted article, or shall fraudulently remove or alter the notice upon any copyrighted article, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be subject to a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000. Any person who shall knowingly sell or issue any article bearing a notice of United States copyright which has not been copyrighted in this country, or who shall knowingly import any article bearing such notice, shall be liable to a fine of $100.

During the existence of the American copyright in any book the importation of any piratical copies thereof or of any copies not produced in accordance with the manufacturing provisions of the copyright law, or of any plates of the same not made from type set in this country, or any copies produced by lithographic or photo-engraving processes not performed within the United States, is prohibited. Except as to piratical copies this does not apply.

(a) To works in raised characters for the blind;

(b) To a foreign newspaper or magazine, although containing matter copyrighted in the United States printed or reprinted by authority of the copyright owner, unless such newspaper or magazine contains also copyright matter printed without such authorization;

(c) To the authorized edition of a book in a foreign language of which only a translation into English has been copyrighted in this country;

(d) To any book published abroad with the authorization of the author or copyright proprietor under the following circumstances:

1. When imported, not more than one copy at a time, for individual use and not for sale, but such privilege of importation shall not extend to a foreign reprint of a book by an American author copyrighted in the United States;

2. When imported by or for the use of the United States;

3. When imported, for use and not for sale, not more than one copy of any such book in any one invoice, in good faith, by or for any society or institution incorporated for educational, literary, philosophical, scientific or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for any college, academy, school or seminary of learning, or for any state school, college, university or free public library in the United States;

4. When such books form parts of libraries or collections purchased en bloc for the use of societies, institutions or libraries, or form parts of the library or personal baggage belonging to persons or families arriving from foreign countries and are not intended for sale.

Original actions shall be maintained under the copyright law unless the same be begun within three years after the cause of action arose.

Copyright may be assigned, mortgaged or bequeathed by will.

There shall be appointed by the librarian of congress a register of copyrights at a salary of $4,000 a year and an assistant register at $3,000 a year.

These with their subordinate assistants shall perform all the duties relating to the registration of copyrights. The register of copyrights shall keep such record books in the copyright office as are required to carry out the provisions of the law, and whenever deposit has been made in the copyright office of a copy of any work under the provisions of the act he shall make entry thereof.

In the case of each entry the person recorded as the claimant of the copyright shall be entitled to a certificate of registration under seal of the copyright office.

The register of copyrights shall receive and the persons to whom the services designated are rendered shall pay the following fees: For the registration of any work subject to copyright, $1, which sum is to include a certificate of registration under seal: Provided, that in the case of photographs the fee shall be 50 cents where a certificate is not demanded. For every additional certificate of registration made, 50 cents. For recording and certifying any instrument of writing for the assignment of copyright or license, or for any copy of such certificate or license, duly certified, if not over 300 words in length, $1; if more than 300 and less than 1,000, $2; if more than 1,000 words in length, $1 additional for each 1,000 words or fraction thereof over 300 words. For recording the notice of user or acquiescence specified in the act, 25 cents for each notice of not over fifty words and an additional 25 cents for each additional 100 words. For comparing any copy of an assignment with the record of such document in the copyright office and certifying the same under seal, $1. For recording the extension or renewal of copyright, 50 cents. For recording the transfer of the proprietorship of copyrighted articles, 10 cents for each title of a book or other article in addition to the fee for recording the instrument of assignment. For any requested search of copyright office records, indexes or deposits, 50 cents for each full hour consumed in making such search. Only one registration at one fee shall be required in the case of several volumes of the same book deposited at the same time.

APPLICATIONS FOR PATENTS.

[Condensed from Rules of Practice

A patent may be obtained by any person who has invented or discovered any new and useful art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof not previously patented or described in this or any other country, for more than two years prior to his application, unless the same has proved to have been abandoned. A patent may also be obtained for any new design for a manufacture, bust, statue, alto-relievo or bas-relief; for the printing of woolen, silk or other fabrics; for any new impression, ornament, pattern, print or picture to be placed on or woven into any article of manufacture; and for any new, useful and original shape or configuration of any article of manufacture, upon payment of fees and taking the other necessary steps.

Applications for patents must be in writing, in the English language and signed by the inventor if alive. The application must include the first fee of $15, a petition, specification and oath, and drawings, model or specimen when required. The petition must be addressed to the commissioner of patents and must give the name and full address of the applicant, must designate by title the invention sought to be patented, must contain a reference to the specification for a full disclosure of such invention and must be signed by the applicant.

The specification must contain the following in the order named: Name and residence of the applicant with title of invention; a general statement of the object and nature of the invention; a brief description of the several views of the drawings (if the invention admits of such illustration); a detailed description; claim or claims; signature of inventor and signatures of two witnesses. Claims for a machine and its product and claims for a machine and the process in the performance of which the machine is used must be presented in separate applications, but claims for a process and its product may be presented in the same application.

The applicant, if the inventor, must make oath or affirmation that he believes himself to be the first inventor or discoverer of that which he seeks to have patented. The oath or affirmation must also state of what country he is a citizen and where he resides. In every original application the applicant must swear or affirm that the invention has not been patented to himself or to others with his knowledge or consent in this or any foreign country for more than two years prior to his application or on an application for a patent filed in any foreign country by himself or his legal representative or assigns more than seven months prior to his application. If application has been made in any foreign country, full and explicit details must be given. The oath or affirmation may be made before any one who is authorized by the laws of his country to administer oaths.

Drawings must be on white paper with India ink and the sheets must be exactly 10x15 inches in size, with a margin of one inch. They must show all details clearly and without the use of superfluous lines.

Applications for reissues must state why the original patent is believed to be defective and tell precisely how the errors were made. These applications must be accompanied by the original patent and an offer to surrender the same; or, if the original be lost, by an affidavit to that effect and certified copy of the patent. Every applicant whose claims have been twice rejected for the same reasons may appeal from the primary examiners to the examiners in chief upon the payment of a fee of $10.

The duration of patents is for seventeen years except in the case of design patents, which may be for three and a half, seven or fourteen years, as the inventor may elect.

Caveats or notices given to the patent office of claims to inventions to prevent the issue of patents to other persons upon the same invention, without notice to caveaters, may be filed upon the payment of a fee of $10. Caveats must contain the same information as applications for patents.

REGISTRATION OF TRADE-MARKS.

Under the law passed by congress Feb. 20, 1905, and effective April 1, 1905, citizens of the United States, or foreigners living in countries affording similar privileges to citizens of the United States, may obtain registration of trade-marks used in commerce with foreign nations, or among the several states, or with Indian tribes, by complying with the following requirements: First, by filing in the patent office an application therefor in writing, addressed to the commissioner of patents, signed by the applicant, specifying his name, domicile, location and citizenship; the class of merchandise and the particular description of goods comprised in such class to which the trade-mark is appropriated; a statement of the mode in which the same is applied and affixed to goods, and the length of time during which the trade-mark has been used. With this statement shall be filed a drawing of the trade-mark, signed by the applicant or his attorney, and such number of specimens of the trade-mark as may be required by the commissioner of patents. Second, by paying into the treasury of the United States the sum of $10 and otherwise complying with the requirements of the law and such regulations as may be prescribed by the commissioner of patents.

The application must be accompanied by a written declaration to the effect that the applicant believes himself to be the owner of the trade-mark sought to be registered and that no other person or corporation has the right to use it; that such trade-mark is in use and that the description and drawing presented are correct. Trade-marks consisting of or comprising immoral or scandalous matter, the coat of arms, flag or other insignia of the United States or of any state or foreign nation cannot be registered. Fees for renewal of trade-marks and for filing opposition to registration are $10 each; for appeals from examiners to the commissioner of patents, $15 each.

Further information may be had by applying to the commissioner of patents, Washington, D. C.

IMMIGRATION LAW OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Immigration law provides for a poll tax of $4 for every alien entering the United States. This tax is not levied upon aliens who shall enter the United States after an uninterrupted residence of at least one year, immediately preceding such entrance, in Canada, Newfoundland, Cuba or Mexico, nor upon aliens in transit through the United States, nor upon aliens arriving in Guam, Porto Rico or Hawaii.

Whenever the president shall be satisfied that passports issued by any foreign government to its citizens to go to any country other than the United States or to any insular possession of the United States, or to the canal zone, are being used for the purpose of enabling the holders to come to the continental territory of the United States to the detriment of labor conditions therein, the president may refuse to permit such citizens of the country issuing such passports to enter the continental territory of the United States from such other country or from such insular possessions or from the canal zone.

The following classes are excluded from admission into the United States: All idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons, epileptics, insane persons and persons who have been insane within five years; persons who have had two or more attacks of insanity at any time previously; paupers; persons likely to become a public charge; professional beggars; persons afflicted with tuberculosis or with a loathsome or dangerous contagious disease; persons who have committed a felony or other crime involving moral turpitude; polygamists or persons who believe in the practice of polygamy; anarchists or persons who believe in or advocate the overthrow by force or violence of the government of the United States, or of all governments, or of all forms of law, or the assassination of public officials; prostitutes, or women and girls coming into the United States for any immoral purpose; contract laborers who have been induced to migrate to this country by offers of employment or in consequence of agreements of any kind, verbal or written, express or implied, to perform labor in this country of any kind, skilled or unskilled; any person whose ticket or passage is paid for with the money of another, or who is assisted by others to come, unless it is satisfactorily shown that such person does not belong to one of the foregoing excluded classes and that said ticket or passage was not paid for by any corporation, society, municipality or foreign government, directly or indirectly; all children under 16 years of age unaccompanied by one or both of their parents, at the discretion of the secretary of commerce and labor. Nothing in the act shall exclude, if otherwise admissible, persons convicted of an offense purely political, not involving moral turpitude. Skilled labor may be imported if labor of like kind unemployed cannot be found in this country. The provisions of the law applicable to contract labor shall not be held to exclude professional actors, artists, lecturers, singers, clergymen, professors for colleges or seminaries, persons belonging to any recognized learned profession or persons employed strictly as personal or domestic servants.

It is unlawful to assist or encourage the importation or migration of any alien by promise of employment through advertisements printed in any foreign country. This, however, does not apply to states or territories advertising the inducements they offer to immigration thereto.

All aliens brought to this country in violation of law shall be immediately sent back by the owners of the vessels bringing them. Any alien entering the United States in violation of law and such as become public charges from causes existing prior to their landing shall be deported at any time within three years after their arrival.

No person who disbelieves in or who is opposed to all organized government, or who is a member of or affiliated with any organization entertaining and teaching such belief in or opposition to all organized government, or who advocates or teaches the duty, necessity or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of any officer or officers, either of specific individuals or of officers generally, of the government of the United States, or of any other organized government, because of his or their official character, shall be permitted to enter the United States.

THE HOMESTEAD LAW.

Any person who is the head of a family, or who is 21 years old and is a citizen of the United States or has filed his declaration of intention to become such, and who is not the proprietor of more than 160 acres of land in any state or territory, is entitled to enter one-quarter section (160 acres) or less quantity of unappropriated public land under the homestead laws. The applicant must make affidavit that he is entitled to the privileges of the homestead act and that the entry is made for his exclusive use and for actual settlement and cultivation, and must pay the legal fee and that part of the commission required, as follows: Fee for 160 acres, $10; commission, $4 to $12. Fee for eighty acres, $5; commission, $2 to $6. Within six months from the date of entry the settler must take up his residence upon the land and cultivate the same for five years continuously. At the expiration of this period, or within two years thereafter, proof of residence and cultivation must be established by four witnesses. The proof of settlement, with the certificate of the register of the land office, is forwarded to the general land office at Washington, from which a patent is issued. Final proof cannot be made until the expiration of five years from date of entry, and must be made within seven years. The government recognizes no sale of a homestead claim. After the expiration of fourteen months from date of entry the law allows the homesteader to secure title to the tract, if so desired, by paying for it in cash and making proof of settlement, residence and cultivation for that period.

The law allows only one homestead privilege to any one person.

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE.

Civil-service act approved Jan. 16, 1883.

Officers—Three commissioners are appointed by the president to assist him in classifying the government offices and positions, formulating rules and enforcing the law. Their office is in Washington, D. C. The chief examiner is appointed by the commissioners to secure accuracy, uniformity and justice in the proceedings of the examining boards. The secretary to the commission is appointed by the president.

General Rules—The fundamental rules governing appointments to government positions are found in the civil-service act itself. Based upon these are many other regulations formulated by the commission and promulgated by the president from time to time as new contingencies arise. The present rules were approved March 20, 1903, and went into effect April 15, 1903. In a general way they require that there must be free, open examinations of applicants for positions in the public service; that appointments shall be made from those graded highest in the examinations; that appointments to the service in Washington shall be apportioned among the states and territories according to population; that there shall be a period (six months) of probation before any absolute appointment is made; that no person in the public service is for that reason obliged to contribute to any political fund or is subject to dismissal for refusing to so contribute; that no person in the public service has any right to use his official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person. Applicants for positions shall not be questioned as to their political or religious beliefs and no discrimination shall be exercised against or in favor of any applicant or employee on account of his religion or politics. The classified civil service shall include all officers and employees in the executive civil service of the United States except laborers and persons whose appointments are subject to confirmation by the senate.

Examinations—These are conducted by boards of examiners chosen from among persons in government employ and are held twice a year in all the states and territories at convenient places. In Illinois, for example, they are usually held at Cairo, Chicago and Peoria. The dates are announced through the newspapers or by other means. They can always be learned by applying to the commission or to the nearest postoffice or custom house. Those who desire to take examinations are advised to write to the commission, in Washington for the "Manual of Examinations," which is sent free to all applicants. It is revised semiannually, on Jan. 1 and July 1. The January edition contains a schedule of the spring examinations and the July edition contains a schedule of the fall examinations. Full information is given as to the methods and rules governing examinations, manner of making application, qualifications required, regulations for raising examination papers, certification for and chances of appointment, and as far as possible it outlines the scope of the different subjects of general and technical examinations. These are practical in character and are designed to test the relative capacity and fitness to discharge the duties to be performed. It is necessary to obtain an average percentage of 70 to be eligible for appointment, except that applicants are entitled to preference because of honorable discharge from the military or naval service for disability resulting from wounds or sickness incurred in the line of duty need obtain but 65 per cent. The period of eligibility is one year.

Qualifications of Applicants—No person will be examined who is not a citizen of the United States; who is not within the age limitations prescribed; who is physically disqualified for the service which he seeks; who has been guilty of criminal, infamous, dishonest or disgraceful conduct; who has been dismissed from the public service for delinquency and misconduct or has failed to receive absolute appointment after probation; who is addicted to the habitual use of intoxicating liquors to excess, or who has made a false statement in his application. The age limitations in the more important branches of the public service are: Postoffice, 18 to 45 years; rural letter carriers, 17 to 55; internal revenue, 21 years and over; railway mail, 18 to 35; lighthouse, 18 to 50; life saving, 18 to 45; general departmental, 20 and over. These age limitations are subject to change by the commission. They do not apply to applicants of the preferred class. Applicants for the position of railway mail clerk must be at least 5 feet 6 inches in height, exclusive of boots or shoes, and weigh not less than 135 pounds in ordinary clothing and have no physical defects. Applicants for certain other positions have to come up to similar physical requirements.

Method of Appointment—Whenever a vacancy exists the appointing officer makes requisition upon the civil-service commission for a certification of names to fill the vacancy, specifying the kind of position vacant, the sex desired and the salary. The commission thereupon takes from the proper register of eligibles the names of three persons standing highest of the sex called for and certifies them to the appointing officer, who is required to make the selection. He may choose any one of the three names, returning the other two to the register to await further certification. The time of examination is not considered, as the highest in average percentage on the register must be certified first. If after a probationary period of six months the name of the appointee is continued on the roll of the department in which he serves the appointment is considered absolute.

Removals—No person can be removed from a competitive position except for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the public service and for reasons given in writing. No examination of witnesses nor any trial shall be required except in the discretion of the officer making the removal.

Salaries—Entrance to the department service is usually in the lowest grades, the higher grades being generally filled by promotion. The usual entrance grade is about $900, but the applicant may be appointed at $840, $760 or even $600.

THE MONROE AND DRAGO DOCTRINES.

The "Monroe doctrine" was enunciated by President Monroe in his message to congress Dec. 2, 1823. Referring to steps taken to arrange the respective rights of Russia, Great Britain and the United States on the northwest coast of this continent, the president went on to say:

"In the discussions to which this interest has given rise, and in the arrangements by which they may terminate, the occasion has been deemed proper for asserting, as a principle in which the rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintain, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European power. * * * We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not inter-ferred and shall not interfere. But with the governments who have declared their independence and maintain it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and on just principles, acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

DRAGO DOCTRINE.

When in the winter of 1902-03 Germany, Britain and Italy blockaded the ports of Venezuela in attempt to make the latter country settle up its debts Dr. L. F. Drago, a noted jurist of Argentina, maintained that force cannot be used by one power to collect money owing to its citizens by another power. Prominence was given to the contention by the fact that it was officially upheld by Argentina and favored by other South American republics. The principle embodied has become generally known as the "Drago doctrine."

UNITED STATES LIFE SAVING SERVICE.

The life saving establishment of the United States at the close of the fiscal year ended June 30, 1910, comprised 281 stations, of which 201 were on the Atlantic and gulf coasts, 60 on the coasts of the great lakes, 19 on the Pacific coast and 1 on the Ohio river at Louisville, Ky. The crews numbered in all about 600 men. Statistics of the service for the year ended June 30, 1910, and from Nov. 1, 1871, when the system was established, to June 30, 1910, follow:

	1910.	1871-1910.

UNITED STATES TARIFF COMMISSION.

Appointed Sept. 11, 1909.

Prof. Henry C. Emery, Yale university, New Haven, Conn.
 James B. Reynolds, assistant secretary of the treasury, Washington, D. C.
 Alvin H. Sanders, editor Breeders' Gazette, Chicago.
 Prof. James M. Page, economist, Virginia.
 William M. Howard, lawyer, Georgia.

The appointment of the commission was authorized in the second section of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law of 1909, the last sentence in the section reading: "To secure the information necessary in carrying out the provisions of this section the president is authorized to employ such persons as may be required." The maximum compensation of each member of the commission is $7,500.

SYNOPSIS OF TARIFF LEGISLATION SINCE 1884.

Morrison Bills—First bill presented to 48th congress during Chester A. Arthur's administration; proposed a horizontal reduction of 20 per cent with free iron ore, coal and lumber; defeated in house April 15, 1884, by vote of 159 to 155; house heavily democratic and senate republican. Second bill presented to 49th congress during Grover Cleveland's first administration; similar to first bill, proposing free wool, salt and lumber; defeated in house June 17, 1886, by a vote of 157 to 140; house democratic, senate republican.
 Mills Bill—Presented to 50th congress during Cleveland's first administration; provided for free lumber and wool, reduction on pig iron and abolition of specific duties on cotton; passed by house July 21, 1888, by vote of 162 to 149, but failed in senate; house democratic, senate republican.
 McKinley Bill—Passed by 51st congress during Benjamin Harrison's administration; became law Oct. 6, 1890; high protective measure, though remitting duties on sugar and providing for reciprocity treaties; both houses of congress republican.
 Wilson Bill—Passed by 53d congress during Cleveland's second administration; became law Aug. 17, 1894, without the president's signature; both houses democratic; measure reduced duties in some cases and made additions to free list, notably wool.

 Dingley Bill—Passed by 54th congress during McKinley's administration; approved July 24, 1897; passed by house 265 yeas to 122 nays, 27 members not voting; passed by senate 38 yeas to 23 nays, 23 not voting; house contained 206 republicans and 134 democrats and senate 46 republicans and 34 democrats; measure raised rates to produce more revenue, but was similar in many respects to the McKinley act.
 Payne-Aldrich bill passed at extra session of 61st congress in first year of President William H. Taft's administration; approved Aug. 5, 1909; passed the house by a vote of 217 to 161 and the senate by a vote of 45 to 34. The conference vote in the house was 195 yeas to 133 nays, twenty republicans voting in the negative and two democrats in the affirmative. In the senate the vote on the final conference report was 47 to 31, seven republicans voting against it. In general the revision of the Dingley act was in the direction of lower duties, but there were some increases. The law is given practically in full in The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book for 1910.

THE SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION IN WASHINGTON.

The Smithsonian institution was established by statute in 1846, under the terms of the will of James Smithson, who bequeathed his fortune in 1826 to the United States for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge among men." From the income of the fund a building, known as the Smithsonian building, was erected in Washington, D. C., on land given by the United States. The institution is legally an establishment having as its members the president and vice-president of the United States, the chief justice and the president's cabinet. It is governed by a board of regents consisting of the vice-president, the chief justice, three members of the United States senate, three members of the house of representatives and six citizens appointed by joint resolution of congress. It is under the immediate direction of the secretary of the Smithsonian institution, who is the executive officer of the board and the director of the institution's activities. The institution aids investigators by making grants for research and exploration, providing for lectures, initiating scientific projects and publishing scientific papers. It has administrative charge of the national museum, the national gallery of art, the international exchange service, the national zoological park, the astrophysical observatory and the regional bureau for the international catalogue of scientific literature. The institution's original endowment of $541,000 has been increased by gifts and accumulated interest to $87,000, yielding an annual income of $53,375. The secretary of the institution is Charles D. Walcott.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

CANAL STATISTICS (OFFICIAL).

Length from deep water to deep water—50.5 miles.
 Length on land—40.5 miles.
 Length at summit level—31.7 miles.
 Bottom width of channel—Maximum, 1,000 feet;
 minimum (in Culebra cut), 300 feet.
 Depth—Minimum, 41 feet; maximum, 45 feet.
 Summit level—85 feet above mean tide.
 Locks in pairs—12.
 Locks, usable length—1,000 feet.
 Locks, usable width—110 feet.
 Gatun lake, area—164 square miles.
 Gatun lake, channel depth—85 to 45 feet.
 Concrete required—5,000,000 cubic yards.
 Time of transit through canal—10 to 12 hours.
 Time of passage through locks—3 hours.
 Length of relocated Panama railroad—46.2 miles.
 Canal zone, area—About 448 square miles.
 Canal zone area owned by United States—About 322 square miles.
 French buildings acquired—2,150.
 French buildings used—1,537.
 Value of utilized French equipment—$1,000,000.
 Canal force, average at work—About 39,000.
 Estimated total cost of canal—$375,000,000.
 Work begun by Americans—May 4, 1904.
 Length of canal in use in August, 1910—10.5 miles.
 Probable date of completion—Jan. 1, 1915.

 gineer Feb. 26, 1907.

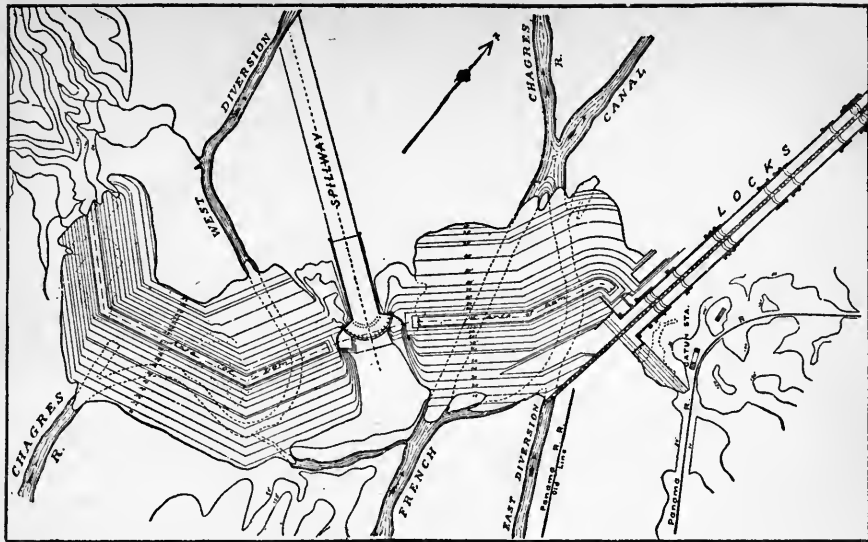

PLAN OF THE CANAL.

The entire length of the Panama canal from deep water in the Atlantic to deep water in the Pacific is 50.5 miles. Its length on land is 40.5 miles. In passing through the canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific, a vessel will enter a channel with a bottom width of 500 feet in Limon bay and follow this for about seven miles to Gatun, where it will enter a series of three locks in flight and be lifted eighty-five feet to the level of the Gatun lake. It will fall at full ocean speed through this lake, in a channel varying from 1,000 to 500 feet in width, for a distance of about twenty-four miles, to Bas Obispo, where it will enter the Culebra cut. It will fall through the cut, a distance of about nine miles, in a channel with a bottom width of 300 feet, to Pedro Miguel.
 There it will enter a lock and be lowered 30½ feet to a small lake at an elevation of 54½ feet above sea level and will fall through this for about 1½ miles to Miraflores. There it will enter two locks in series and be lowered to sea level, passing out into the Pacific through a channel 8½ miles in length, with a bottom width of 500 feet.
 The depth of the approach channel on the Atlantic side, where the tidal oscillation does not exceed 1½ feet, will be 41 feet at mean tide, and on the Pacific side, where the maximum oscillation is 23 feet, the depth will be 45 feet at mean tide.

GATUN DAM.

The Gatun dam, which will form Gatun lake by impounding the waters of the Chagres river and other streams, will be nearly 1½ miles long, measured on its crest, nearly half a mile wide at its base, about 400 feet wide at the water surface, about 100 feet wide at the top, and its crest, as planned, will be at an elevation of 115 feet above mean sea level, or 30 feet above the normal level of the lake. The interior of the dam will be formed of a natural mixture of sand and clay, dredged by hydraulic process from pits above and below the dam, and placed between two large masses of rock and miscellaneous material, obtained from steam-shovel excavation at various points along the canal. The top and up-stream slope will be ripped. The spillway is a concrete lined opening, 1,200 feet long and 300 feet wide, cut through a hill of rock nearly in the center of the dam, the bottom of the opening being ten feet above sea level. During the construction of the dam, all the waters discharged from the Chagres river and its tributaries will flow through this opening.
 When the lake is formed, the spillway will be closed with a concrete dam, fitted with gates and machinery for regulating the water level of the lake.

The water level of Gatun lake, extending through the Culebra cut, will be maintained at the south end by an earth dam connecting the locks at Pedro Miguel with the high ground to the westward, about 1,700 feet long, with its crest at an elevation of 105 feet above mean tide. A small lake between the locks at Pedro Miguel and Miraflores will be formed by dams connecting the walls of Miraflores locks with the high ground on either side. The dam to the westward will be of earth, about 2,700 feet long, having its crest about 15 feet above the water in Miraflores lake. The east dam will be of concrete, about 500 feet long, and will form a spillway for Miraflores lake, with crest gates similar to those at the spillway of the Gatun dam.

GATUN LAKE.

Gatun lake will cover an area of 164 square miles, with a depth in the ship channel varying from 85 to 45 feet. Throughout the first 16 miles from Gatun the width of the channel will be 1,000 feet; then for 4 miles it will be 800 feet and for 4 miles more, 500 feet, when the entrance to Culebra cut, at Bas Obispo, will be reached. The water level in the cut will be that of the lake and the bottom width of the channel will be 300 feet.

CANAL ZONE.

The canal zone contains about 448 square miles. It begins at a point three marine miles from mean low-water mark in each ocean and extends for five miles on each side of the center line of the route of the canal. It includes the group of islands in the Bay of Panama named Perico, Naos, Culebra and Flamenco. The cities of Panama and Colon are excluded from the zone, but the United States has the right to enforce sanitary ordinances and maintain public order there in case the republic of Panama should not be able to do so. Of the 448 square miles in the zone the United States owns 322 and private persons 126. The private property may, however, be acquired at any time by the United States by purchase or by the exercise of the right of eminent domain.

THE LOCKS.

There will be twelve locks in the canal, all in duplicate, three pairs in flight at Gatun, with a combined lift of 85 feet; one pair at Pedro Miguel, with a lift of 30½ feet, and two pairs at Miraflores, with a combined lift of 54½ feet at mean tide. The dimensions of all are the same—a usable length of 1,000 feet and a usable width of 110 feet. Each lock will be a chamber, with walls and floors of concrete and water-tight gates at each end.

The side walls will be 45 to 50 feet wide at the surface of floor; will be perpendicular on the face and will narrow from the point 24½ feet above the floor until they are 8 feet wide at the top. The middle wall will be 60 feet wide, approximately 81 feet high, and each face will be vertical. At a point 42½ feet above the surface of the floor and 15 feet above the top of the middle culvert, this wall will divide into two parts, leaving a space down the center much like the letter "U," which will be 19 feet wide at the bottom. In this center space, which will be 44 feet wide at the top, will be a tunnel divided into three stories or galleries. The lowest gallery will be for drainage; the middle for the wires that carry the electric current to operate the gate and valve machinery, which will be installed in the center wall, and the upper will be a passageway for the operators. The lock chambers will be filled and emptied through lateral culverts in the floors, connected with main culverts, 18 feet in diameter, in the walls, the water flowing in and out by gravity.

The lock gates will be steel structures, 7 feet thick, 65 feet long and from 47 to 32 feet high. They will weigh from 300 to 600 tons each. For the entire canal 92 leaves will be required, the total weighing 57,000 tons. Intermediate gates will be used in the locks to save water and time, if desired, in locking small vessels through, the gates being so fixed as to divide the locks into chambers 600 and 400 feet long, respectively. Of the vessels navigating the high seas, 95 per cent are less than 600 feet long. In the construction of the locks it is estimated that there will be used approximately 4,500,000 cubic yards of concrete.

No vessel will be permitted to enter or pass through the locks under its own power. Electricity will be used to tow all vessels into and through the locks, and to operate all gates and valves, power being generated by water turbines from the head created by Gatun lake. The time required to pass a vessel through all the locks is estimated at three hours, one hour and a half in the three locks at Gatun and about the same time in the three locks on the Pacific side. The time of the passage of a vessel through the entire canal is estimated as ranging from ten to twelve hours, according to the size of the ship and the rate of speed at which it can travel.

CANAL FORCE.

The total force at work on the canal and railroad July 26, 1911, was 34,681. Canal employes numbered 27,740 and Panama railroad 6,941. The number of "gold" or white American employes was 4,250. The great majority of laborers are West Indian negroes.

CANAL FORTIFICATIONS.

An initial expenditure of $3,000,000 for the fortification of the Panama canal was authorized in the sundry civil act passed by congress and approved March 4, 1911. Of this amount $2,000,000 was for the construction of seacoast batteries on the canal zone.

PANAMA RAILROAD.

The Panama railroad and the steamships run in connection with it between New York and Colon are owned and operated by the United States government. When the canal was purchased from the new French canal company the railroad and steamship property was included among the assets. It practically parallels the route of the canal nearly the whole distance. Since it was acquired by the Americans the line has been almost completely re-located to correspond with changes in the route and plan of the canal. It is 46½ miles long and runs between the cities of Colon and Panama.

END OF PANAMA CANAL LIBEL CASES.

Jan. 3, 1910, the Supreme court of the United States approved the action of the federal Circuit court in New York in quashing the Panama canal libel indictment against the Press Publishing company of New York, N. Y. This indictment was brought by the United States government, which alleged that certain articles published by the defendant were libelous. These articles stated in effect that Charles P. Taft, Douglas Robinson and William Nelson Cromwell, with J. Pierpont Morgan and others, obtained control of the Panama canal route for about $3,000,000, and by the cooperation of Theodore Roosevelt, then president of the United States and brother-in-law of Mr. Robinson, and William H. Taft, then secretary of war and brother of Mr. Taft, were enabled to effect the sale of the Panama canal to the United States at a profit of $36,000,000.

Chief Justice White, in announcing the opinion of the court, interpreted the statute under which the United States sought to prosecute to mean that it was to be applied to crimes committed on federal reservations when otherwise the criminal would go unwhipped of justice.

NOTE—The above list, it will be noted, includes a number of canalized rivers, and does not include canals completed since 1906.

THE HENNEPIN CANAL.

Preliminary surveys begun—1871.

Excavation begun—1892.

Work completed—1907.

Canal formally opened—Oct. 24, 1907.

Length of main channel—75 miles.

Length of feeder—29.3 miles.

Total length—104 miles.

Depth—7 feet.

Width at bottom—52 feet.

Width at water line—80 feet.

Locks on main canal—32.

Locks on feeder—1.

Total cost—$7,500,000.

The Hennepin, or more comprehensively, the Illinois and Mississippi canal, extends from the Illinois river near Hennetin to the Mississippi three miles below Rock Island. The navigable feeder extends from Rock river at Sterling and Rock Falls to the main line near Sheffield and is of the same size and just as navigable as the main line. Water is forced into it by a dam a quarter of a mile long at Sterling.

NEW YORK STATE BARGE CANAL.

Total length—442 miles.

Width—From 122 to 160 feet.

Depth—From 12 to 20 feet.

Locks—61.

Excavation—175,000,000 cubic yards.

Cost—$101,000,000.

Work on the New York state barge canal, or system of canals, according to estimates, will be completed in 1916. The main waterway will follow the line of the present Erie canal in most places from the Hudson river at Waterford, Saratoga county, to Tonawanda and Lake Erie; another division will connect the Hudson with Lake Champlain, while a third branch will run from the main canal at Three Rivers Point to Lake Ontario. The waterway will be wide and deep enough to accommodate steam barges with a maximum capacity of 1,800 tons each.

THE CARNEGIE HERO FUND.

April 15, 1904, Andrew Carnegie placed in the hands of a commission the sum of $5,000,000 to be known as "the hero fund." Its purpose is to reward with medals and money the men and women who perform heroic deeds, or, in case they lose their lives, to care for those dependent upon them. Widows are given support until they remarry and children are given allowances until they are 16 years of age. Only such as follow peaceful vocations on sea or land in the United States and Canada are eligible to become beneficiaries of the fund. The first awards of medals and money were made in May, and others in October, 1905. The names of the recipients, with the reason for the award in each case, will be found in The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book beginning with the volume for 1906.

THE CARNEGIE FOUNDATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF TEACHING.

In April, 1905, Andrew Carnegie transferred to a board of trustees $10,000,000 in United States Steel corporation fifty-year bonds bearing 5 per cent interest, the purpose of the trust fund thus created being to provide retiring allowances or annuities to teachers in the higher institutions of learning in the United States, Canada, and Newfoundland under such regulations as the trustees might decide to be wise. Schools below the rank of college and institutions directly under the control of religious denominations are excluded from the benefits of the fund. State universities were also originally excluded from the benefits of the fund, but March 31, 1908, Mr. Carnegie, at the request of the National Association of State Universities, admitted them and at the same time added to the foundation $5,000,000 in 5 per cent bonds, making the fund $15,000,000 in all.

The policy of the board has been to confer the retiring allowances through the institutions themselves rather than to individual teachers, on the principle that the annuity must come as a right and not as a charity. The professors in the accepted institutions receive retired pay in due course and under established rules. Allowances are granted on the basis of age, service and disability. Any person 65 years of age who has had not less than fifteen years of service as professor or not less than twenty-five years of service as instructor or as instructor and professor, and who is at the time a professor or an instructor in an accepted institution, shall be entitled to an annual retiring allowance, computed as follows:

(a) For an active pay of $1,200 or less an allowance of $1,000, provided no retiring allowance shall exceed 90 per cent of the active pay.

(b) For an active pay greater than $1,200 the retiring allowance shall equal $1,000, increased by $50 for each $100 of active pay in excess of $1,200.

(c) No retiring allowance shall exceed $4,000.

Any person who has had twenty-five years of service as a professor or thirty years of service as professor and instructor and who is at the time either a professor or an instructor in an accepted institution, shall, in the case of disability unfitting him for the work of a teacher, as proved by medical examination, be entitled to a retiring allowance computed as follows:

(a) For an active pay of $1,200 or less a retiring allowance of $800, provided that no retiring allowance shall exceed 80 per cent of the active pay.

(b) For an active pay greater than $1,200 the retiring allowance shall equal $800, increased by $40 for each $100 in excess of $1,200.

(c) For each additional year of service above twenty-five for a professor or thirty for an instructor the retiring allowance shall be increased by 1 per cent of the active pay.

(d) No retiring allowance shall exceed $4,000.

At the beginning of 1911 the foundation was paying 346 pensions, the cost being $521,070. The professors receiving these pensions came from 139 colleges, distributed over forty-three states of the THREE GREAT WATER TUNNELS.

Gunnison Tunnel—The Gunnison tunnel, carrying water from the Gunnison river to the Uncompahgre valley in Colorado, is 30,582 feet long. It was built by the United States reclamation service in 1908-1909 at a cost of more than $2,500,000. It is 10½ by 11½ feet in dimensions and carries 1,300 cubic feet of water per second. The tunnel runs through solid rock.

Elizabeth Tunnel—The Elizabeth tunnel, which is part of the water supply system of Los Angeles, Cal., is 26,872 feet long and cost $1,612,200. It was built in 1910-1911 and pierces the Sierra Madre range of mountains. It is 10 feet 10 inches high and 9 feet 6 inches wide. Its capacity is 650,000,000 gallons a day.

Sutro Tunnel—The Sutro tunnel was built in the '70s to drain and ventilate the Comstock mines in Nevada. It is 8 by 10 feet in dimensions. The main tunnel is 20,500 feet long and cost about $5,000,000.

CARNEGIE INSTITUTION OF WASHINGTON.

The Carnegie institution was endowed by Andrew Carnegie with $10,000,000 and incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia, Jan. 4, 1902. It was, however, deemed advisable to have it incorporated by act of congress, and this was effected May 18, 1904. Section 2 of the act specifies that the objects of the corporation shall be to encourage, in the broadest and most liberal manner, investigation, research and discovery, and the application of knowledge to the improvement of mankind. The projects considered by the institute are chiefly of three classes, namely:

First, large projects or departments of work, whose execution requires continuous research by a corps of investigators during a series of years.

Secondly, minor projects, which may be carried out by individual experts in a limited period of time.

Thirdly, research associates and assistants, aid being given to a few investigators possessing exceptional abilities and opportunities for research work.

An annual appropriation is made for the purpose of publishing the results of investigations made under the auspices of the institution, and for certain works which would not otherwise be readily printed. These publications are not distributed gratis except to a limited list of the greater libraries of the world.

Dec. 4, 1907, Andrew Carnegie added $2,000,000 to the endowment of the institution, and Jan. 20, 1911, he gave $10,000,000 more, making the total endowment $22,000,000.

The following table shows the gross sums allotted to large projects since the organization of the institution up to 1910:

Botanical research.....	$159,968.00
Economics and sociology.....	160,000.00
Experimental evolution.....	191,420.00
Geophysical research.....	376,028.00
Historical research.....	110,350.00

Marine biology.....	120,770.00
Meridian astronomy.....	115,655.00

Nutrition research.....	233,963.70
Solar observatory.....	691,520.00
Terrestrial magnetism.....	371,920.00
The total amount expended up to 1911 was	$4,590,829.50.

The larger projects now under way and the names of the department directors or investigators are as follows:

- Botanical research—D. T. MacDougal.
- Economics and sociology—Henry W. Farnam.
- Experimental evolution—Charles B. Davenport.
- Geophysics—Arthur L. Day.
- Historical research—J. F. Jameson.
- Marine biology—A. G. Mayer.
- Meridian astronomy—Lewis Boss.
- Nutrition—F. G. Benedict.
- Solar physics—George E. Hale.
- Terrestrial magnetism—A. L. Bauer.

The officers are as follows:
 President of the institution—Robert S. Woodward.
 Officers of the board of trustees—John S. Billings, chairman; Ellihu Root, vice-chairman; C. H. Dodge, secretary.

Executive committee—William H. Welch, chairman; John S. Billings, S. Weir Mitchell, Ellihu Root, Robert S. Woodward, C. H. Dodge, C. D. Walcott, William Barclay Parsons.

Trustees—John S. Billings, Robert S. Brookings, John L. Cadwalader, Cleveland H. Dodge, Simon Flexner, W. N. Frew, Lyman J. Gage, Henry L. Higginson, Charles L. Hutchinson, Seth Low, S. Woodward, William H. Taft, William H. Welch, George W. Wickersham.

The administration building of the institution is located on the southeast corner of 16th and P streets, N. W., Washington, D. C. The institution, however, is neither a branch of nor subject to any special regulations of the United States government. Neither is it a college or a university, nor does it maintain a library or museum.

STATES AND TERRITORIES IN THE UNION.

There are forty-eight states in the union and three territories, the latter including Hawaii, the District of Columbia and Alaska. The District of Columbia is governed by three commissioners, appointed by the president of the United States under laws passed directly by congress. Alaska has a governor appointed by the president, but has no legislature. It is under the direct control of congress. Porto Rico, the Philippines and other island possessions of the United States are not technically territories, each having a special form of government.

THE ROCKEFELLER FUND OF THE GENERAL EDUCATION BOARD.

Organized Feb. 27, 1902.

Chairman—Frederick T. Gates.

Secretary—Wallace Buttrick.

Assistant secretary—E. C. Sage.

Treasurer—L. G. Myers.

Offices—17 Battery place, New York, N. Y.

The general education board was informally organized Feb. 27, 1902, at the suggestion of John D. Rockefeller's committee on benevolence and was given a charter by congress and formally organized in January, 1903. The plan was designed and adapted to assist Mr. Rockefeller in distributing his gifts to education and to afford a medium through which other men of means might contribute to the same end. The board, a few days after its initial meeting, received from Mr. Rockefeller the sum of $1,000,000, the use of which was to be confined to the study and promotion of education in the southern states. An office was opened in New York city April 1, 1902, and work was begun. The board in co-operation with the department of agriculture took steps to educate the farmers of the south in scientific farming and up to the summer of 1903 had established about 15,000 demonstration farms under the supervision of eighty-nine agents in Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia and Florida. The board also, in co-operation with the state universities of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Florida and the department of education in Louisiana, has established more than 500 high schools. About $700,000 of the original sum given by Mr. Rockefeller has been expended in this way, about half being for schools for colored people.

June 30, 1905, the board was notified that Mr. Rockefeller would donate $10,000,000, the principal of which was to be held in perpetuity as a foundation for education, the income to be used for the benefit of institutions of learning in such manner as might be deemed best adapted to promote a comprehensive system of higher education in the United States. This sum was paid in cash Oct. 1, 1905, and the board in accepting it designated it as "The John D. Rockefeller Foundation for Higher Education." After due consideration the board adopted the following principles as defining its general policy: "To co-operate sympathetically and helpfully with the religious denominations; to choose the centers of wealth and population as the permanent pivots of an educational system; to mass its funds on endowments, securing in this work the largest possible local co-operation."

Feb. 7, 1907, the following letter was received from John D. Rockefeller, Jr.:

"Gentlemen: My father authorizes me to say that on or before April 1, 1907, he will give to the general education board income-bearing securities, the present market value of which is about $32,000,000, one-third to be added to the permanent endowment of the board, two-thirds to be applied to such specific objects within the corporate purposes of the board as either he or I may from time to time direct, any remainder not so designated at the death of the survivor to be added also to the permanent endowment of the board."

July 7, 1909, Mr. Rockefeller, through his son, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., notified the board that he had decided to give $10,000,000 additional to the permanent fund, the income to be devoted to present needs of great importance. The board was also authorized to distribute the principal of the fund, and all other endowment funds hitherto contributed by Mr. Rockefeller, whenever in the discretion of the members or their successors it should be deemed advisable to do so.

In the northern states the board devotes itself exclusively to the promotion of higher education, having always in view the desirability of aiding such institutions as, taken together, will constitute an adequate system of higher education for each of the several states, thus seeking to correct and prevent duplication and waste and securing the highest efficiency. In the southern states its work for the colleges is similar to that in the north, but in addition it seeks to promote public high schools, to promote elementary education by increasing the productive efficiency of rural life and to aid in developing schools for the training of leaders among the colored people.

FOUNDATION FOR THE PROMOTION OF INDUSTRIAL PEACE.

Established in 1907.

In 1906 President Theodore Roosevelt was awarded the Alfred B. Nobel peace prize and at his suggestion an act was passed by congress March 2, 1907, establishing the Foundation for the Promotion of Industrial Peace. To this organization he turned over the money received from the Nobel committee to be used as the nucleus of a fund the income of which is to be used in promoting an annual conference in Washington between representatives of capital and of labor with a view to bringing about a better understanding between employers and employees, thus promoting industrial peace. The chief justice of the United States Supreme court, the secretary of agriculture and the secretary of commerce and labor, and their successors in office, and four persons appointed by the president of the United States to represent capital, labor and the general public, are the trustees. The trustees are authorized to pay over the funds from time to time to a committee of nine members, known as "the industrial peace committee," whose duty it is to make arrangements for the conferences.

THE SAGE FOUNDATION.

March 12, 1907, Mrs. Russell Sage of New York announced that she had set aside the sum of $10,000,000 to be known as the Sage foundation and to be devoted to the improvement of the social and living conditions in the United States. As trustees she appointed Robert W. DeForest, Cleveland H. Dodge, Daniel C. Gilman, John M. Glenn, Miss Helen Gould, Mrs. William B. Rice and Miss Louise L. Schuyler.

Following is a part of the statement given out by Mrs. Sage as to the object of the gift: "I have set aside $10,000,000 for the endowment of this foundation. Its object is the improvement of social and living conditions in the United States. The means to that end will include research, publication, education, the establishment and maintenance of charitable and beneficial activities, agencies and institutions and the aid of any such activities, agencies and institutions already established."

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.

The library of congress was established in 1800 in the city of Washington, D. C. It was burned in 1814, and in 1851 lost 35,000 volumes by fire. The present library building, which cost $6,347,000, was opened to the public in November, 1897. It is located a short distance east of the capitol and is the largest and finest building of its kind in the world.

June 30, 1910, the library contained 1,793,158 books and pamphlets, 118,165 maps, 517,806 pieces of music and 320,251 photographs, prints, engravings and lithographs. The copyright office is a distinct division of the library with its own force of employes. The total number of employes in the library is 482 and the annual cost of maintenance is now about $625,000.

INHERITANCE TAX IN ILLINOIS.

The Illinois law taxing gifts, legacies and inheritances was passed by the legislature in 1895 and amended in 1901. Its constitutionality was contested, but the United States Supreme court in a decision rendered Jan. 19, 1903, held it to be valid.

Under the provisions of this law all property, real, personal and mixed, which shall pass by will or by the intestate laws of the state from any resident of the state or any one whose property is in this state to any person or persons is subject to a tax at the following rates: When the beneficial interests to any property or income therefrom shall pass to any father, mother, husband, wife, child, brother, sister, wife or widow of the son or the husband of the daughter, or any adopted child or children, or to any lineal descendant born in lawful wedlock, the rate of tax shall be 1% on every $100 of the clear market value of such property received by each person and at the same rate for any less amount, provided that any estate which may be valued at less than $20,000 shall not be subject to any such tax; and the tax is to be levied in the above cases only upon the excess of $20,000 received by each person.

When the property passes to any uncle, aunt, niece, nephew or any lineal descendant of the same the rate shall be 2% on every $100 in excess of $2,000.

In all other cases the rate shall be as follows: On each and every $100 of the clear market value of all property and at the same rate for any less amount; on all estates of $10,000 and less, $3; on all estates of over $10,000 and not exceeding $20,000, $4; on all estates over $20,000 and not exceeding $50,000, $5, and all estates over $50,000, $6; provided, that an estate in the above case which may be valued at a less sum than $500 shall not be subject to any tax.

The total amount of inheritance taxes received by the state from Oct. 1, 1908, to Sept. 30, 1910, inclusive, was $1,096,492.89, of which Cook county paid $765,615.61.

The receipts of inheritance taxes for state purposes since the law went into effect have been as follows.

1896.....	$315.98	1904.....	402,395.23
1897.....	249.90	1905.....	701,837.71

1903.....	519,320.07

¹Widows and (except in Wisconsin) minor children taxable only on the excess above $10,000 received by each. ²Tax payable only by strangers in blood. ³Tax not payable when the property bore its just proportion of taxes prior to the owner's death. ⁴Applies to personal property only. ⁵Decedent's estates of less than $10,000 are also exempt. ⁶For the surviving husband or wife and children, if residents of Wyoming, $25,000. ⁷For widows, $10,000.

Note—The Oklahoma rates are subject to increase when the inheritance exceeds a certain amount in the various classes.

INCOME-TAX AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

July 5, 1909, congress passed the following joint resolution:

Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the United States in congress assembled (two-thirds of each house concurring therein), that the following article is proposed as an amendment to the constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the constitution:

"Article XVI. The congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever sources derived, without apportionment among the several states and without regard to any census or enumeration."

GREAT FIRE IN BANGOR, ME.

Bangor, Me., was visited by a destructive fire Sunday evening, April 30 1911. Nearly the whole business section was swept by the flames and many residences were burned. The total loss was between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000. The fire started in a hayshed on Broad street and, fanned by a strong wind, spread rapidly in a northwesterly direction. Both sides of Exchange street from York to State, both sides of State street from Kenduskeag stream to Broadway, a considerable part of Central and Franklin streets and nearly all of Park and Marlow streets were laid in ruins. The postoffice, public library, telephone office and the principal blocks containing banks, stores and other establishments were burned. Six churches were laid in ruins. The only public building that escaped was the city hall.

HIGH PRICE FOR LUTHER LETTER.

In Leipzig, Germany, May 3, 1911, a letter written by Martin Luther to Emperor Charles V. of the Holy Roman empire was sold to a Florence dealer for $25,500. It was said to have been purchased for J. Pierpont Morgan.

REVISED ANGLO-JAPANESE AGREEMENT.

PREAMBLE.

The government of Great Britain and the government of Japan, having in view the important changes which have taken place in the situation since the conclusion of the Anglo-Japanese agreement of Aug. 12, 1905, and believing that a revision of that agreement responding to such changes would contribute to general stability and repose, have agreed upon the following stipulations to replace the agreement, above mentioned, such stipulations having the same object as the said agreement, namely:

(a) The consolidation and maintenance of the general peace in the regions of eastern Asia and of India.

(b) The preservation of the common interests of all powers in China by insuring the independence and integrity of the Chinese empire and the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations in China.

(c) The maintenance of the territorial rights of the high contracting parties in the regions of eastern Asia and of India, and the defense of their special interests in the said regions.

ARTICLE I.

It is agreed that whenever, in the opinion of either Great Britain or Japan, any of the rights and interests referred to in the preamble of this agreement are in jeopardy, the two governments will communicate with one another fully and frankly, and will consider in common the measures which should be taken to safeguard those menaced rights or interests.

ARTICLE II.

If by reason of unprovoked attack or aggressive action, wherever arising, on the part of any power or powers, either high contracting party should be involved in war in defense of its territorial rights or special interests mentioned in the preamble of this agreement, the other high contracting party will at once come to the assistance of its ally, and will conduct the war in common and make peace in mutual agreement with it.

ARTICLE III.

The high contracting parties agree that neither of them will, without consulting the other, enter into separate arrangements with another power to the prejudice of the objects described in the preamble of this agreement.

ARTICLE IV.

Should either high contracting party conclude a treaty of general arbitration with a third power, it is agreed that nothing in this agreement shall entail upon such contracting party an obligation to go to war with the power with whom such treaty of arbitration is in force.

ARTICLE V.

The conditions under which armed assistance shall be afforded by either power to the other in the circumstances mentioned in the present agreement, and the means by which such assistance is to be made available, will be arranged by the naval and military authorities of the high contracting parties, who will from time to time consult one another fully and freely upon all questions of mutual interest.

ARTICLE VI.

The present agreement shall come into effect immediately after the date of its signature and remain in force for ten years from that date.

In case neither of the high contracting parties should have notified twelve months before the expiration of the said ten years the intention of terminating it, it shall remain binding until the expiration of one year from the day on which either of the high contracting parties shall have denounced it. But if, when the date fixed for its expiration arrives, either ally is actually engaged in war, the alliance shall, ipso facto, continue until peace is concluded.

In faith whereof the undersigned, duly authorized by their respective governments, have signed this agreement, and have affixed thereto their seals.

Done in duplicate at London, the 13th day of July, 1911.

REVOLUTION IN HAITI.

Dissatisfaction with the administration of President Antoine F. C. Simon of Haiti led to a revolution in the spring and summer of 1911. The uprising was led by Gen. Cincinnatus Leconte, former minister of the interior, and Gen. Antenor Firmin, who resigned the post of minister to Great Britain to join the rebels. The government troops were finally defeated and, Aug. 3, Port au Prince, the capital, was in the hands of the insurgents. President Simon took refuge on a warship and escaped to Jamaica. Aug. 6 Gen. Leconte's troops proclaimed him the chief executive and Aug. 14 he was unanimously elected to that position by congress.

CORONATION OF KING GEORGE V.

King George V. and Queen Mary of Britain were crowned in Westminster abbey, London, June 22, 1911, with what has been described as the most splendid, expensive and imposing ceremony of the kind that the world has seen. Most of the ancient forms were revived and a number of new ones added, including features in which the overseas dominions of the empire were given special recognition. The crowning itself was witnessed in whole or in part by some 7,500 persons, but the royal progress and other outdoor events had millions of spectators gathered from practically all parts of the earth. The programme, which required months of preparation, was carried out without a hitch or mishap of any kind. Houses and streets were lavishly decorated with flags and bunting, while at night the crowds were entertained by unusually original and brilliant electrical displays. Masts, pillars and arches adorned the thoroughfares through which the royal processions passed, while along the sides of the same streets were erected immense wooden stands for the spectators. All the leading countries of the world were represented by special ambassadors or by their future rulers. John Hays Hammond was the envoy of the United States. The British colonies were represented by their premiers.

Coronation week opened with a state banquet at Buckingham palace, June 20, at which the king and queen were hosts of the visiting and English royalties, the special foreign delegations, foreign ambassadors and ministers and other distinguished persons. The same evening a Shakespearean ball was given in Albert hall. June 21 was a day of special prayers for the king and queen. The sovereigns also received the overseas premiers and representatives. Rain and sunshine alternated on June 22, but the weather was propitious at the time the royal procession wended its way to Westminster abbey and when it returned to the palace at the conclusion of the ceremonies. The procession was divided into three sections. One was for the royal guests, another for the prince of Wales and other members of the royal family, and the third for the king and queen. The royal guests occupied fourteen dress carriages and the prince of Wales and relatives five. Few of the foreigners were recognized by the spectators, but the royal children were cheered. The imperial section of the procession was preceded by an escort of the 1st Life Guards, the king's bargemaster and twelve watermen, aids de camp, yeomen of the guard, equerries and escorts of colonial and Indian cavalry. When the king and queen appeared they were greeted with cheers which continued until the procession reached the abbey. The king wore a purple robe and velvet cap trimmed with ermine, while the queen was attired in a beautiful robe of cloth of gold.

In Westminster abbey the services began at 9:30 o'clock with the entry of the dean of Westminster and other clergy. The crowns and regalia were taken from the altar to the robing room, the choir chanting "O God, Our Help in Ages Past." After the seating of the royal guests, the prince of Wales and his brothers and sister entered and every one rose as they were conducted to their seats. At 11 o'clock trumpets announced the entrance of the king and queen and again every one rose. The initial anthem "I Was Glad" was sung as the imperial procession moved toward the throne, along an aisle lined with women of the guard in scarlet uniforms and carrying pikes. First came the clergy, including the dean of Westminster, the archbishops of Canterbury and York and the bishop of London. Then followed five pursuivants, heralds in medieval costumes and officers of the four orders of knighthood. Then came the standards of the kingdoms and the great colonies borne by some of the most eminent men in the empire.

Next in order came nobles bearing the queen's regalia and then Queen Mary herself in her coronation gown, with the jewels of the Garter presented by the Marys of the empire. She carried a bouquet of carnations and her long purple train was borne by six young women, daughters of earls. After the queen's cortege came the king's regalia carried by the highest nobles of the kingdom. The bible was borne by the bishop of Ripon, the chalice by the bishop of Winchester, the paten by the bishop of London, St. Edward's crown by the bishop of Northumberland, the orb by the duke of Somerset, the scepter by the duke of Richmond, the sword of state by Earl Beauchamp, the second sword by Earl Roberts, the third sword by Viscount Kitchener, the golden spurs by the earl of London and Lord Grey de Ruthyn, the scepter with cross by the duke of Argyll and St. Edward's staff by the duke of Roxburghe.

After them walked the king in his crimson robe of state, the train borne by eight noblemen of high rank, the collar of the Garter around his neck and on his head the cap of state. Their majesties passed their thrones and proceeded to the chairs of state on the south side of the altar, where they knelt at the footstools. On the king's right stood the lord chancellor, the lord great chamberlain, the lord high constable, the earl marshal and the garter-at-arms, the noblemen bearing the swords of state. The dean of Westminster, wearing a cope of crimson velvet, took his place on the south side of the altar. The archbishop of Canterbury was on the north, beyond him were the archbishop of York and the bishop of London with twenty-one other bishops, all in convocation robes.

Rising, the king replaced the cap of state, which he had removed while kneeling. Then the service began. The ancient ceremony was performed with the same symbols and the recital was little changed. The archbishop of Canterbury presented the king. Facing the four sides of the abbey in succession, he announced:

"Sirs: I here present unto you King George, the undoubted king of this realm. Wherefore all you who are come this day to do your homage and service, are you willing to do the same?"

As the voice of the archbishop died away the spell was broken by the blast of the trumpeters and a mighty chorus of "God save the king" shook the great edifice. Then followed the various rites. Two bishops sang the litany and the communion was recited. After a brief sermon by the archbishop of York on the text "I am among you as he that serveth," the king kissed the bible and signed the oath, swearing to govern according to the laws of the land and to maintain the protestant reformed religion, the recently modified form of this latter declaration being the one departure from the traditional recital.

The king was anointed by the archbishop of Canterbury, the lord great chamberlain touched his majesty's heels with the spurs, he was girded with sword of state and invested with the imperial robe and orb and received the ring and scepter. Thereupon the archbishop placed the crown upon the king's head. Again the trumpets sounded, and once more the abbey resounded with cheers and the cry, "God save the king!" Ascending the throne the king received the homage of the archbishop and then of the prince of Wales, the princes of the royal blood and peers, who touched the crown and kissed the monarch's cheek.

The more simple ceremony of crowning the queen consort followed. Her majesty was anointed, the crown was placed on her head and she received the ring, the scepter and the ivory rod. Then the queen ascended the throne and was seated beside the king.

Leaving the abbey on the return journey, the order of the processions was reversed, that of the king and queen coming first. The appearance of their majesties with their crowns was the signal for renewed cheering, waving of handkerchiefs and clanging of bells. The whole of the return trip to Buckingham palace was marked by similar enthusiasm.

June 23 the king and queen, attended by representatives from every part of the united kingdom, colonial premiers, Indian princes and civil and military officials, passed in procession through the city, the west end and south London, and were again cheered by vast numbers of spectators. Saturday, June 24, the king and queen reviewed 167 British warships and eighteen vessels representing seventeen foreign nations in the roadstead of Spithead. The United States was represented in this naval display by the battle ship Delaware. The aggregate value of the assembled war vessels was estimated at $500,000,000.

RATES OF POSTAGE AND MONEY ORDERS.

The domestic letter rate is 2 cents an ounce or fraction thereof, and it applies to the island possessions of the United States, Cuba, Canada, Newfoundland, Labrador, united kingdom, Germany (direct), Mexico, Shanghai, the canal zone and republic of Panama. The foreign letter rate is 5 cents an ounce or fraction thereof, and it applies to all foreign countries in the universal postal union except those named above.

DOMESTIC.

FIRST CLASS—Letters and all written or partly written matter whether sealed or unsealed, and all other matter sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, 2 cents per ounce or fraction thereof. Postal cards issued by the government sold at 1 cent each; double, or reply cards, 2 cents each. Cards must not be changed or mutilated in any way and no printing or writing other than the address is allowable on the address side. "Private mailing cards" (post cards) require 1 cent postage.

Among the articles requiring first-class postage are blank forms filled out in writing; certificates, checks and receipts filled out in writing; copy (manuscript or typewritten) unaccompanied by proof sheets; plans and drawings containing written words, letters or figures; price lists containing written figures changing individual items; old letters sent singly or in bulk; typewritten matter and manifold copies thereof, and stenographic notes.

SECOND CLASS—All regular newspapers, magazines and other periodicals issued at stated intervals less frequently than four times a year, when mailed by publishers or news agents, 1 cent a pound or fraction thereof; when mailed by others, 1 cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof.

THIRD CLASS—Books, circulars, pamphlets and other matter wholly in print (not included in second-class matter), 1 cent for each two ounces or fractional part thereof. The following named articles are among those subject to third-class rate of postage: Almanacs, architectural designs, blue prints, bulbs, seeds, roots, scions and plants, calendars, cards, press clippings with name and date of papers stamped or written in, engravings, samples of grain in its natural condition, imitation of hand or typewritten matter when mailed at post-office window in a minimum number of twenty identical copies separately addressed; insurance applications and other blank forms mainly in print; printed labels, lithographs, maps, music books, photographs, tags, proof sheets, periodicals having the character of books, and publications which depend for their circulation upon offers of premiums.

FOURTH CLASS—All matter not in the first, second or third class, which is not in its form or nature liable to destroy, deface or otherwise damage the contents of the mailbag or harm the person of any one engaged in the postal service, 1 cent an ounce or fraction thereof. Included in fourth-class mail matter are the following articles: Blank books, blank cards or paper, blotters, playing cards, celluloid, coin, crayon pictures, cut flowers, metal or wood cuts, drawings, dried fruit, dried plants, electrotype plates, framed engravings, envelopes, geological specimens, letterheads, cloth maps, samples of merchandise, metals, minerals, napkins, oil paintings, paper bags or wrapping paper, photograph albums, printed matter on other material than paper, queen bees properly packed, stationery, tin types, wall paper and wooden rulers bearing printed advertisements.

UNMAILABLE MATTER—Includes that which is prohibited by law, regulation or treaty stipulation and that which by reason of illegible or insufficient address cannot be forwarded to destination. Among the articles prohibited are poisons, explosives or inflammable articles, articles exhaling bad odors, vintous, spirituous and malt liquors, specimens of disease germs, lottery letters and circulars, indecent and scurrilous matter.

SPECIAL DELIVERY—Any article of mailable matter bearing a 10-cent special delivery stamp in addition to the regular postage is entitled to immediate delivery on its arrival at the office of address between the hours of 7 a. m. and 11 p. m., if the office be of the free-delivery class, and between the hours of 7 a. m. and 7 p. m., if the office be other than a free-delivery office.

REGISTRATION—All mailable matter may be registered at the rate of 10 cents for each package in addition to the regular rate of postage, which must be prepaid. An indemnity not to exceed $50 will be paid for the loss of first-class registered matter, and 50 francs ($10) in case of the loss of a registered article addressed to a country in the universal postal union, under certain conditions.

LIMITS OF WEIGHT—No package of third or fourth class matter weighing more than four pounds, except single books, will be received for conveyance by mail. The limit of weight does not apply to second-class matter mailed at the second-class rate of postage, or at the rate of 1 cent for each four ounces, nor is it enforced against matter fully prepaid with postage stamps affixed at the first-class or letter rate of postage.

POST CARDS—A post card must be an unfolded piece of cardboard not exceeding 3-9-16 by 5-9-16 inches, nor less than 2 1/4 by 4 inches in size; it must be in form and quality and weight of paper substantially like the government postal cards. It may be of any color not interfering with the legibility of the address; the face of the card may be divided by a vertical line, the right half to be used for the address only and the left for the message, etc.; very thin sheets of paper may be attached to the card, and such sheets may bear both writing and printing; advertisements may appear on the back of the card and on the left half of the face. Cards bearing particles of glass, metal, mica, sand, tinsel or similar substances are unmailable except in envelopes.

MONEY ORDER FEES—For domestic money orders in denominations of $100 or less the following fees are charged:

For orders for sums not exceeding $2.50.....	8c
For over $2.50 and not exceeding $5.....	8c
For over $5 and not exceeding $10.....	8c
For over $10 and not exceeding $20.....	10c
For over $20 and not exceeding $30.....	12c
For over $30 and not exceeding $40.....	8c
For over $40 and not exceeding $50.....	18c
For over $50 and not exceeding $60.....	20c
For over $60 and not exceeding $75.....	25c
For over $75 and not exceeding $100.....	80c

SUGGESTIONS—Direct your mail matter to a post-office, writing the name of the state plainly, and if to a city, add the street and number or postoffice box of the person addressed. Write or print your name and address, and the contents, if a package, upon the upper left-hand corner of all mail matter. This will insure the immediate return of all first-class matter to you for correction, if improperly addressed or insufficiently paid; and if it is not called for at destination it can be returned to you without going to the dead-letter office. If a letter, it will be returned free. Undelivered second, third and fourth class matter will not be forwarded or returned without a new prepayment of postage. When a return card appears on this matter either the sender or addressee is requested to send the postage. Register all valuable letters and packages.

FOREIGN.

Letter postage to Germany is 2 cents an ounce or fraction (in direct German steamers only); to Newfoundland, Great Britain and Ireland, 2 cents an ounce or fraction.

The rates of postage to all foreign countries (except Canada, Mexico, Panama and Cuba, which are the same as domestic rates) are as follows:

RAILROAD RATE DECISION.

Two important cases, involving practically the same issues, were decided by the interstate commerce commission Feb. 22, 1911. The first was that submitted Jan. 19, 1911, by carriers in official classification territory, they having filed tariffs naming increases upon all class rates and upon one-half the commodity rates. The territory, roughly speaking, is bounded on the north by Canada, on the east by the Atlantic ocean, on the south by the Ohio and Potomac rivers and on the west by the Mississippi river. The second case was that submitted on the same date by the principal carriers in western trunk line, trans-Missouri and Illinois freight committee territories, which had filed tariffs increasing the rates upon some 200 commodities. In both cases the carriers voluntarily postponed the effective dates of the tariffs filed, pending inquiry by the commission as to the reasonableness of such rates.

In the first case it was held that there was no evidence before the commission establishing the necessity for higher rates, and further, that probably increased rates would not be necessary in the future. Before any general advance in rates can be permitted, it was held, it must appear with reasonable certainty that carriers have exercised proper economy in the purchase of their supplies, in the payment of wages and in the general conduct of their business. In this case there was no testimony tending to show the cost of reproducing the railroad properties. The commission required the defendants to cancel the proposed tariffs both as to class and commodity rates.

In the second case the commission held that the proposed rates were beyond the limitations placed by law upon carriers, and should not become effective. They had not been proved to be just and reasonable. "The strength of the carriers' case," declared the commission in its decision, "is in these two contentions: (1) That the roads are not earning a fair return upon the value of their property; (2) that the cost of operating has increased because of increased wages. While it is true that the cost of operation has increased by the amount shown as allowed to labor and addition to wages, it is also true that operating revenues have increased so as to more than absorb the increased operating expense. Moreover, cost figures furnished would indicate that under skillful management an additional tonnage may be handled under a higher wage schedule without increasing the cost of the service given."

DYNAMITE EXPLOSION AT JERSEY CITY, N. J.

Thirty men were killed, hundreds of others injured and nearly $1,000,000 worth of property was destroyed by the explosion of 50,000 pounds of dynamite at the North river terminal of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in that part of Jersey City, N. J., known as Communipaw, at noon Feb. 1, 1911. Pier No. 7, at which the accident occurred, was blown away; two lighters were destroyed and several vessels, including three ferry boats, badly damaged, and the railroad terminal partially wrecked. The lower part of Manhattan island was shaken as by an earthquake. Thousands of panes of glass were broken and many persons were injured by the flying fragments. Something akin to a panic prevailed in the skyscrapers and in the streets. Considerable damage was done in Brooklyn, Staten island, Ellis island and elsewhere, the shock being distinctly felt as far away as Long Branch, forty-five miles from New York.

The explosion occurred while a large quantity of dynamite, shipped by the Du Pont Powder company, was being transferred from a freight car to the lighter Katherine W. The cause could not be definitely ascertained, as everybody and everything in the immediate vicinity met with instant annihilation, though it was suggested that the boilers of the lighter exploded.

ERUPTION OF TAAL VOLCANO.

Through the eruption of Mount Taal, a volcano rising from the center of Lake Taal, province of Batangas, Luzon, about 850 lives were lost Jan. 28, 1911. Several small villages along the shore of the lake were overwhelmed by a tidal wave and many persons were burned to death in fires started by molten lava from the mountain. The eruption was accompanied by heavy shocks, which continued for several days. There have been eight violent eruptions of this volcano since 1709.

POWDER EXPLOSION AT PLEASANT PRAIRIE, WIS.

Through a series of explosions in the plant of the Du Pont de Nemours Powder company at Pleasant Prairie, a few miles west of Kenosha, Wis., on the evening of March 9, 1911, one man was killed, scores of persons were injured and more than $1,000,000 worth of property was destroyed. The country within a radius of nearly 100 miles of the place was violently shaken and, until the facts were learned, it was supposed that an earthquake had occurred. There was great excitement in Chicago, Milwaukee and other neighboring cities, where considerable damage, chiefly in the shape of broken glass, was done.

The first explosion occurred at 8:17 o'clock and was followed almost immediately by four others. Five magazines, containing approximately 8,000 kegs of finished and 25,000 kegs of unfinished powder, and 250 tons of dynamite, blew up one after the other, the detonation of the dynamite causing the most violent shock. The original explosion took place in the glazehouse, where some 1,100 kegs of powder were being dried in steel cylinders. In this stage of its manufacture the powder is dry and hot and in a dangerous condition. The only man in the glazehouse, so far as known, was Elden Thompson, who was killed, not a trace of his body being found. Several other employes in adjoining buildings, though badly injured, escaped death.

The village of Pleasant Prairie was practically destroyed. It contained some 700 persons, nearly all of whose homes were so shattered as to be uninhabitable. Most of the people took refuge in Kenosha.

CHINESE CEASE WEARING QUEUES.

The agitation begun in China in 1910 against the old Manchu fashion of wearing the hair in queues or "pig-tails" was carried on effectively in 1911 throughout the empire. The custom was ridiculed by all the progressive newspapers and reformers as an emblem indicative of backwardness, distinguishing the Chinese from other civilized peoples. Societies were formed to carry on the agitation, with the result that thousands cut off their braids, in some cases celebrating the performance with firecracker festivals. Gen. Ying Chang, head of the war bureau, was the first member of the ministerial body to adopt the western fashion, and his example was followed by many other men in public life. By those familiar with conditions in China this queue cutting movement was regarded as a most significant sign of progress in the adoption of modern ideas of civilization.

WEIGHTS OF DIAMONDS AND FINENESS OF GOLD.

The weight of diamonds and other precious stones is expressed in carats, grains and quarter-grains. The grains are pearl grains, one of which is equal to four-fifths of a troy grain. Four quarter-grains make one grain and four grains make one carat. A carat is therefore equal to four-fifths of four troy grains, or 3.2.

The fineness of gold is also expressed in carats. Pure gold is said to be twenty-four carats fine. If it contains eight parts of a baser metal or alloy it is only sixteen carats fine. The carats therefore indicate the proportion of pure gold to alloy. Most of the gold used by jewelers is about fourteen carats fine, having ten parts of alloy.

WEATHER FORECASTS AND SIGNALS.

The operations of the weather bureau of the department of agriculture are based on observations of the weather taken at about 200 observatories throughout the United States at the same moment of time and telegraphed daily to Washington, D. C., and to other important cities. These observations, comprising barometric pressure, temperature, precipitation, winds and clouds, are entered upon outline charts of the United States by means of symbols, forming the "daily weather map," from which the forecasts are made. These forecasts are issued every day for every state in the union, and whenever necessary special warnings are sent out of storms, frosts, cold waves, heavy

It is estimated that the total number of persons in the United States to whom the weather forecasts are available is more than 4,000,000.

When No. 4 is placed above No. 1, 2 or 3 it indicates warmer; when below, colder; when not displayed, the temperature is expected to remain about stationary. During the late spring and early fall the cold-wave flag is used to indicate anticipated frosts.

A red flag with a black center indicates that a storm of marked violence is expected. The pennants displayed with the flags indicate the direction of the wind: Red, easterly (from northeast to south); white, westerly (from southwest to snows and floods. In addition to the main office in Washington, there are subordinate forecast centers in Chicago, New Orleans, Denver, San Francisco and Portland, Ore. Weather forecasts for a week in advance are now sent out from Washington and published each Monday.

The forecasts are first telegraphed to about 2,300 principal distributing points, whence they are further disseminated by telegraph, telephone and through the mail by means of forecast cards, rural free delivery slips and newspapers.

north). The pennant above the flag indicates that the wind is expected to blow from the northerly quadrants; below, from southerly quadrants.

By night a red light indicates easterly winds and a white light above a red light westerly winds.

Two red flags, with black centers, displayed one above the other, indicate the expected approach of tropical hurricanes, and also of those extremely severe and dangerous storms which occasionally move across the lakes and northern Atlantic coast. Hurricane warnings are not displayed at night.

CITIZENSHIP IN THE UNITED STATES.

All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. (Fourteenth amendment to the constitution.)

All persons born in the United States and not subject to any foreign power, excluding Indians not taxed, are declared to be citizens of the United States. (Sec. 1992, U. S. Revised Statutes.)

All children heretofore born or hereafter born out of the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, whose fathers were or may be, at the time of their birth, citizens thereof, are declared to be citizens of the United States; but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States. (Sec. 1993, U. S. Revised Statutes.)

Any woman who is now or may hereafter be married to a citizen of the United States and who might herself be lawfully naturalized shall be deemed a citizen. (Sec. 1995, U. S. Revised Statutes.)

Children born in the United States of alien parents are citizens of the United States.

When any alien who has formally declared his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States dies before he is actually naturalized the widow and children of such alien are citizens, Children of Chinese parents who are themselves aliens and incapable of becoming naturalized are citizens of the United States.

Children born in the United States of persons engaged in the diplomatic service of foreign governments are not citizens of the United States.

Children born of alien parents on a vessel of a foreign country while within the waters of the United States are not citizens of the United States, but of the country to which the vessel belongs.

Children born of alien parents in the United States have the right to make an election of nationality when they reach their majority.

Minors and children are citizens within the meaning of the term as used in the constitution.

Deserters from the military or naval service of the United States are liable to loss of citizenship.

Any alien being a free white person, an alien of African nativity or of African descent may become an American citizen by complying with the naturalization laws.

"Hereafter no state court or court of the United States shall admit Chinese to citizenship; and all laws in conflict with this act are repealed." (Sec. 14, act of May 6, 1882.)

The courts have held that neither Chinese, Japanese, Hawaiians, Burmese nor Indians can be naturalized.

The naturalization laws apply to women as well as men. An alien woman who marries a citizen, native or naturalized, becomes a naturalized citizen of the United States.

Aliens may become citizens of the United States by treaties with foreign powers, by conquest or by special acts of congress.

In an act approved March 2, 1907, it is provided that any American citizen shall have expatriated himself when he has been naturalized in any foreign state in conformity with its laws, or when he has taken an oath of allegiance to any foreign state.

When any naturalized citizen shall have resided for two years in the foreign state from which he came, or five years in any other foreign state, it shall be presumed that he has ceased to be an American citizen, and the place of his general abode shall be deemed his place of residence during said years; provided, however, that such presumption may be overcome on the presentation of satisfactory evidence to a diplomatic or consular officer of the United States, under such rules and regulations as the department of state may prescribe; and, provided also, that no American citizen shall be allowed to expatriate himself when this country is at war.

Any American woman who marries a foreigner shall take the nationality of her husband. At the termination of the marital relation she may resume her American citizenship, if abroad, by registering as an American citizen within one year with a consul of the United States, or by returning to reside in the United States, or, if residing in the United States at the termination of the marital relation, by continuing to reside therein.

Any foreign woman who acquires American citizenship by marriage to an American citizen shall be assumed to retain the same after the termination of the marital relation if she continue to reside in the United States, unless she makes formal renunciation thereof before a court having jurisdiction to naturalize aliens, or, if she resides abroad, she may retain her citizenship by registering as such before a United States consul within one year after the termination of such marital relation.

A child born without the United States, of alien parents, shall be deemed a citizen of the United States by virtue of the naturalization of or resumption of American citizenship of the parent; provided that such naturalization or resumption takes place during the minority of such child; and, provided further, that the citizenship of such minor child shall begin at the time such minor child begins to reside permanently in the United States.

All children born outside the limits of the United States, who are citizens thereof in accordance with the provisions of section 1993 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (see above), and who continue to reside outside of the United States, shall, in order to receive the protection of the government, be required, upon reaching the age of 18 years, to record at an American consulate their intention to become residents and remain citizens of the United States and shall further be required to take the oath of allegiance to the United States upon attaining their majority.

NATURALIZATION LAWS.

Approved June 29, 1906.

Exclusive jurisdiction to naturalize aliens resident in their districts is conferred upon the United States Circuit and District courts and all courts of record having a seal, a clerk and jurisdiction in actions in law or equity or both in which the amount in controversy is unlimited.

An alien may be admitted to citizenship in the following manner and not otherwise:

1. He shall declare on oath before the clerk of the proper court at least two years before his admission, and after he has reached the age of 18 years, that it is bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the United States and to renounce allegiance to any foreign state or sovereignty,

Such declaration shall set forth the same facts as are registered at the time of his arrival.

2. Not less than two years nor more than seven after he has made such declaration he shall file a petition, signed by himself and verified, in which he shall state his name, place of residence, occupation, date and place of birth, place from which he emigrated, name of the vessel on which he arrived; the time when and the place and name of the court where he declared his intention of becoming a citizen; if he is married, he shall state the name of his wife, the country of her nativity and her place of residence at the time the petition is filed, and if he has children the name, date and place of birth and place of residence of each child living. The petition shall also set forth that he is not a disbeliever in or opposed to organized government or a member of any body of persons opposed to organized government, and that he is not a polygamist or a believer in polygamy; that he intends to become a citizen of and to live permanently in the United States, and every other fact material to his naturalization and required to be proved upon the final hearing of his application. The petition shall be verified by the affidavits of at least two credible witnesses who are citizens. At the time of the filing of the petition there shall be also filed a certificate from the department of commerce and labor stating the date, place and manner of his arrival in the United States and the declaration of intention of such citizen, which certificate and declaration shall be attached to and be a part of his petition.

3. He shall, before he is admitted to citizenship, declare on oath in open court that he will support the constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely renounces all allegiance to any foreign prince, potentate, state or sovereignty.

4. It shall be made apparent to the satisfaction of the court admitting any alien to citizenship that immediately preceding the date of his application he has resided continuously within the United States five years at least, and within the state or territory where such court is at the time held one year at least, and that during that time he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the constitution. In addition to the oath of the applicant, the testimony of at least two witnesses, citizens of the United States, as to the facts of residence, moral character and attachment to the principles of the constitution shall be required.

5. He must renounce any hereditary title or order of nobility which he may possess.

6. When any alien, who has declared his intention, dies before he is actually naturalized the widow and minor children may, by complying with the other provisions of the act, be naturalized without making any declaration of intention.

Immediately after the filing of the petition the clerk of the court shall give notice thereof by posting in a public place the name, nativity and residence of the alien, the date and place of his arrival in the United States and the date for the final hearing of his petition and the names of the witnesses whom the applicant expects to summon in his behalf. Petitions for naturalization may be filed at any time, but final action thereon shall be had only on stated days and in no case until at least ninety days have elapsed after the filing of the petition. No person shall be naturalized within thirty days preceding a general election within the territorial jurisdiction of the court.

No person who disbelieves in or who is opposed to organized government, or who is a member of or affiliated with any organization entertaining and teaching such disbelief in or opposition to organized government, or who advocates or teaches the duty, necessity or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of any officer or officers of the government of the United States, or of any other organized government, because of his or their official character, or who is a polygamist, shall be naturalized.

No alien shall hereafter be naturalized or admitted as a citizen of the United States who cannot speak the English language. This requirement does not apply to those physically unable to comply with it, or to those making homestead entries upon the public lands of the United States.

ELECTRICAL UNITS DEFINED.

Ohm—Unit of resistance; represents resistance offered to an unvarying electric current by a column of mercury at the temperature of ice, 14,5421 grams in mass, of a cross-sectional area of 1.00003 square millimeters and of the length of 106.3 centimeters.
 Ampere—Unit of current; decomposes .0009324 of a gram of water in one second or deposits silver at the rate of .001118 of a gram per second, when passed through a solution of nitrate of silver in water.
 Volt—Unit of electro motive force; one volt equals one ampere of current passing through a substance having one ohm of resistance.

Coulomb—Unit of quantity; amount of electricity transferred by a current of one ampere in one second.
 Farad—Unit of capacity; capacity of a condenser charged to a potential of one volt by one coulomb. A microfarad is one-millionth of a farad.
 Joule—Unit of work; equivalent to energy expended in one second by one ampere current in one ohm resistance.
 Watt—Unit of power; equivalent to work done at the rate of one joule per second. A kilowatt is 1,000 watts.

THERMOMETERS COMPARED

There are three kinds of thermometers, with varying scales, in general use throughout the world—the Fahrenheit, Reaumur and centigrade. The freezing and boiling points on their scales compare as follows:

Thermometer.	Freezing pt.	Boiling pt.
Fahrenheit.....	32 degrees	212 degrees
Reaumur.....	zero	80 degrees
Centigrade.....	zero	100 degrees

The degrees on one scale are reduced to their equivalents on another by these formulas:

Fahrenheit to Reaumur—Subtract 32, multiply by four-ninths.

Fahrenheit to Centigrade—Subtract 32, multiply by five-ninths.

Reaumur to Fahrenheit—Multiply by nine-fourths, add 32.

Reaumur to Centigrade—Multiply by five-fourths, Centigrade to Fahrenheit—Multiply by nine-fifths, add 32.

Centigrade to Reaumur—Multiply by four-fifths.

MARRIAGE LAWS.

Marriage may be contracted without the consent of parents by males who are 21 years of age or more. This is the rule in about all the states having laws on the subject. In Arizona the age is 18. For females the age is 21 in Connecticut, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Virginia, West Virginia and Wyoming; 16 is the age in Arizona, Maryland and Nebraska and 18 in the other states. Marriages contracted before the age of consent are illegal in nearly all the states.

Marriage licenses are required in practically all the states.

Marriages between whites and negroes are prohibited by law in Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia and West Virginia. Michigan specifically declares such marriages valid.

Marriages between first cousins are prohibited in Arizona, Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Wyoming. Step-relatives are not permitted to intermarry except in California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Minnesota, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Utah and Wisconsin.

MARRIAGE RATES.

For the year 1900 the marriage rate based on the total population of continental United States and including the total number of marriages reported was 90 per 10,000 population. In 1890 the rate was 87 per 10,000 population. The rate in 1900 per 10,000 unmarried population 15 years of age and over was 312; in 1890 it was 304.

DIVORCE RATES.

The percentage of increase of divorces as compared with the percentage of increase in population is shown by the following figures:

NOTE—Consanguinity, infidelity and bigamy are causes for divorce in all states having divorce laws. Permanent insanity is cause for divorce in Idaho, Utah and Washington under certain conditions.

CORN NOT THE CAUSE OF PELLAGRA.

The medical commission appointed by Gov. Deenen Oct. 15, 1909, to investigate the spread of pellagra and its origin, made its first report Jan. 23, 1911. It found from a series of experiments in the Peoria state hospital that the disease was not caused by the use of corn, as has been asserted by some foreign physicians. Two squads of patients, numbering fifty-nine each, were isolated in two cottages. One squad was placed on an excessive corn diet, while the other was deprived of corn food entirely. Among the corn fed patients four cases of pellagra developed, with three suspects; among those not using corn five cases developed. It was also found that pellagra was not infectious. The commission, of which Dr. Frank Billings of Chicago is president, will continue its study of the disease, which has existed in Italy for more than 150 years, but has appeared in the United States only in recent years.

DEATH PENALTY IN THE UNITED STATES.

Capital punishment prevails in all of the states and territories of the union except Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Rhode Island, Kansas and Maine. It was abolished in Iowa in 1872 and restored in 1873. It was also abolished in Colorado, but was restored in 1901. In New York Virginia and Ohio execution is by electricity.

Table with columns: FISCAL YEAR*, MERCHANDISE (Imports, Exports, Excess of imports), SPECIE (Imports, Exports), MDSE AND SPECIE COMBINED (Total Imports, Total Exports, Excess of imports). Rows list years from 1831 to 1911.

*Fiscal year ended Sept. 30 prior to 1843; since that date ended June 30.

WHOLESALE PRICES, 1909 AND 1910.

Wholesale prices in 1910, as measured by the prices of the 257 commodities included in the investigation, were 4 per cent higher than in 1909, and with this advance the level was 1.6 per cent above the high average of 1907 prices. Wholesale prices during 1910 were 19.1 per cent higher than in 1900; 46.7 per cent higher than in 1897, the year of lowest prices in the twenty-one year period from 1890 to 1910; 10.6 per cent higher than in 1890, and 31.6 per cent higher than the average price for the ten years 1890 to 1899.

The highest point reached in 1907 was in October, from which month there was a general decline until August, 1908. Beginning with September, 1908, wholesale prices increased without a break in any month up to March, 1910. In April, May and June prices declined slightly, but from June to December prices remained very nearly at the same level. Wholesale prices in March, 1910, were higher than at any other time in the preceding twenty-one years, being 10.2 per cent higher than in August, 1908; 7.5 higher than in March, 1909; 21.1 higher than the average yearly price of 1900, and 49.2 per cent higher than the average yearly price of 1897. Wholesale prices in December, 1910, were 1.4 per cent lower than in December, 1909, and 2.5 per cent lower than in March, 1910, but they were still 30.4 per cent higher than the average price for the ten years 1890 to 1899, and 45.4 per cent higher than the prices of 1897.

Comparing 1910 with 1909 the group of commodities showing the greatest increase in prices was lumber and building materials, the increase in the group as a whole being 10.7 per cent. Six other groups show an increase in 1910 of 2.7 to 7.5 per cent, while of the two remaining groups into which all commodities have been classified one (housefurnishing goods) shows a decrease of 0.1 per cent and one (fuel and lighting) 3.0 per cent.

RECORD PRICES FOR OLD BOOKS.

The sale of the Hoe library in New York, N. Y., in April and May, 1911, brought some remarkable prices for rare old volumes, of which there were many in the collection. Among the books for which the largest sums were paid were the following:

Gutenberg bible, bought by Henry E. Huntington of Los Angeles, Cal., for $50,000. It was the first book printed from movable type and was published between 1450 and 1455.

Sir Thomas Malory's "Morte d'Arthur," bought for J. P. Morgan of New York, N. Y., for $42,800. This is the only perfect copy known of the Caxton edition.

Manuscript of "Pembroke Hours," bought by Arthur Hoe of New York, N. Y., for $33,000.

"The Hours of Anne Beaujeau," bought by Miss T. Benson of Brooklyn, N. Y., for $24,000.

"Helyas Knight of the Swanee," bought by Walter M. Hill of Chicago for $21,000.

It has been estimated that a two foot bookshelf containing ten of the rarest books in the world would cost more than $250,000. The books and the present market price of each follow: Gutenberg bible, the first printed book, $50,000; Psalter of 1457 first book printed with a date, $50,000; "Receyvel of the History of Troy," printed by William Caxton, the first book in the English language, $40,000; first edition of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, 1478, $20,000; first edition of Sir Thomas Malory's "Morte d'Arthur," $42,800; "Book of the General Laws of Massachusetts," 1648, first book of laws printed in America, $20,000; Bay psalm book, 1640, first book printed in America, $10,000; first edition of Shakespeare's "Venus and Adonis," $10,000; Psalter of 1459, the best copy of which is now owned by J. P. Morgan, $10,000.

PERSONS KILLED OR INJURED IN FIRES.

According to the Insurance Press of New York there were sixty firemen killed in the line of duty and 1,689 injured in the United States in 1910. In the course of the same year 301 persons other than firemen were killed and 600 injured, making the total of killed and injured 2,650.

RELATIVE PRICES OF COMMODITIES.

In this table, prepared by the department of labor in Washington, the average wholesale price in New York and other primary markets of each article for the years 1890-1909, inclusive, is taken as the base price and is represented by 100. The relative price is the average wholesale price for each year from 1893 to 1910, inclusive, compared with the base price.

CORPORATION TAX CONSTITUTIONAL.

The corporation tax provisions of the Payne-Aldrich tariff act of August, 1909, were declared constitutional by the Supreme court of the United States March 13, 1911. The opinion was read by Justice Day. The court held that it was within the power of the senate to insert the tax provisions in the tariff law, which originated in the house. The court further declared that the tax was not a direct tax, because it was not levied upon the income of the corporation, but upon the peculiar rights and privileges of a body of citizens to carry on business as a corporation. These rights and privileges were held to be artificially constructed and conferred by the states. In the opinion of the court either the state or the nation has a right to tax this artificial way of doing business. As the tax is laid upon the carrying on of a business in a peculiar way it is held to be an excise. The tax then is measured in each case by the extent of the income of the corporation. The court held that while it would be unconstitutional to impose a direct tax on the incomes of all corporations without apportioning it among the states according to population, as directed by the constitution, it was perfectly permissible to measure the amount of the tax by the income.

BANK GUARANTY LAWS CONSTITUTIONAL.

In a decision announced Jan. 3, 1912, the United States Supreme court held constitutional the bank guaranty laws of Oklahoma, Nebraska and Kansas. The laws in question were passed by the legislature of Oklahoma in 1908 and by the legislatures of Nebraska and Kansas in 1909. They were similar, except that the Nebraska law made it obligatory on all state banks to contribute to the guaranty fund to be placed in the hands of the state officials, while the Oklahoma and Kansas legislatures left the contribution to the discretion of the banks themselves. The Supreme court of Oklahoma held that the law was constitutional. So did the Circuit court of the United States for the district of Kansas. The Circuit court of the United States in Nebraska, however, held that the Nebraska law was unconstitutional.

[The bank guaranty law of Oklahoma will be found in The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book for 1909, page 106; the Nebraska and Kansas acts will be found in the volume for 1910, pages 123 to 126.]

NEW YORK STATE CAPITOL DAMAGED BY FIRE.

Fire in the New York state capitol building in Albany early in the morning of March 29, 1911, caused a damage estimated at $5,000,000. The west wing was entirely destroyed and other portions of the great structure were partly ruined. Irreparable loss was sustained in the burning of the state historical library, containing many ancient colonial and revolutionary documents. Among these were the first charter of the colony of New York, the papers found on Maj. Andre, the first charter of Trinity church from the British crown, a great collection of Clinton papers and hundreds of letters from Washington. The documents for a complete history of the state, as planned by the New York Historical society, were destroyed, as was the law library, which was considered the best of its kind in the country.

LARGEST DRY DOCK IN THE WORLD.

The dry dock in the river Boyne at Belfast, Ireland, was completed in April 1911, after eight years spent in the work of construction. It is 886 feet long and when filled contains 23,000,000 gallons of water. The first vessel to be repaired in it was the Olympic, the largest steamer in the world. The dock is also the largest of its kind in the world.

LENGTH IN FEET OF CERTAIN MILES.

[From circular of hydrographic office, U. S. navy department.]

In the United States the nautical mile or knot or sea mile, used for the measurement of distances in ocean navigation, has a length of 6,080.27 feet; in England the nautical mile, corresponding to the "admiralty knot," is 6,080 feet; in France, Germany and Austria the nautical or sea mile has a length of 6,076.23 feet. The geographic mile, which is the length of one minute of longitude of the equator of the terrestrial spheroid, is 6,087.15 feet long. The statute mile, used principally in measurements on land, is 5,280 feet.

RAILROAD REBATE CASES.

Thirteen indictments on a total of 110 counts charging four ore carrying railroads entering Cleveland, O., with rebating and alleging that two of the railroads and three individuals were guilty of conspiracy to violate the Elkins law, were returned by the federal grand jury in Cleveland April 26, 1911. The railroads were the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, the Bessemer & Lake Erie, the Pennsylvania and the New York, Chicago & St. Louis (Nickel Plate). The individuals were: Dan R. Hanna, president of the M. A. Hanna company; R. L. Ireland, second vice-president of the M. A. Hanna company, and D. T. McCabe, fourth vice-president of the Pennsylvania railroad.

HOT WEATHER IN 1911.

The spring and summer of 1911 were remarkable for one of the most prolonged periods of excessively warm weather ever recorded in the United States. The hot wave covered the greater part of the country east of the Rocky mountains, but was especially severe in the middle west. The first abnormally high temperatures occurred about the middle of May and from that time until July 12 hot weather was the rule. May 13 the thermometer reached 92 degrees in Chicago and sixteen deaths caused by the heat were recorded. May 25 all local records for the month were broken by a temperature of 94.2. On the same day temperatures ranging from 90 to 94 degrees were reported from thirty-two other cities, most of them in the middle west and south.

In June the weather as a rule was oppressively hot. On the 4th the temperature reached 95.3 in Chicago and on the 9th it rose to 98.5, the highest point recorded in Chicago in June since the weather bureau was established. On the same day the following cities reported temperatures of 100 degrees or more.

St. Louis, Mo.....104	Keokuk, Iowa.....100
Muskogee, Okla.....103	Oklahoma City, Okla.100
Texarkana, Tex.....103	Omaha, Neb.....100
Burlington, Iowa.....102	Paris, Tex.....100
Concordia, Kas.....100	Peoria, Ill.....100
Des Moines, Iowa.....100	Shreveport, La.....100
Gainesville, Tex.....100	Springfield, Ill.....100

Thirty-four other cities reported temperatures of 90 degrees or more. June 10 fifteen cities reported temperatures of 100 degrees and more. The highest marks were:

Tulsa, Okla.....110	Dallas, Tex.....103
Indianapolis, Ind.....109	Phoenix, Ariz.....102
Burlington, Iowa.....104	Sedalia, Mo.....102

June 23, thirty-six cities experienced temperatures ranging from 90 to 102 degrees and many prostrations occurred. The whole of the Mississippi valley from New Orleans to St. Paul was affected by the heat wave, which also covered the greater part of the south and of the lake region. June 25 Kansas and western Missouri suffered severely. At Salina and McPherson, Kas., the thermometer reached 114 degrees; at Manhattan, 113; Abilene, 112; Emporia, 106, and Kansas City, Mo., 100.

From July 1 to July 10 heat records were established in many cities throughout practically the whole country. The first day of the month showed eight cities with temperatures of 100 or more and forty-one reported marks of 90 to 98. Omaha, Neb., topped the list with 102 degrees. July 3 there were sixty cities in which the temperature rose above 98 degrees. Among those in which the greatest heat was experienced were:

Newark, N. J.....111	Sedalia, Mo.....107
Ansonia, Conn.....110	Cedar Rapids, Iowa.....106
Beverly, Mass.....108	Kewanee, Ill.....106
Independence, Kas.....108	Ottumwa, Iowa.....106
Joplin, Mo.....107

July 4 and 5 were extremely hot days in all the northern states east of the Rocky mountains. In the south and far southwest conditions were more tolerable, few places reporting temperatures above 95 degrees. The cities in which the greatest heat was recorded July 4 were:

Junction City, Iowa.....109	Joplin, Mo.....104
Atchison, Kas.....108	Kansas City, Mo.....104
Webster City, Iowa.....108	Lafayette, Ind.....104
Topeka, Kas.....106	McLeansboro, Ill.....104
Albany, N. Y.....104	Muskogee, Okla.....104
Foston, Mass.....104	Omaha, Neb.....104
Carlisle, Ind.....104	Sedalia, Mo.....104
Des Moines, Iowa.....104	Sioux City, Iowa.....104
Indianapolis, Ind.....104	Charles City, Iowa.....101

"The present hot wave," said Chief Forecaster Edward H. Bowie of the government weather bureau in Washington on the evening of July 4. "is more extensive and more intense than any other in our records. It is safe to say it is unprecedented in extent, duration and degree of heat as far back as the records of the bureau go. It affects almost all of the Mississippi valley and the eastern section of the country. There has been no break in this heat wave since it first developed, and in countless localities in the area affected the highest temperatures registered in more than a generation have been recorded. The hot wave is caused by a high barometric pressure over the Atlantic ocean. That is a natural summer condition. There always is a high barometric pressure over the Atlantic at this time of the year but this year it is abnormally high. Nothing like it in intensity has been known to meteorological science in the experience of the students of this generation. This intensely high pressure has existed over the Atlantic ever since June 13. That condition causes hot weather along the Atlantic seaboard and as far inland as Kansas and similarly situated states in the Mississippi valley."

The places recording the highest temperatures July 5 were:

Auburn, N. Y.....116	Keokuk, Iowa.....104
Junction City, Kas.....113	Oklahoma City, Okla.104
Emporia, Kas.....111	Flint, Mich.....103
Lincoln, Neb.....110	Atchison, Kas.....102
Cedar Rapids, Iowa.....109	Phoenix, Ariz.....102
Concordia, Kas.....108	Pittsburgh, Pa.....102

Dubuque, Iowa.....104	Springfield, Mo.....98
Fresno, Cal.....104	St. Louis, Mo.....98
Iowa City, Iowa.....104	Washington, D. C.....98

After July 5 the heat gradually abated, though it continued unseasonably warm until July 12, especially in the eastern states, where there were many fatalities. Just how many persons died from the effects of the hot weather in May, June and July is not known with any degree of certainty, but it was estimated that the total number was in excess of 2,000. From July 1 to July 12 the number of dead reported was 1,200 for the whole of the United States. July 3 there were sixteen deaths from heat in Chicago, sixteen in Philadelphia, sixteen in Cleveland, twelve in New York and twelve in Pittsburgh. July 4 there were twenty-seven fatalities in Chicago, twenty-six in New York, fifteen in Pittsburgh and ten in St. Louis. July 5 there were fifty deaths from heat in Chicago, thirty-six in New York, twenty-nine in Philadelphia and eleven in Cleveland.

The following table shows the highest temperatures recorded in Chicago during the heated term and the number of deaths on the days specified.

The highest temperature recorded in any month since the weather bureau was established in Chicago was 103, on July 21, 1901. The hot wave in that year lasted from the latter part of June to July 27, and was the severest experienced up to that time.

BRITISH-CHINESE OPIUM AGREEMENT.

Under an agreement reached by China and Great Britain May 8, 1911, China's production of opium and India's export of it shall be proportionally reduced year by year until the traffic ceases entirely, which will not be later than 1917. The Chinese authorities are endeavoring to put an end to opium smoking at an even earlier date than that.

ARCTIC AND ANTARCTIC EXPLORATION.

SCOTT EXPEDITION.

The whaler Terra Nova, which left New Zealand Nov. 29, 1910, with the British antarctic expedition headed by Capt. Robert F. Scott, returned to Christ Church, New Zealand, March 27, 1911. It brought news that the expedition had landed on the shores of McMurdo bay in January. Headquarters were established at Cape Evans, eight miles north of Discovery station. In landing the stores and equipment one of the motor sledges dropped through a hole in the ice and sank. The scientific work of the expedition was begun at once and before the Terra Nova left a rich biological collection had already been obtained. The men and animals were in excellent condition. Exploring parties had been sent to the east and to the west and the commander himself was preparing for a preliminary trip southward. The journey toward the south pole was to begin in October, 1911.

Lieut. E. R. G. B. Evans, R. N., is second in command of the expedition, and Lieut. Victor Campbell is in charge of the eastern party. Dr. E. A. Wilson, zoologist and artist, is in charge of the scientific staff. Other members of the expedition are F. Griffith Taylor and W. H. Thompson, geologists; E. G. Nelson and D. G. Lillie, biologists; Dr. G. C. Simpson, meteorologist; C. S. Wright, chemist; Lieut. H. H. Pennell and Lieut. H. R. Bowers, surveyors; Drs. G. M. Levick and E. L. Atkinson, surgeons.

AMUNDSEN EXPEDITION.

Capt. Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the north-west passage, left Norway in August, 1910, on the arctic steamer Fram, for oceanographic work on the Atlantic coast of America. His original plan was to proceed to San Francisco and ultimately to the Arctic ocean via Bering strait. Circumstances caused him to change his mind and instead of going to the northern seas he steered for the south. The Fram arrived at the barrier ice in the Antarctic ocean Jan. 14, 1911, and the following day he determined to establish his headquarters on the ice a little to the west of Edward VII. land, at a point where there was a large indentation in the ice wall. Jan. 16 the party began to unload the cargo. A house was erected on top of the barrier, 150 feet above the surface of the bay. It was solidly constructed and supported by backstays on all sides. Amundsen named it "Framhelm" (home of the Fram). It is the most southerly habitation in the world, standing in 164 degrees west longitude, 78 degrees 40 minutes south latitude. Mr. Amundsen is supplied with food enough to last two years. He has eight companions and 115 Greenland dogs. Before landing Amundsen had met the British expedition in Whale bay, Ross sea, and had exchanged visits with Capt. Scott. Amundsen expected to lay down a main depot in 80 south latitude and a smaller one at 83 south latitude.

THE FILCHNER EXPEDITION.

Lieut. Filchner, with a party of nine other German scientists, sailed from Buenos Aires for southern Georgia and the Weddell sea in October, 1911. Their vessel, the Deutschland, is provisioned for more than three years. The explorers include, besides the leader and a crew of twenty-five men, Gaspar Neuberger, chief engineer; Dr. G. Seelheim, second in charge; Dr. Barkow, meteorologist, and Drs. Brennecke, Helm, Wächter, Koenig and Przybyllok. Oceanographic studies will be undertaken at various places and exploring trips will be made in the polar seas southwest of South America.

OTHER ANTARCTIC EXPEDITIONS.

The Japanese antarctic expedition under Lieut. Shirase left Yokohama in the 150 ton schooner Kainan Maru Nov. 28, 1910. The equipment was inadequate and the ship returned to Sydney, N. S. W., May 1, 1911, having been unable to penetrate the ice along Victoria land.

Capt. Douglas Mawson is the leader of an Australian expedition to the antarctic regions. His vessel is the Aurora, built at Dundee in 1876.

EXPEDITION TO CROCKER LAND.

Prof. D. B. Macmillan and George Borup, members of the Peary north pole party in 1909, are at the head of a projected expedition to Crocker land, which is the most northerly land known to exist on the globe. Their plan is to start in June, 1912, proceed north in the Rosevelt, which they hope to acquire, and establish a base west of Cape Columbia, whence the journey to Crocker land will be made by sledge. Capt. R. Bartlett will probably have command of the ship.

ANDERSON-STEFANSSON EXPEDITION.

The Anderson-Stefansson exploring expedition sent out by the American museum to make researches along the arctic coasts of Alaska is expected to return in 1912. Word was received from Mr. Stefansson in September, 1911, that complete surveys had been made of Langton bay, Hortoa river and several uncharted regions. One hitherto unknown river was found flowing into Langton bay and the Riviere La Ronciere, which appears on many maps, it was proved, has no existence.

MIKKELSEN EXPEDITION.

Capt. Einar Mikkelsen, a Danish explorer, who started out in 1909 to recover, if possible, the collections and scientific records of the ill-fated Mylius-Erickson expedition to east Greenland, spent the fall and winter of that year in a fruitless search. March 3, 1910, he went toward the north accompanied only by a n.echinist, intending to hunt for the records as far as the most northerly point Erickson had attained, then travel west along the Peary channel and then down the west coast of Greenland. He had only three months' provisions with him and as nothing has since been heard of either him or his companion it is feared that they have perished.

REVOLUTION IN MEXICO.

Porfirio Diaz resigned the presidency of the republic of Mexico May 25, 1911, following a successful insurrection led by Francisco I. Madero, Jr. Trouble began soon after June 26, 1910, when Gen. Diaz was elected for the eighth consecutive time. Madero, who was a candidate for the presidency and was defeated by what he deemed arbitrary and illegal methods, placed himself at the head of the anti-re-electionist party and other opponents of the old regime and began an active campaign for the overthrow of the administration. While Gen. Diaz had the good will and support of many people in the republic, especially among the business men and landed proprietors, he also had many enemies. These charged, among other things:

That his rule was despotic and, so far as ordinary citizens were concerned, often oppressive and tyrannous.

That the elections, federal and state, were absolutely controlled by him, no opposition being tolerated.

That he dominated the legislative and judicial branches of the government, making them subservient to his will.

That he permitted the state governors, jefes politicos and other officials to deprive citizens of their property and in some cases even of their lives.

That he and his supporters were responsible for a system of taxation whereby the wealthy were favored and the heaviest burdens laid on the poor. That privileges and concessions were granted for private benefit.

That the condition of the laboring population under his administration had become almost intolerable and that in some parts of the country it amounted to practical slavery.

That few educational opportunities were given the poorer people.

That his cabinet officers were old and conservative men opposed to progressive ideas and measures.

True or false, these charges and complaints had their effect upon the masses, with the result that the agitation against the government was carried on with increasing vigor until finally, in November, rioting and bloodshed took place in Puebla, Orizaba and Mexico City in the south and in Zacatecas and Chihuahua in the north. These outbreaks were apparently failures and it was announced Nov. 27 that the rebellion had been crushed. Such, however, proved not to have been the case, for in December skirmishes occurred at Cerro Prieto, La Junta and other points.

AMERICAN TROOPS IN TEXAS.

In January, 1911, there was considerable guerrilla warfare in the northern part of the republic and railroad travel was interrupted. In February most of the fighting was in the vicinity of Juarez, across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Tex. In March there were engagements at Casas Grandes, Agua Prieta, Mexicali and Ojinaga, and the situation along the southern border of the United States became so threatening that the authorities in Washington decided to make a military demonstration. On the evening of March 6, by direction of President Taft, orders were sent to various garrisons throughout the country to assemble 20,000 troops in the department of Texas. At the same time the vessels of the fifth division of the Atlantic fleet were directed to proceed to the gulf coast of Texas. The military force established its headquarters at San Antonio under the command of Maj.-Gen. William H. Carter, assistant chief of staff. It was at first maintained that the movement was simply for maneuvering purposes, but after it was fully underway and many of the troops had arrived in Texas, government officials admitted that the real purpose was to stop filibustering and the sending of men and arms to the insurrectionists in the northern states of Mexico.

Apparently this movement on the part of the United States had no effect upon the situation across the border. The revolutionists continued their attacks upon the towns occupied by federal troops, though the property of foreigners was not, as a rule, molested. To stop brigandage, train wrecking and robbery President Diaz proclaimed martial law, making military officers the sole judges in punishing crimes of this sort. To meet the criticism that his advisers were reactionary and nonrepresentative, he caused his cabinet to resign and appointed another. In April there was a series of skirmishes in and about Agua Prieta, resulting in the shooting of several men in the American town of Douglas, just across the border in Arizona. Toward the end of the month peace proposals were made and an armistice was arranged, Francisco I. Madero representing the rebels and Gen. Juan Navarro the government. Conferences were held at Juarez, in which Dr. Vasquez Gomez, Francisco Madero, Sr., and Jose Pino Suarez were the principal speakers for the insurrectionists, while Judge Francisco Carbajal was the official peace commissioner of the government. One of the principal demands of the Madero party was that Gen. Diaz should resign the presidency, or give definite assurances that he would do so before the end of May.

On the night of May 7, after a cabinet meeting, President Diaz issued a manifesto to the Mexican people announcing his intention to resign as soon as peace should be restored. The armistice came to an end May 8, when the insurgents made a determined attack upon Juarez, which was still held by Gen. Juan Navarro and his troops. The battle continued until the 10th, with heavy losses on both sides, and some casualties from stray bullets on the American side of the Rio Grande. It ended with the capture of the city and its defenders by Gen. Madero, who immediately made the place the seat of a provisional government, with himself as president, Dr. Gomez as minister of foreign relations and Gustav Vasquez Madero as minister of finance. Other cabinet officers were named and steps were taken for the resumption of peace negotiations.

In the meantime there was severe fighting at Tia Juana, Saitillo, Concepcion del Oro and Torreón, while a little later much activity was shown by the insurrectionist forces near Mexico City, Cuatla and Cuernavaca being captured. May 15 peace negotiations were resumed, Gen. Madero asking for half the cabinet, the governors of fourteen of the twenty-seven states, a new election, soldiers' pensions and general reforms. On the 17th it was officially announced in Mexico City that President Diaz and Vice-President Corral would resign before June 1 and that all the demands of the insurgents would be granted.

PEACE AGREEMENT.

On the evening of May 21 the official representatives of the Mexican government and the revolutionists signed the following peace agreement:

"In the city of Juarez, on the 21st day of May, 1911, in the customs house, Senor Don Francisco S. Carbajal representing the government of Gen. Porfirio Diaz, Dr. Francisco Vasquez Gomez, Don Francisco I. Madero and Don Jose Maria Pino Suarez as the representatives of the revolutionary forces, having gathered to treat about the method of effecting a cessation of hostilities in the entire national territory and considering:

"1. That Senor Gen. Porfirio Diaz has manifested his resolution of resigning the presidency of the republic before the end of the present month; and,

"2. That bona fide news is at hand that Ramon Corral will resign the vice-presidency of the republic within the same period; and,

"3. That, by the administration of law, Senor Francisco Leon de la Barra, the present minister of foreign relations of the government of Senor Gen. Diaz, will assume for the interim the power of the executive of the nation and will call the general elections according to the terms of the constitution; and,

"4. That the national government will study the conditions of public opinion in the actuality to satisfy these conditions with the provisions of the constitution and will come to an agreement conducive to indemnifying the losses directly caused by the revolution.

"Therefore, the two parties represented in this conference, in view of the previous considerations, have agreed to formulate the following agreement:

"From to-day on hostilities which have existed in the entire national territory of the republic shall cease between the forces of the government and those of the revolution, these forces to be dismissed in proportion as in each state the necessary steps are taken to re-establish and guarantee tranquility and public order.

"As soon as possible the reconstruction or repair of telegraph and railway lines hitherto interrupted shall be begun."

PRESIDENT DIAZ RESIGNS.

May 23 the chamber of deputies passed a bill providing for amnesty to political prisoners. May 24 there was serious rioting near the national palace in the City of Mexico, several persons being killed by troops. May 25 President Diaz sent the following letter of resignation to the presiding officer of the chamber of deputies:

"Sir: The Mexican people, who generously have covered me with honors, who proclaimed me as their leader during the international war, who patriotically assisted me in all works undertaken to develop industry and the commerce of the republic, establish its credit, gain for it the respect of the world and obtain for it an honorable position in the concert of nations; that same people, sir, has revolted in armed military bands, stating that my presence in the exercise of the supreme executive power is the cause of this insurrection.

"I do not know of any fact imputable to me which could have caused this social phenomenon; but although not admitting that I may be unwittingly culpable such a possibility makes me the least able to reason out and decide my own culpability.

"Therefore, respecting as I always have respected the will of the people, and in accordance with article 82 of the federal constitution, I come before the supreme representatives of the nation in order to resign unreservedly the office of constitutional president of the republic with which the national vote honored me.

"I do this with all the more reason since, in order to continue in office, it would be necessary to shed Mexican blood, endangering the credit of the country, dissipating its wealth, exhausting its resources and exposing its policy to international complications.

"I hope, gentlemen, that when the passions which are inherent to all revolutions have been calmed, a more conscientious and justified study will bring out in the national mind a correct acknowledgment which will allow me to die carrying engraved in my soul a just appreciation of the esteem which throughout my life I have devoted and will devote to my countrymen. PORFIRIO DIAZ."

The resignations of Vice-President Ramon Corral and of all the members of the cabinet were handed in at the same time and unanimously accepted, together with that of the president. Francisco Leon de la Barra was then chosen provisional president. On the following day he was inaugurated with ceremonies lasting only ten minutes. Simultaneously Gen. Madero resigned the office of provisional president and placed his forces at the disposal of the new executive.

At 2 o'clock on the morning of May 26 Gen. Diaz secretly left the City of Mexico with his family and a small guard of soldiers and proceeded by train to Vera Cruz. On the way the train was attacked by a number of insurgents, but they were beaten off. May 21, after a touching farewell from his friends, Gen. Diaz sailed on the steamer Ypiranga for Spain.

June 2 an official decree was issued for the election Oct. 1 of presidential electors in all the states and territories, the men chosen to name the successor of Porfirio Diaz on Sunday, Oct. 15. Madero was elected without serious opposition.

ASSASSINATION OF PREMIER STOLYPIN.

Peter Stolypin, premier of Russia, was fatally shot by Dmitry Bogrov, a revolutionist, while attending a gala performance at the opera house in Kiev, Thursday, Sept. 14, 1911. Emperor Nicholas was in the theater at the time and witnessed the shooting. Stolypin was wounded twice, one bullet entering his hand and another penetrating the body and lodging near the spine. For two or three days it was thought the premier had a chance of recovering, but peritonitis set in and the end came Monday, Sept. 18, at 10 o'clock in the evening. Bogrov was hanged Sept. 25.

M. Stolypin was 48 years of age and had been premier since 1906. He was unpopular and three attempts to take his life had been made. The most serious was that of Aug. 25, 1906, when his home was wrecked by a bomb and thirty-two persons were killed and fifty injured, among the latter being the premier's young son and daughter. Stolypin himself escaped without injury. His enemies claimed that in the course of his administration 6,000 persons were executed and 70,000 exiled without trial.

ATTEMPT TO KILL PREMIER BRIAND.

Two revolver shots were fired at Premier Briand of France in the chamber of deputies, Paris, Jan. 17, 1911, but he was unharmed. One of the bullets struck Leon Mirman, an official, and wounded him slightly in the leg. The would-be assassin was a man named Gisolme, formerly clerk of the courts of Bayonne, who had been released only a short time before from an insane asylum, where he had been confined for trying to kill an English consul.

NONCONTIGUOUS POSSESSIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

The Philippine Islands were ceded to the United States by Spain Dec. 10, 1898. Maj.-Gen. Merritt was the first military governor. He was succeeded in August, 1899, by Maj.-Gen. E. S. Otis, who in turn was followed in May, 1900, by Maj.-Gen. Arthur MacArthur. The last named remained in office until July 4, 1901, when the military authority was transferred to Gen. A. R. Chaffee. By order of the president Gen. Chaffee was relieved of his duties as military governor July 4, 1902, and the office terminated. The Philippine commission was at the same time made the superior authority. Sept. 2 the islands were divided into three military departments, to be known as the department of Luzon, the department of Visayas and the department of Mindanao.

July 1, 1902, congress passed an act providing temporarily for the government of the Philippines, providing for the election by popular vote, two years after a census of the islands had been taken and published, of delegates to an assembly, consisting of not more than 100 members nor less than fifty, apportioned among the provinces as nearly as possible according to population. This assembly should, together with the Philippine commission appointed by the president of the United States, exercise the legislative power heretofore exercised by the commission alone, the members of the commission acting as an upper house and the elected assemblymen as a lower house. The members of the assembly were to hold office two years and annual sessions of the legislature not exceeding ninety days in length were to be held.

The first election was held July 30, 1907, when eighty members of the legislature were chosen, the total vote being 97,803. The first session was formally opened Oct. 16 by William H. Taft, United States secretary of war, the first civil governor of the islands after they came into American possession. Sergio Osmena was elected president.

OFFICIALS AND SALARIES—The Philippine commission consisted in October, 1911, of Prof. Dean C. Worcester of Michigan, W. Cameron Forbes of Massachusetts, Newton W. Gilbert of Indiana, Frank A. Branagan of Ohio, Charles B. Elliott of Minnesota, Rafael Palma, Gregorio Araneta, Jose R. Luzuriaga and Juan Sumulong of the Philippines. The officers in 1911 were:

Governor-General—W. Cameron Forbes.
Vice-Governor—Newton W. Gilbert.
Secretary Interior Department—Dean C. Worcester.
Secretary Finance and Justice—Gregorio Araneta.
Secretary Public Instruction—Newton W. Gilbert.
Secretary of Commerce and Police—Charles B. Elliott.

Executive Secretary—Frank W. Carpenter.

Auditor—William H. Phipps.

Treasurer—J. L. Barrett.

Director of Education—Frank B. White.

Director-General of Posts—C. M. Cotterman.

Attorney-General—Ignacio Villamor.

Collector of Customs—H. B. McCoy.

Chief Justice Supreme Court—Cayetano S. Arellano.

The governor receives $20,000 a year ($15,000 as governor-general) and the other American commissioners receive $15,500 each ($10,500 being for their services as heads of departments). The commissioners not heads of departments get $7,500 each. The salaries of other leading officials are: Executive secretary, $9,000; assistant executive secretary, $6,000; auditor, $6,000; collector of customs, $6,000; attorney-general, $6,000; chief justice supreme court, $10,000; associate justices, $10,000; superintendent of public education, $6,000; director-general of posts, $6,000; treasurer, $6,000.

AREA AND POPULATION—The total land and water area of the Philippine archipelago is 832,968 square miles and the population 7,635,436, according to the census of 1903. Of the inhabitants 6,987,686 are civilized. The population of Manila in 1903 was 219,928. The population of the principal islands was: Bobol, 243,148; Cebu, 592,247; Jolo, 44,718; Leyte, 357,641; Luzon, 3,798,507; Mindanao, 50,601; Mindanao, 499,634, of whom 252,940 are uncivilized; Negros, 460,776 (21,217 uncivilized); Panay, 743,646 (14,933 uncivilized); Samar, 222,690.

PRODUCTS AND CLIMATE—The chief products are hemp, sugar, coffee, tobacco leaf, copra, cigars and indigo. Between 600,000 and 700,000 bales of hemp are exported annually.

The climate of the Philippine islands is considered excellent for the tropics. The mean temperature in Manila ranges from 77 in January to 83 in May. June, July, August and September are the rainy months, March, April and May the hot and dry, and October, November, December, January and February the temperate and dry.

TRADE WITH THE UNITED STATES—The shipments of merchandise from the United States to the Philippines in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1911, amounted in value to $13,677,802, as compared with $15,762,905 in 1910. The principal articles sent were: Breadstuffs, $1,141,347; cotton manufactures, $4,305,518; iron and steel manufactures, $4,877,969; mineral oils, $255,800. The imports amounted in value to $17,400,398, as compared with $17,317,897 in 1910. The principal articles imported were: Unmanufactured manilla, $8,614,603; sugar, $6,487,291.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS—The total imports of the Philippine islands in the calendar year 1910 amounted to $49,719,361; total exports, $40,628,463.

ISLAND OF PORTO RICO.

Porto Rico, according to the decision of the United States Supreme court in the insular cases May 27, 1901, is a territory appurtenant and belonging to the United States, but not a part of the United States within the revenue clause of the constitution. The island was ceded to the United States by Spain Dec. 10, 1898, and was under military rule until the Foraker law went into effect May 1, 1900. (For the provisions of that law see The Daily News Almanac for 1901.) In accordance with the third section of that act, the legislative assembly of Porto Rico having put into operation a system of local taxation to meet the necessities of government, President McKinley on the 25th of July, 1901—the anniversary of the landing of American troops on the island in 1898—proclaimed free trade between the United States and Porto Rico.

GOVERNMENT—Civil government, under the provisions of the Foraker act, was established May 1, 1900. The upper house consists of eleven members, six of whom are "cabinet" officers appointed by the president; the lower house is made up of thirty-five delegates elected by the people every two years. The governor, who is appointed by the president, has practically the same duties as the governor of any other territory of the United States. The present officers are: Governor, Col. George R. Colton; secretary, M. Drew Carrel; treasurer, Samuel D. Grömer; commissioner of education, Edward Grant Dexter; resident commissioner in the United States, Luis Muñoz Rivera.

AREA AND POPULATION—The area of Porto Rico is about 3,600 square miles and the population, as shown by the census of 1910, is 1,113,012. In 1900 the population was 953,242. Of these 941,751 are natives. The whites number 559,426 and the colored 363,817. The colored are subdivided into 304,352 mestizos, 59,390 negroes and 75 Chinese. The cities having more than 5,000 inhabitants are: San Juan, 43,716; Ponce, 35,005; Mayaguez, 16,563; Arecibo, 9,612; Aguadilla, 6,125; Yauco, 6,589; Caguas, 10,354; Guayama, 8,321.

COMMERCE—For the year ended June 30, 1911, the total domestic exports from Porto Rico to foreign countries were $5,125,145, and to the United States, $34,764,007. Foreign imports amounted to $4,115,039 and imports from the United States amounted to $33,774,263. Of the exports Spain took $887,037; Cuba, $2,989,423; France, $365,929; Germany, $66,851; Austria-Hungary, $369,302.

The leading articles of export are coffee, oranges, brown sugar and tobacco.

In 1890 it was 89,950. The only large city is Honolulu, which in 1910 had a population of 52,183.

COMMERCE WITH THE UNITED STATES—The total value of the shipments of merchandise from Hawaii to the United States for the twelve months ended June 30, 1911, was $41,180,195. Brown sugar was the principal item, amounting to 983,607,458 pounds, valued at $35,612,387. The other articles of importance were: Coffee, $346,941; fruits, $2,173,218; rice, $250,078. The total value of the shipments of merchandise from the United States to Hawaii was $21,677,213. The principal articles were: Iron, steel and wood machinery, $3,525,334; leather and manufactures of, $590,704; oils, $1,624,254; provisions, $897,629; tobacco, $562,044; lumber and manufactures of wood, $1,504,900; wines and liquors, $638,941.

TERRITORY OF ALASKA.

Purchased from Russia in March, 1867.
Organized as noncontiguous territory July 27, 1868.
Made a civil and judicial district June 6, 1900.
Governor—Walter E. Clark.

THE JOHN F. DIETZ CASE.

John F. Dietz, known as the "defender of Cameron dam," was found guilty of murder in the first degree at Hayward, Wis., May 13, 1911, and sentenced to life imprisonment. His wife, Hattie E. Dietz, and his son, Leslie Dietz, were found not guilty. The crime for which John F. Dietz was tried was the killing of Oscar Harp, a deputy sheriff, Oct. 8, 1910. At that time an effort was being made to capture Dietz, against whom several warrants had been issued, and his house at Cameron dam was surrounded by a number of men, of whom Harp was one. Many shots were fired on both sides in the course of a long siege and several men were wounded, including John and Clarence Dietz. John, to save his family from death, finally surrendered. The trouble began in 1904 and grew out of Dietz' refusal to allow the lumber companies operating in Sawyer county, Wisconsin, to flow logs over the Cameron dam on a quarter section bought by Mrs. Dietz, without paying him the toll he demanded. His defense to the murder charge was that he was trying to defend his home and family from the lumber trust.

JAPANESE ANARCHISTS EXECUTED.

Twelve anarchists, convicted of conspiracy against the throne and the lives of the royal family, were executed in Tokyo, Japan, Jan. 24, 1911. Those put to death included the leader, Kotoku Denjro, and his wife. Twenty-four were condemned to death, but the sentences of twelve were commuted to imprisonment for life. Two others were given terms in prison.

RESIGNATION OF SECRETARY BALLINGER.

Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, resigned his position Jan. 19, 1911, but the fact was not made public and he was induced by President Taft to remain in office until after the close of the session of congress. The resignation was re-revoked March 6 and was accepted March 7 by the president in the following letter:

"Dear Mr. Secretary: I accept your resignation with great reluctance. I have had the fullest opportunity to know you, know your standard of service to the government and the public, to know your motives, to know how you have administered your office and to know the motives of those who have assailed you. I do not hesitate to say that you have been the object of one of the most unscrupulous conspiracies for the defamation of character that history can show.

"I have deemed it my duty not only to the government, but to society in general, to fight out this battle to the end, confident that in the end your fellow citizens would see that the impressions of you as a man and as the administrator of a high public office were false and were the result of a malicious and unprincipled plan for the use of the press to misrepresent you and your actions and to torture every circumstance, however free from detrimental significance, into proof of corrupt motive.

"With the hypocritical pretense that they did not accuse you of corruption, in order to avoid the necessity that even the worst criminal is entitled to, to wit: that of a definitely formulated charge of some misconduct, they showered you with suspicion and by the most pettifogging methods exploited to the public matters which had no relevancy to an issue of either corruption or efficiency in office, but which, paraded before a hysterical body of headline readers, served to blacken your character and to obscure the proper issue of your honesty and effectiveness as a public servant.

"The result has been a cruel tragedy. You and yours have lost health and have been burdened financially. The conspirators, who have not hesitated in their pursuit of you to resort to the meanest methods, including the corruption of your most confidential assistant, plume themselves, like the Pharisees of old, as the only pure members of society actuated by the spirit of self-sacrifice for their fellow men.

"Every fiber of my nature rebels against such hypocrisy and nerves me to fight such a combination and such methods to the bitter end, lest success in this instance may form a demoralizing precedent. But personal consideration for you and yours makes me feel that I have no right to ask you for further sacrifice. Of course, it has been made evident that I was and am the ultimate object of the attack, and to insist, against your will, on your remaining in office with the prospect of further efforts against you is selfishly to impose on you more of a burden than I ought to impose.

"As I say farewell to you, let me renew my expression of affection and sincerest respect for you and of my profound gratitude for your hard work, your unvarying loyalty and your effective public service. I hope and pray that success may attend you and your profession and that real happiness will come to you and yours when you return to that community where you live and whose members know your worth as a man and a citizen and who will receive you again with open arms. Sincerely, yours,

WILLIAM H. TAFT."

In his original letter of resignation Mr. Ballinger gave ill-health as the reason why he desired to give up his office, but criticism of his attitude toward the Roosevelt policy of conservation of national resources in general and toward the Cunningham coal land claims in Alaska in particular had been severe, even after the investigation by congress, and exit from the cabinet was anticipated by many. The result of the congressional investigation was unsatisfactory, two reports being made. The minority of the committee, all democrats but one, found that the secretary was not deserving of public confidence and that he should be asked to resign. The majority report took the opposite view. No opportunity to consider the matter was given at the final session of the 61st congress.

On the same day that President Taft accepted Mr. Ballinger's resignation he appointed Walter L. Fisher of Chicago, an attorney, as secretary of the interior. Mr. Fisher was president of the Conservation League of America and later vice-president of the National Conservation association. His appointment, therefore, was regarded as due to his services in the cause of the conservation policy as well as to his high standing as a lawyer and citizen.

THE PAN-AMERICAN UNION.

The Pan-American union was established upon the recommendation of the first international American conference in 1890 for the purpose of maintaining closer relations between the republics of the western hemisphere. Its duties have been broadened since then and it is now a sort of clearing house of information concerning the nations of North, South and Central America. It publishes a monthly bulletin in which are given the latest official data concerning the resources, commerce and other features of the republics. The officers of the union occupy a fine building at the corner of 17th street and Potomac park in Washington, D. C. The structure, which was built with money given by Andrew Carnegie, was dedicated April 26, 1910. Following are the officers:

Director-General—John Barrett.
Assistant Director—Francisco J. Yanes.
Chief Statistician—William C. Wells.
Chief Clerk—Franklin Adams.
Chief Translator—Emilio M. Amores.
Librarian—Charles E. Babcock.
Special Compiler—Albert Hale.

DEATH OF JUSTICE JOHN M. HARLAN.

John Marshall Harlan, associate justice of the United States Supreme court, died in Washington, D. C., Oct. 14, 1911, after a brief illness from acute bronchitis. Had he lived until June, 1912, he would have served longer on the Supreme bench than any other man. Stephen J. Field served thirty-four years six months and ten days; Chief Justice Marshall thirty-four years five months and five days, and Harlan thirty-three years ten months and twenty-five days. Justice Harlan wrote many opinions of importance in the history of American jurisprudence. The latest—concerning the Standard Oil and tobacco trust—will be found in full in this volume of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book. [See pages 45 and 62.]

OCEAN STEAMSHIP COMPANIES SUED UNDER SHERMAN ACT.

Jan. 4, 1911, the federal government brought suit in the United States Circuit court in New York, N. Y., under the Sherman antitrust law against thirteen of the principal transatlantic steamer lines, which are estimated to control 90 per cent of the steerage traffic, worth to them $55,000,000 a year. Twelve officers of the defendant companies, all resident in America, were named as co-defendants.

These thirteen companies, the government charged, entered into an illegal contract on Feb. 5, 1908, in London, by which they constituted themselves the Atlantic conference, with power to apportion all traffic pro rata, impose heavy fines on members of the conference for violation of any articles of agreement, and wage competition against all lines outside the conference.

The government asked that the defendants be enjoined from further combining to injure or destroy the business of any person or corporation engaged in carrying steerage passengers between points in Europe and the United States. The following companies were made defendants:

- Allan Steamship company.
 - International Mercantile Marine company.
 - International Navigation company.
 - Anchor line.
 - Canadian Pacific Railway company.
 - Cunard Steamship company.
 - British and North Atlantic Steam Navigation company.
 - Hamburg-American line.
 - Holland-American line.
 - North German Lloyd company.
 - Red Star line.
 - White Star line.
 - Russian East Asiatic Steamship company.
- The individual defendants were Philip A. S. Franklin, Emil L. Boas, Gustav H. Schwab, Gustav H. Schwab, Jr., Charles P. Sumner, Alexander E. Johnson, Bryce J. Allan, H. C. Van Post, William Coverly, John Lee, Adrian Glips and Max Straus.

OKLAHOMA'S 2-CENT PASSENGER RATE INVALID.

Oklahoma's 2 cent passenger rate was declared to be confiscatory and therefore invalid by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis, Mo., March 29, 1911. The opinion, written by Presiding Judge Sanborn, also held that the provision in the state constitution of Oklahoma giving the corporation commission power to fix railroad rates was in conflict with the constitution of the United States. It had, however, the power to exempt railroads from confiscatory rates.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION.

1. Honorable discharge from the United States service.
2. Disability which prevents the applicant from earning a living by labor.
3. Applicants for admission will be required to abide by all the rules and regulations made by the board of managers, perform all the duties required of them and obey all the lawful orders of the officers of the home.
4. A soldier or sailor to be admitted must forward with his application his discharge paper, his pension certificate, if he is a pensioner, and his discharge from a state home if he has been an inmate of such home. These papers are retained at the branch to which he is admitted to prevent their loss or fraud, but are returned to him when he is discharged. Soldiers or sailors whose pensions exceed $16 a month are not admitted to the home except for special reasons.

The National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers is supported by the United States government. The appropriation for that purpose for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1911, was $4,201,800.

STATE SOLDIERS' HOMES.

There are a number of state homes for disabled volunteer soldiers, who, for various reasons, are unable to obtain admission to the national homes.

CENTRAL DIVISION, UNITED STATES ARMY.
 Headquarters, fifth floor federal building, Chicago.
 Commander—Maj.-Gen. W. H. Carter.
 Chief of Staff—Lieut.-Col. G. T. Bartlett.
 Adjutant-General—Col. W. A. Simpson.

HOME FOR REGULAR ARMY SOLDIERS.

The United States maintains a home for disabled and discharged soldiers of the regular army at Washington, D. C. All soldiers who have served twenty years in the army and all soldiers who have incurred such disability, by wounds, disease or injuries in the line of duty while in the regular army, as unfit them for further service are entitled to admission to the home. The home is in charge of a board of commissioners, consisting of the governor of the home, the adjutant-general of the army, the judge-advocate, the commissary-general, the quartermaster-general, the chief of engineers and the surgeon-general. The present governor is Lieut.-Gen. S. B. M. Young (retired).

CONFEDERATE SOLDIERS' HOME.

Confederate veterans of the civil war have a home at Beauvoir, near Biloxi, Miss. The residence there of Jefferson Davis in his last years was secured in 1902 as a refuge for helpless old southern soldiers by the United Sons of Confederate Veterans. It is supported by that society and the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

LARGEST CRANE IN THE WORLD.

What is declared to be the largest crane in the world was erected at Gevan, on the River Clyde, Scotland, in 1910. The jibhead of the crane is of the hammer head type, built on the cantilever principle, and stands 160 feet above high water level, or to rail level 169 feet. The jib, with a total length of 270 feet, extends 169½ feet outward from the center and can be utilized within every point of a circle 336 feet in diameter. The motors for operating the gear vary from 60 to 90 horsepower. The crane, on slow gear, can elevate 200 tons extended 75 feet along the jib, and on quick gear it can manipulate a load of 100 tons at 133 feet. The maximum load of 200 tons can be lifted from 20 feet below wharf level to 140 feet above, a total of 170 feet. The three controlling brakes are worked by magnetic, mechanical and hydraulic action. The stability of the structure of the crane depends on four huge steel cylinders, one under each corner of the tower. These great tubes, 15 feet in diameter at their base, are filled with concrete and sunk 74 feet below ground.

UNITED STATES COINAGE MINTS AND ASSAY OFFICES.

Coinage mints of the United States are located in Philadelphia, Pa.; San Francisco, Cal.; and Denver, Col. The government assay offices are in New York, N. Y.; Carson, Nev.; Denver, Col.; Boise, Idaho; Helena, Mont.; Charlotte, N. C.; St. Louis, Mo.; Deadwood, S. D.; Seattle, Wash.; New Orleans, La., and Salt Lake City, Utah. The mint in Philadelphia was established in 1792 and the others as follows: San Francisco, 1852, and Denver, 1904.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY.

West Point, N. Y.

The United States military academy is a school for the practical and theoretical training of cadets for the military service of the United States. When any cadet has completed the course of four years satisfactorily he is eligible for promotion and commission as a second lieutenant in any arm or corps in the army in which there may be a vacancy, the duties of which he may have been judged competent to perform.

Appointments—Each congressional district and territory, including the District of Columbia and Porto Rico, is entitled to have one cadet at the academy. Each state is also entitled to have two cadets from the state at large and forty are allowed from the United States at large. The law provides that for six years from July 1, 1910, whenever any cadet shall have finished three years of his course at the academy his successor may be admitted. The appointment from a congressional district is made upon the recommendation of the representative in congress from that district and those from the state at large upon the recommendations of the senators of the state. The appointments for the United States at large are made by the president upon his own selection. The appointment from the District of Columbia is made on the recommendation of the district commissioners and that from Porto Rico on the recommendation of the resident commissioner. Appointments are made one year in advance of admission. For each candidate appointed two alternates should be nominated. Four cadets from the Philippines are admitted.

Examinations—On the second Tuesday in January of each year the candidate selected for appointment must appear for mental and physical examination before boards of army officers at such places as the war department may designate. Candidates who pass will be admitted to the academy on March 1 following.

Mental Requirements—Each candidate must show that he is well versed in algebra, to include quadratic equations and progressions, plane geometry, English grammar, composition and literature, descriptive and physical geography and general and United States history.

Physical Requirements—No candidate will be admitted who is under 17 or over 23 years of age, or less than five feet four inches in height at the age of 17, or five feet five inches at the age of 18 and upward, or who is deformed or afflicted with any disease or infirmity which would render him unfit for military service. Candidates must be unmarried.

Pay—The pay of a cadet is $600 a year and one ration a day, or commutation therefor at 30 cents a day. The total is $709.50, to begin with his admission to the academy. No cadet is allowed to receive money or other supplies from his parents or from any other person without the sanction of the superintendent.

Enlistment—Before receiving his warrant of appointment a candidate for admission is required to sign an engagement to serve in the army of the United States eight years from the time of his admission to the academy.

UNITED STATES NAVAL ACADEMY.

Annapolis, Md.

The United States naval academy is a school for the practical and theoretical training of young men for the naval service of the United States. The students are styled midshipmen. The course of study is six years—four years at the academy and two years at sea—at the expiration of which time the examination for final graduation takes place. Midshipmen who pass are appointed to fill vacancies in the lower grade of the line of the navy, and occasionally to fill vacancies in the marine corps and in certain of the staff corps of the navy.

Appointments—Two midshipmen are allowed for each senator, representative and delegate in congress, two for the District of Columbia and five each year from the United States at large. The appointments from the District of Columbia and five each year at large are made by the president. One midshipman is allowed from Porto Rico, who must be a native of that island. The appointment is made by the president on the recommendation of the governor of Porto Rico. After June 30, 1913, each senator, representative and delegate in congress will be allowed to appoint but one midshipman instead of two. Candidates must be actual residents of the districts from which they are nominated.

Examinations—Two examinations for the admission of midshipmen are held each year. The first is held on the third Tuesday in April under the supervision of the civil service commission at certain specified points in each state and territory. All those qualifying mentally, who are entitled to appointment in order of nomination, will be notified by the superintendent of the naval academy when to report at the academy for physical examination, and if physically qualified will be appointed. The second and last examination is held on the third Tuesday in June at Annapolis, Md. Alternates are given the privilege of reporting for mental examination at the same time as the principals. Examination papers are all prepared at the academy and the examinations of candidates are finally passed upon by the academic board. Certificates from colleges and high schools will not be accepted in lieu of the entrance examinations at the naval academy.

Mental Requirements—Candidates will be examined in punctuation, spelling, arithmetic, geography, English grammar, United States history, world's history, algebra through quadratic equations and plane geometry (five books of Chauvenet's geometry or an equivalent).

Physical Requirements—All candidates must, at the time of their examination for admission, be between the ages of 16 and 20 years. A candidate is eligible for appointment the day he becomes 16 and is eligible on the day he becomes 20 years of age. Candidates are required to be of good moral character, physically sound, well formed and of robust constitution. The height of candidates for admission must not be less than five feet two inches between the ages of 16 and 18 years, and not less than five feet four inches between the ages of 18 and 20 years. The minimum weight at 16 years is 105 pounds with an increase of five pounds for each additional year or fraction of a year over one-half. Candidates must be unmarried.

Pay—The pay of a midshipman is $600 a year, beginning at the date of his admission. Midshipmen must supply themselves with clothing, books, etc., the total expense of which amounts to $280.64. Traveling expenses to the academy are paid by the government.

Enlistment—Each midshipman on admission is required to sign articles by which he binds himself to serve in the United States navy eight years (including his time of probation at the naval academy).

GREAT LAKES NAVAL TRAINING STATION.

North Chicago, Ill.

The great lakes naval training station at North Chicago, Ill., was placed in commission July 1, 1911, and the work of fitting young men for service in the enlisted force of the United States navy was at once begun. By Aug. 15, 289 recruits had been enrolled as apprentice seamen, most of them coming from the central west and south. The total amount expended for buildings and grounds, before the station opened, was $3,475,000 and for maintenance $406,648.

Enlistment—The term of enlistment is four years, except minors under 18 years of age, who are enlisted for the period of minority. Only such persons are enlisted as can be reasonably expected to remain in the service, and when enlisted they must serve out the term specified. The age limit is 17 to 25 years.

Physical Requirements—For a minor enlisting as an apprentice seaman the following minimum heights (barefooted) and weights (without clothes) are required:

Age.	Height.	Weight.
17.....	62 inches.....	110 pounds
18.....	64 inches.....	115 pounds
19.....	64 inches.....	120 pounds
20.....	64 inches.....	125 pounds

Any one of the following conditions will be sufficient to cause the rejection of an applicant: Feeble constitution, general poor physique or impaired general health; any disease or deformity, either congenital or acquired, that would impair efficiency; any mental disease.

Mental Requirements—Applicants for enlistment must be able to read and write English.

Other Requirements—Applicants for enlistment must be American citizens, native or naturalized. A minor must present a certificate of birth or verified written statement by his parents, or either of them, or in case of their death, a similar statement by his legal guardian, showing the applicant to be of the age required by the navy regulations.

Pay—The pay of apprentice seamen is $17.60 per month. Each enlisted man is furnished with a free outfit of clothing, amounting to $60, on first enlistment.

How to enlist—Any one who wishes to enlist in the navy should write to the bureau of navigation, navy department, Washington, D. C., stating such desire, and the bureau will immediately reply, giving the address of the nearest recruiting station, where applicants are examined physically and either accepted or rejected. The government pays the expenses from the point of enlistment to the training station but not to the recruiting station.

There are similar training stations at Narragansett Bay, R. I., and San Francisco, Cal.

BIRD RESERVATIONS IN THE UNITED STATES.

For the purpose of preserving the native wild birds of the country from destruction, the United States in 1903 inaugurated the plan of setting aside regions that contain important colonies of breeding birds as bird reservations or "refuges." The first reserve created was that including Pelican Island, Florida, containing a colony of brown pelicans. Since then many other reserves have been established by executive order in various parts of the union. The localities set aside are under the supervision of the secretary of agriculture and of wardens appointed by him, one warden usually caring for all the reservations within a state. Under a federal law, approved June 23, 1906, it is unlawful for any person to hunt, trap, capture, willfully disturb or kill any bird of any kind or take the eggs of such birds on any lands of the United States which have been set apart or reserved as breeding grounds for birds by any law, proclamation or executive order, except under such rules as the secretary of agriculture may prescribe. Violations of the law are punishable by fines up to $500, or imprisonment for six months, or both. Following is a list of the existing bird reserves in the order of their establishment:

THEATER PANIC AT CANONSBURG, PA.

While a picture show was in progress in the Canonsburg (Pa.) opera house on the evening of Aug. 26, 1911, a cry of fire was raised when the picture machine clicked and caused a bright flash to be thrown on the screen. This led to a panic and the spectators rushed to the narrow exit. One of the men in the crowd tripped and fell on the stairs. Others were pushed over him and in a moment the stairway was filled with a mass of struggling men and women, of whom twenty-six were killed and nearly sixty injured. There was no fire and the disaster was really inexcusable.

LIST OF SHIPS OF THE UNITED STATES NAVY.

NOTE—Abbreviations: T. S., twin screw; Tr. S., triple screw; S., screw. Where size of guns is expressed in inches, only main battery is given. Where size is expressed in pounds and under four inches, vessels have only a secondary battery.

 Twenty-seven judges, one chief justice, one clerk and one bailiff of the Municipal court as terms expire. Nine judges and the chief justice, clerk and bailiff will be elected Nov. 5, 1912.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION OF 1912.

The next president and vice-president of the United States will be chosen Nov. 5, 1912. As is well known, these officials are not elected directly by the people, but by electors, who are voted for on the party tickets on the date named. The electors chosen will meet Monday, Jan. 13, 1913, in their respective states and vote by ballot for president and vice-president of the United States. The result will be transmitted to the president of the senate in Washington, Wednesday, Feb. 12, 1913, the electoral votes will be opened and counted in the presence of both houses of congress and the result announced by the president of the senate.

While the president and vice-president are thus formally elected in 1913, the actual choice is made in 1912. In the spring and summer of that year national party conventions will be held for the nomination of candidates for president and vice-president of the United States for the term beginning March 4, 1913. These conventions are not provided for by the constitution, but it has become the invariable rule that the candidates presented by them are voted for by the presidential electors. The latter are nominated at the state party conventions or primaries and are elected on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November of every fourth year, preceding the end of the presidential term. Each state is entitled to as many electors as it has senators and representatives. No senator or representative or person holding an office of trust or honor under the United States may be an elector. The twelfth amendment to the constitution prescribes how the electors shall meet and cast their ballots and how congress shall count the votes. The article is as follows:

"The electors shall meet in their respective states and vote by ballot for president and vice-president, one of whom at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as president, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as vice-president, and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as president and of all persons voted for as vice-president, and of the number of votes for each, which list they shall sign and certify and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the president of the senate.

"The president of the senate shall, in the presence of the senate and house of representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted; the person having the greatest number of votes for president shall be the president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers, not exceeding three, on the list of those voted for as president, the house of representatives shall choose immediately by ballot the president. But in choosing the president the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. And if the house of representatives shall not choose a president, whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the 4th day of March next following, then the vice-president shall act as president, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the president.

"The person having the greatest number of votes as vice-president shall be the vice-president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list the senate shall choose the vice-president; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of president shall be eligible to that of vice-president of the United States."

Section 5, article II., of the constitution prescribes the qualifications of the president as follows:

"No person except a natural born citizen or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of the constitution shall be eligible to the office of president; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of 35 years and been fourteen years a resident within the United States."

The qualifications of the vice-president are the same as those of the president.

THE ELECTORAL COLLEGE.

The president and vice-president of the United States are not elected directly by the people, but by the members of an electoral college who are voted for at the regular presidential elections. Each state is entitled to as many representatives in the electoral college as there are congressional districts in the states and in addition one for each senator. Following is the electoral vote of the states, based upon the apportionment of representatives made by congress under the census of 1910:

NATIONAL PARTY PLATFORMS OF 1908.

[For full text see The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book for 1909, page 195.]

PEOPLE'S.

Adopted at St. Louis, April 3.

The people's party advocates the issuance of money direct by the government to the people without the intervention of the national banks, to be distributed through federal and internal improvement; the public ownership of railroads and other public utilities; homesteading of land; the parcels post; governmental regulation of corporations by a general law regulating corporations doing an interstate business; initiative and referendum; direct vote for all public officers, with the power of recall; federal statute recognizing the principle of the initiative and referendum; giving the people power of instructing their national representatives in congress; abolition of child labor; the eight-hour day; an employers' liability law; condemnation of federal injunctions and gambling in futures.

UNITED CHRISTIAN.

Reaffirmed at Rock Island, Ill., May 1.

The platform of the united Christian party is based on the ten commandments and the golden rule and favors direct primary elections, the initiative, referendum, recall, uniform marriage and divorce laws, equal rights for men and women, government ownership of coal mines, oil wells and public utilities; the regulation of trusts and the election of the president and vice-president and senators of the United States by the direct vote of the people.

SOCIALIST.

Adopted at Chicago, May 17.

"We advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

"1. The immediate government relief for the unemployed workers by building schools, by reforesting of cutover and waste lands, by reclamation of arid tracts, and the building of canals, and by extending all other useful public works. All persons employed on such works shall be employed directly by the government under an eight-hour workday and at the prevailing union wages. The government shall also loan money to states and municipalities, without interest, for the purpose of carrying on public works. It shall contribute to the funds of labor organizations for the purpose of assisting their unemployed members, and shall take such other measures within its power as will lessen the widespread misery of the workers caused by the misrule of the capitalist class.

"2. The collective ownership of railroads, telegraphs, telephones, steamship lines and all other means of social transportation and communication, and all land.

"3. The collective ownership of all industries which are organized on a national scale and in which competition has virtually ceased to exist.

"4. The extension of the public domain to include mines, quarries, oil wells, forests and water power.

"5. The occupancy and use of land to be the sole title to possession. The scientific reforestation of timber lands and the reclamation of swamp lands. The land so reforested or reclaimed to be permanently retained as a part of the public domain.

"6. The absolute freedom of press, speech and assemblage.

"7. The improvement of the industrial condition of the workers—

(a). By shortening the workday in keeping with the increased productiveness of machinery.

(b) By securing to every worker a rest period of not less than a day and a half in each week.

(c) By securing a more effective inspection of workshops and factories.

(d) By forbidding the employment of children under 16 years of age.

(e) By forbidding the interstate transportation of the products of child labor, of convict labor and of all uninspected factories.

(f) By abolishing official charity and substituting in its place compulsory insurance against unemployment, illness, accidents, invalidism, old age and death.

"8. The extension of inheritance taxes, graduated in proportion to the amount of the bequests and to the nearness of kin.

"9. A graduated income tax.

"10. Unrestricted and equal suffrage for men and women, and we pledge ourselves to engage in an active campaign in that direction.

"11. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall.

"12. The abolition of the senate.

"13. The abolition of the power usurped by the Supreme court of the United States to pass upon the constitutionality of legislation enacted by congress. National laws to be repealed or abrogated only by act of congress or by a referendum of the whole people.

"14. That the constitution be made amendable by a majority vote.

"15. The enactment of further measures for general education and for the conservation of health. The bureau of education to be made a department. The creation of a department of public health.

"16. The separation of the present bureau of labor from the department of commerce and labor, and the establishment of a department of labor.

"17. That all judges be elected by the people for short terms, and that the power to issue injunctions shall be curbed by immediate legislation.

"18. The free administration of justice."

SOCIALIST LABOR.

Adopted at New York city, July 5.

The socialist labor party at its national convention in New York city, July 2-5, 1908, reaffirmed the platform adopted in 1904. This, in substance, advocates the ending of the present struggle between the capitalist and laboring classes by placing the land and the means of production, transportation and distribution into the hands of the people as a collective body and substituting the co-operative commonwealth for the present state of planless production, industrial war and social disorder—a commonwealth in which every worker shall have the free exercise and full benefit of his faculties, multiplied by all the modern factors of civilization.

DEMOCRATIC.

Adopted at Denver, July 10.

The platform denounces the waste of the people's money through extravagant appropriations by congress and the increase in the number of officeholders. It charges that the house of representatives has ceased to be a deliberative and legislative body, responsive to the will of the majority of its members, and has come under the absolute domination of the speaker. It pledges the democratic party to the enactment of a law preventing corporations from making campaign contributions and any individual from contributing an amount above a reasonable maximum and providing for the publication of contributions. It opposes the extension of the powers of the general government by judicial construction and insists that federal remedies for the regulation of interstate commerce and for the prevention of private monopoly shall be added to, not substituted for, state remedies.

"We favor immediate revision of the tariff by the reduction of import duties. Articles entering into competition with trust-controlled products should be placed upon the free list and material reductions should be made in the tariff upon the necessities of life, especially upon articles competing with such American manufactures as are sold abroad more cheaply than at home; and graduate reductions should be made in such other schedules as may be necessary to restore the tariff to a revenue basis. We demand the immediate repeal of the tariff on wood pulp, print paper, lumber, timber and logs and that these articles be placed upon the free list.

"A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. We, therefore, favor the vigorous enforcement of the criminal law against guilty trust magnates and officials, and demand the enactment of such additional legislation as may be necessary to make it impossible for a private monopoly to exist in the United States. Among the additional remedies we specify three: First, a law preventing a duplication of directors among competing corporations; second, a license system which will, without abridging the right of each state to create corporations, or its right to regulate as it will foreign corporations doing business within its limits, make it necessary for a manufacturing or trading corporation engaged in interstate commerce to take out a federal license before it shall be permitted to control as much as 25 per cent of the product in which it deals, the license to protect the public from watered stock and to prohibit the control by such corporations of more than 50 per cent of the total amount of any product consumed in the United States; and third, a law compelling such licensed corporation to sell to all purchasers in all parts of the country on the same terms, after making due allowance for cost of transportation.

"We assert the right of congress to exercise complete control over interstate commerce and the right of each state to exercise like control over commerce within its borders. We demand such enlargement of the powers of the interstate-commerce commission as may be necessary to compel railroads to perform their duties as common carriers and prevent discrimination and extortion. We favor the efficient supervision and rate regulation of railroads engaged in interstate commerce, and to this end we recommend the valuation of railroads by the interstate-commerce commission, such valuation to take into consideration the physical value of the property, the original cost, cost of production and all elements of value that will render the valuation fair and just. We favor such legislation as will prohibit the railroads from engaging in business which brings them into competition with their shippers, also legislation preventing the overissue of stocks and bonds by interstate railroads and legislation which will assure such reduction in transportation rates as conditions will permit, care being taken to avoid reductions that would compel a reduction of wages, prevent adequate service or do injustice to legitimate investment. We favor such legislation as will increase the power of the interstate-commerce commission, giving to it the initiative with reference to rates and transportation charges put into effect by the railroad companies and permitting the interstate-commerce commission on its own initiative to declare a rate illegal and as being more than should be charged for such service. We further declare in favor of a law providing that all agreements of traffic or other associations of railway agents affecting interstate rates, service or classification shall be unlawful unless filed with and approved by the interstate-commerce commission.

"We favor a postal savings bank, if the guaranteed bank cannot be secured, and believe that it should be so constituted as to keep the deposited money in the community where the depositors live. But we condemn the policy of the republican party in proposing postal savings banks under a plan of conduct by which they will aggregate the deposits of rural communities and reposit the same while under government charge in the banks of Wall street, thus depleting the circulating medium of the producing regions and unjustly favoring the speculative markets.

"We favor an income tax as part of our revenue system, and we urge the submission of a constitutional amendment specifically authorizing congress to levy and collect a tax upon individual and corporate incomes, to the end that wealth may bear its proportionate share of the burdens of the federal government.

"Experience has proved the necessity of a modification of the present law relating to injunctions, and we reiterate the pledges of our national platforms of 1896 and 1904 in favor of the measure which passed the United States senate in 1896, but which a republican congress has ever since refused to enact, relating to contempts in federal courts and providing for trial by jury in cases of indirect contempt. Questions of judicial practice have arisen, especially in connection with industrial disputes. We deem that parties to all judicial proceedings should be treated with rigid impartiality and that injunctions should not be issued in any case in which injunctions would not issue if no industrial dispute were involved."

The platform further pledges the democratic party to the enactment of a general employers' liability law, to the creation of a federal department of labor, represented separately in the president's cabinet, to the upbuilding of the merchant marine without bounties and to the maintenance of an adequate navy. It favors a generous pension policy and advocates the organization of a national bureau of public health.

"We favor the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people, and regard this reform as the gateway to other national reforms.

"We earnestly favor the immediate adoption of a liberal and comprehensive plan for improving every water course in the union which is justified by the needs of commerce, and, to secure that end, we favor, when practicable, the connection of the great lakes with the navigable rivers and with the gulf, through the Mississippi river, and the navigable rivers with each other, and the rivers, bays and sounds of our coasts with each other by artificial canals, with a view to perfecting a system of inland waterways, to be navigated by vessels of standard draft.

"We repeat the demand for internal development and for the conservation of our natural resources contained in previous platforms, the enforcement of which Mr. Roosevelt has vainly sought from a reluctant party; and to that end we insist upon the preservation, protection and replacement of needed forests, the preservation of the public domain for homeseekers, the protection of the nation's natural resources in timber, coal, iron and oil against monopolistic control, the development of our waterways for navigation and every other useful purpose, including the irrigation of arid lands, the reclamation of swamp lands, the clarification of streams, the development of water power and the preservation of electric power generated by this natural force from the control of monopoly; and to such end we urge the exercise of all powers, national, state and municipal, both separately and in co-operation.

"We condemn the experiment in imperialism as an inexcusable blunder which has involved us in an enormous expense, brought us weakness instead of strength, and laid our nation open to the charge of abandoning a fundamental doctrine of self-government. We favor an immediate declaration of the nation's purpose to recognize the independence of the Philippine islands as soon as a stable government can be established, such independence to be guaranteed by us as we guarantee the independence of Cuba, until the neutralization of the islands can be secured by treaty with other powers. In recognizing the independence of the Philippines our government should retain such land as may be necessary for coaling stations and naval bases."

PROHIBITIONIST.

Adopted at Columbus, O., July 16.

The prohibition party of the United States, assembled in convention at Columbus, O., July 15-16, 1908, expressing gratitude to Almighty God for the victories of our principles in the past, for encouragement at present and for confidence in early and triumphant success in the future, makes the following declaration of principles and pledges their enactment into law when placed in power:

1. The submission by congress to the several states of an amendment to the federal constitution prohibiting the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation or transportation of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes.

2. The immediate prohibition of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes in the district of Columbia, in the territories and all places over which the national government has jurisdiction; the repeal of the internal revenue tax on alcoholic liquors and the prohibition of interstate traffic therein.

—3. The election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

4. Equitable graduated income and inheritance taxes.
5. The establishment of postal savings banks and the guaranty of deposits in banks.
6. The regulation of all corporations doing an interstate-commerce business.
7. The creation of permanent tariff commissions.
8. The strict enforcement of law instead of official tolerance and practical license of the social evil which prevails in many of our cities, with its unspeakable traffic in girls.
9. Uniform marriage and divorce laws.
10. An equitable and constitutional employers' liability act.
11. Court review of postoffice department decisions.
12. The prohibition of child labor in mines, workshops and factories.
13. Legislation basing suffrage only upon intelligence and ability to read and write the English language.
14. The preservation of the mineral and forest resources of the country and the improvement of the highways and waterways.

REPUBLICAN.

Adopted at Chicago, June 18.

"The republican party declares unequivocally for a revision of the tariff by a special session of congress immediately following the inauguration of the next president, and commends the steps already taken to this end in the work assigned to the appropriate committees of congress which are now investigating the operation and effect of existing schedules. In all tariff legislation the true principle of protection is best maintained by the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit to American industries. We favor the establishment of maximum and minimum rates to be administered by the president under limitations fixed in the law, the maximum to be available to meet discriminations by foreign countries against American goods entering their markets and the minimum to represent the normal measure of protection at home; the aim and purpose of the republican policy being not only to preserve, without excessive duties, that security against foreign competition to which American manufacturers, farmers and producers are entitled, but also to maintain the high standard of living of the wage earners of this country, who are the most direct beneficiaries of the protective system. Between the United States and the Philippines we believe in a free interchange of products with such limitations as to sugar and tobacco as will afford adequate protection to domestic interests.

"We approve the emergency measures adopted by the government during the recent financial disturbance, and especially commend the passage by congress at the last session of the law designed to protect the country from a repetition of such stringencies. The republican party is committed to the development of a permanent currency system responding to our greater needs, and the appointment of the national monetary commission by the present congress which will impartially investigate all proposed methods insures the early realization of this purpose.

"We favor the establishment of a postal savings bank system for the convenience of the people and the encouragement of thrift.

"The republican party passed the Sherman anti-trust law over democratic opposition, and enforced it after democratic dereliction. It has been a wholesome instrument for good in the hands of a wise and fearless administration. But experience has shown that its effectiveness can be strengthened and its real objects better attained by such amendments as will give to the federal government greater supervision and control over, and secure greater publicity in, the management of that class of corporations engaged in interstate commerce having power and opportunity to effect monopolies.

"We approve the enactment of the railroad rate law and the vigorous enforcement by the present administration of the statutes against rebates and discriminations, as a result of which the advantages formerly possessed by the large shipper over the small shipper have substantially disappeared, and in this connection we commend the appropriation by the present congress to enable the interstate-commerce commission to thoroughly investigate and give publicity to the accounts of interstate railroads. We believe, however, that the interstate-commerce law should be further amended so as to give railroads the right to make and publish traffic agreements subject to the approval of the commission, but maintaining always the principle of competition between naturally competing lines and avoiding the common control of such lines by any means whatsoever. We favor such national legislation and supervision as will prevent the future overissue of stocks and bonds by interstate carriers.

"The republican party will uphold at all times the authority and integrity of the courts, state and federal, and will ever insist that their powers to enforce their process and to protect life, liberty and property shall be preserved inviolate. We believe, however, that the rules of procedure in the federal courts with respect to the issuance of the writ of injunction should be more accurately defined by statute and that no injunction or temporary restraining order should be issued without notice, except where irreparable injury would result from delay, in which case a speedy hearing thereafter should be granted.

"We endorse the movement inaugurated by the administration for the conservation of natural resources; we approve all measures to prevent the waste of timber; we commend the work now going on for the reclamation of arid lands, and reaffirm the republican policy of the free distribution of the available areas of the public domain to the landless settler. No obligation of the future is more insistent and none will result in greater blessings to posterity. In line with this splendid undertaking is the further duty, equally imperative, to enter upon a systematic improvement upon a large and comprehensive plan, just to all portions of the country, of the waterways, harbors and great lakes, whose natural adaptability to the increasing traffic of the land is one of the greatest gifts of a benign Providence.

"We adhere to the republican doctrine of encouragement to American shipping and urge such legislation as will revive the merchant marine prestige of the country, so essential to national defense, the enlargement of foreign trade and the industrial prosperity of our own people.

"We reaffirm our former declarations that the civil-service laws enacted, extended and enforced by the republican party shall continue to be maintained and obeyed.

"We commend the efforts designed to secure greater efficiency in national public health agencies and favor such legislation as will effect this purpose.

"In the interest of the great mineral industries of our country we earnestly favor the establishment of a bureau of mines and mining.

"We favor the immediate admission of the territories of New Mexico and Arizona as separate states in the union."

INDEPENDENCE.

Adopted at Chicago, July 23.

"As of first importance, in order to restore the power of government to the people, to make their will supreme in the primaries, in the elections and in the control of public officials after they have been elected, we declare for direct nominations, the initiative and referendum and the right of recall.

"Representative government is made a mockery by the system of modern party conventions dominated by bosses and controlled by cliques. We demand the natural remedy of direct nominations by which the people not only elect but, which is far more important, select their representatives.

"We believe in the principles of the initiative and referendum and we particularly demand that no franchise grant go into operation until the terms and conditions have been approved by popular vote in the locality interested.

"We demand for the people the right to recall public officials from the public service. The power to make officials resides in the people and in them also should reside the power to unmake and remove from office any official who demonstrates his unfitness or betrays the public trust.

"Of next importance in destroying the power of selfish special interests and the corrupt political bosses whom they control is to wrest from their hands their main weapon, the corruption fund. We demand severe and effective legislation against all forms of corrupt practices at elections and advocate prohibiting the use of any money at elections except for meetings, literature and the necessary traveling expenses of candidates.

"From the foundation of our government down to 1872 the federal judiciary act prohibited the issue of any injunction without reasonable notice until after a hearing. We assert that in all actions growing out of a dispute between employers and employes concerning terms or conditions of employment no injunction should issue until after a trial upon the merits, that such trial should be had before a jury and that in no case of alleged contempt should any person be deprived of liberty without a trial by jury.

"The independence party declares that the right to issue money is inherent in the government and it favors the establishment of a central governmental bank through which the money so issued shall be put into general circulation.

"We demand a revision of the tariff, not by the friends of the tariff, but by the friends of the people, and declare for a gradual reduction of tariff duties with just consideration for the rights of the consuming public and of established industry. There should be no protection for oppressive trusts which sell cheaply abroad and take advantage of the tariff at home to crush competition, raise prices, control production and limit work and wages.

"The parcels post system should be rapidly and widely extended, and government postal savings banks should be established where the people's deposits will be secure, the money to be loaned to the people in the locality of the several banks and at a rate of interest to be fixed by the government."

The platform also favored the passage of an exclusion act to protect American workmen from competition with Asiatic cheap labor; the building of a navy strong enough to protect at the same time both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States; the building of a ship canal from the lakes to the gulf; the protection of American citizens abroad; the popular election of United States senators and of judges, both state and federal, and a graduated income tax.

REPUBLICAN PROGRESSIVE LEAGUE.

Organized in Washington, D. C., Jan. 21, 1911.

President—Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., Oregon. First vice-president—Representative George W. Norris, Nebraska.

Second vice-president—Gov. Chase S. Osborn, Michigan.

Executive committee—Senator Moses E. Clapp, Minnesota; Senator Joseph L. Bristow, Kansas; Representative E. H. Hubbard, Iowa; Representative Irvine L. Lenroot, Wisconsin; Representative William Kent, California; Gifford Pinchot, Pennsylvania; George L. Record, New Jersey; president, vice-presidents and treasurer members ex-officio.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

"We, the undersigned, associate ourselves together as the National Progressive Republican league.

"The object of the league is the promotion of popular government and progressive legislation.

"Popular government in America has been thwarted and progressive legislation strangled by the special interests, which control caucuses, delegates, conventions and party organizations, and through control of the machinery of government, dictate nominations and platforms, elect administrations, legislatures, representatives in congress and United States senators and control cabinet officers.

"Under existing conditions legislation in the public interest has been baffled and defeated. This is evidenced by the long struggle to secure laws only partially effective for the control of railway rates and service, the revision of the tariff in the interest of the producer and consumer, statutes dealing with trusts and combinations based on sound economic principles as applied to modern industrial and commercial conditions, a wise, comprehensive and impartial reconstruction of the banking and monetary laws, the conservation of coal, oil, gas, timber, water powers and other natural resources belonging to the people, and for the enactment of all legislation solely for the common good.

"Just in proportion as popular government has in certain states superseded the delegate convention system and the people have assumed control of the machinery of government has government become responsive to the popular will and progressive legislation been secured.

"The Progressive Republican league believes that popular government is fundamental to all other questions. To this end it advocates:

"The election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

"Direct primaries for the nomination of all elective officials.

"The direct election of delegates to national conventions, with opportunity for the voter to express his choice for president and vice-president.

"Amendment to state constitutions providing for the initiative, referendum and recall.

"A thorough general corrupt practice act.

"The league will co-operate with progressives in the several states, and, wherever acceptable, will render assistance in promoting the organization of state leagues.

"Whenever requested by any progressive state league or by progressive leaders in state legislatures the National Progressive Republican league will aid in the preparation of appropriate bills and resolutions and will furnish speakers and literature in support of legislative action upon the propositions enumerated in the five paragraphs set forth in the foregoing declaration of principles."

The declaration of principles is signed by:

Two hundred delegates attended a national progressive republican conference in Chicago Oct. 16 and 17, 1911, at which a declaration of principles was adopted and Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin sin was indorsed for the presidency. The resolutions passed were as follows:

"The progressive movement is a struggle to wrest the control of government in the nation and states from the representatives of special privileges and restore it to the control of the people. The issue is the same in all the states of the union, though the problem may be presented in different ways.

"In the national field the control of government by special privilege is evidenced by the influence and power of the reactionary leaders of both parties in checking or preventing the enactment of the progressive policies pledged by the republican party.

"The progressive movement aims to nominate and elect as candidates of the republican party men who will with sincerity and singleness of purpose represent its rank and file and carry out their will.

"The present condition of uncertainty in business is intolerable and destructive of industrial prosperity. It is worse than idle to leave the question of whether great business enterprises are legal or not merely to judicial determination.

"Industrial corporations should by affirmative legislative enactment be given definite rules of conduct by which business conducted in accordance therewith shall be made safe and stable while at the same time the interests of the public shall be fully safeguarded. We seek constructive legislation and not destructive litigation.

"We favor the ascertainment of the choice of republican voters as to candidates for president by a direct primary vote held in each state, pursuant to statute, and where no such statute exists we urge that the republican state committees provide that the people be given the right to express their choice for president.

"Constructive leadership being the urgent need of the present time, it is necessary that republicans support a candidate for president whose record gives the fullest assurance of the enactment and enforcement of sound progressive policies.

"Robert Marion LaFollette of Wisconsin years ago found conditions in his state not unlike those of the nation to-day. Under his leadership all opposition was overcome, and there has been enacted in Wisconsin a system of laws that stand as models for legislation in all states of the union. Laws have been passed in that state adequately regulating all public service corporations; equalizing the burdens of taxation; providing for direct nominations by the people; protecting legitimate business and capital honestly invested; promoting the welfare of labor—in short, real representative government has been restored.

"The record of Senator LaFollette in state and nation makes him a logical candidate for president of the United States. His experience, his character, his courage, his record of constructive legislation and administrative ability meet the requirements for leadership such as present conditions demand.

"This conference indorses him as a candidate for the republican nomination for president and urges that in all the states organizations be formed to promote his nomination."

UNITED CHRISTIAN PARTY CONVENTION.

The United Christian party held a national conference or convention at Black Hawk's Watch Tower, Rock Island, Ill., May 1, 1911, at which candidates for president and vice-president of the United States were nominated. John Fry of Rock Island was chairman and Daniel P. Turney of Decatur, Ill., secretary. Rudolph William Benkert of 2204 Ripley street, Davenport, Iowa, was elected national chairman and authorized to select a state chairman in each state. H. A. Simpson of Pana, Ill., was chosen first national vice-chairman and Rudolph Fotsch, second national vice-chairman. Ida McDaniel was elected national secretary and Kattie Benkert assistant national secretary. John Fry was chosen national treasurer.

The nominations for president and vice-president of the United States were made by acclamation. Daniel Braxton Turney of Decatur, Ill., was nominated for president, and S. P. Carter of Howard Lake, Minn., for vice-president.

The following platform was adopted:
"We, the United Christian party, in annual national conference at the Watch Tower in Rock Island, Ill., May 1, 1911, reaffirm our platform and proclamation of 1910, in which the decalogue and Jesus' rule is the basis and measure of what the Christian party does and asks for, and knowing that God gave us this perfect standard as a measure for all laws and righteous government, of which Jesus' said, "Not one jot or tittle shall pass away until all be fulfilled."

And, because this standard is often set aside and ignored and sometimes willfully violated by many of our rulers, lawmakers and judges, by framing and executing laws which contravene the divine law, which is national sin, and believing that the national adoption of God's standard would end war and be to the glory of God and the benefit of humanity, and because it is hard for the common people to do right when asked to respect or obey laws that force men to sin, we ask the Hon. I. S. Pepper, congressman from Iowa, to present this resolution to our national congress, and ask for a standing vote from both house of representatives and our United States senate for the adoption of this resolution:

"Be it resolved by the congress of the United States of America, that the use of the decalogue and Jesus' rule be the standard measure for laws and regulations of the government of the United States, regardless of sex, nationality, creed or party."

The united prayer and co-operation of all Christians and patriots is asked for the adoption and use of the Lord's standard nationally as an expression and example to the world.

We, the Christian party, ask all lawmakers and rulers to adopt and use the decalogue and the golden rule formulated by Jesus Christ as the standard measure for all our laws and government.

We believe in a rightful ground and income tax. We disapprove of a standing army and the expense of further preparation for war.

We demand the divorcement of our government from the liquor traffic, that the manufacture of alcoholic beverages be stopped, and under a proper compensation for business losses, the suppression of the saloon system.

We protest against the unsettling of business by unjust tariff legislation.

We favor a direct vote of the people (women included) in electing all officers.

Relying upon God's blessing, in His name and under His authority, we seek the support and co-operation of all patriots, regardless of sex, nationality, creed, race or party, to His glory and for humanity, and for the overthrow of his gators' kingdom on earth.

NATIONAL MONETARY COMMISSION.

Appointed under the act to amend the national banking laws approved May 30, 1908.

Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island, chairman; Representative Edward B. Vreeland of New York, vice-chairman; Julius C. Burrows of Michigan, Eugene Hale of Maine, Secretary of State Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania, Henry M. Teller of Colorado, Hernando D. Money of Mississippi, Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas, Senator Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, Frank P. Flint of California, James F. Taliaferro of Florida, Robert W. Bonyucco of Colorado, and Representatives John W. Weeks of Massachusetts, Lemuel P. Padgett of Tennessee, George F. Burgess of Texas, Arsene P. Pujo of Louisiana and George W. Prince of Illinois; James P. McLachlan of California.

By an act of congress approved Aug. 22, 1911, the commission was required to submit a full and comprehensive report on or before Jan. 8, 1912. The life of the commission was limited to March 31, 1912.

Secretary—Arthur B. Shelton, 1712 R street, Washington, D. C.

Assistant to the Commission—Prof. A. Piatt Andrew.

DISASTROUS FLOOD AT AUSTIN, PA.

Seventy-four lives were lost at Austin, Pa., on the afternoon of Sept. 30, 1911, by the bursting of the Bayliss Pulp and Paper company's dam, a mile and a half north of the town. Near the dam, which was of concrete, 700,000 cords of wood had been stored for future use by the company. This wood was swept away by the suddenly released waters and helped to overwhelm the frame buildings in the town. Nearly all structures on an area about half a mile wide by one and three-fourths miles long were destroyed either by the flood or by a fire which was caused by broken gas mains. It was at first reported that from 850 to 1,200 persons had been killed, but this proved a gross exaggeration. It was claimed that the dam had been considered unsafe, but that no adequate repairs had been attempted. It held back more than 500,000,000 gallons of water. The total property loss was estimated at $6,000,000.

Austin in 1910 had a population of 2,941. It is in Potter county, in the northern central part of Pennsylvania. Freeman run, a mill stream, flows through the town and empties into Sinnemahoning creek. The town is built in a narrow valley on the banks of the stream, down which the flood came.

In five states in 1892 the electoral vote was divided: California gave 8 electoral votes for Cleveland and 1 for Harrison and Ohio gave 1 for Cleveland and 22 for Harrison; in Michigan, by act of the legislature, each congressional district voted separately for an elector; in Oregon 1 of the 4 candidates for electors on the people's party ticket was also on the democratic ticket; in North Dakota 1 of the 2 people's party electors cast his vote for Cleveland, this causing the electoral vote of the state to be equally divided among Cleveland, Harrison and Weaver. In 1896 California gave 8 electoral votes to McKinley and 1 to Bryan; Kentucky gave 12 to McKinley and 1 to Bryan. In Maryland in 1904 7 of the presidential electors chosen were democrats and 1 republican. In 1908 Maryland elected 6 democratic and 2 republican electors.

UNITED STATES ARSENALS.

The largest of the United States arsenals are located at Rock Island, Ill., and Springfield, Mass. Others are at Pittsburg, Pa.; Augusta, Ga.; Benicá, Cal.; Columbia, Tenn.; Fort Monroe, Va.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Governor's Island, N. Y.; Jefferson barracks, Mo.; Sandy Hook, N. J.; San Antonio, Tex.; Dover, N. J.; Watertown, Mass., and Watervliet, N. Y. Some of the above are merely powder depots, the principal manufacturing plants being at Rock Island, Springfield and Watervliet. The navy yards are also arsenals.

MILITARY PENSIONS IN THE UNITED STATES.

Those who are now receiving allowances under the military pension laws of the United States include the following:

War of 1812—Widows.

Indian wars—Survivors and widows.

War with Mexico—Survivors and widows.

Civil war—Invalids, widows, minor and helpless children, mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters and army nurses (women).

War with Spain and in Philippines—Invalids, widows, minor and helpless children, mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters.

Regular army and navy—Invalids, widows, minor and helpless children, mothers, fathers; brothers and sisters.

The principal laws under which military pensions are now paid by the United States are the following:

War of 1812—The surviving widows of officers and enlisted and drafted men, including militia and volunteers, of the military and naval service of the United States, who served sixty days in the war with Great Britain, 1812, and were honorably discharged, and of such other officers and soldiers as may have been personally named in any resolution of congress for any specific service in that war, although their term of service may have been less than sixty days, shall be allowed the same pension that such persons themselves would have been entitled to receive if living Feb. 14, 1871. The rate, originally $8 a month, is now $12. (Act of March 9, 1878, and March 19, 1886.)

Indian wars—By the act of July 27, 1832, there were placed upon the pension rolls, the names of the surviving officers and enlisted men, including marines, militia and volunteers of the military and naval service of the United States who served for thirty days in the Black Hawk war, the Creek war, the Cherokee disturbances and the Florida war with the Seminoles, embracing a period from 1832 to 1842, who were honorably discharged, and of such other officers, soldiers and sailors as may have been named in any resolution of congress for any specific service in those wars, although their term of office may have been less than thirty days, and of the surviving widows of such officers and enlisted men. By the act of June 27, 1902, the provisions of the act of July 27, 1832, were extended to the surviving officers and enlisted men, including marines, militia and volunteers of the military and naval service of the United States who served for thirty days or more and were honorably discharged under the United States military, state, territorial or provisional authorities in the Florida and Georgia Seminole Indian war of 1817 and 1818; the Fevre river Indian war of Illinois of 1827; the Sac and Fox Indian war of 1831; the Sabine Indian disturbance of 1836 and 1837; the Cayuse Indian war of 1847 and 1848 on the Pacific coast; the Florida wars with the Seminole Indians from 1842 to 1858, inclusive; the Texas and New Mexico Indian war of 1849 to 1856; the California Indian disturbances of 1851 and 1852; the Utah Indian disturbances of 1850 to 1853, inclusive, and the Oregon and Washington territory Indian wars from 1851 to 1856, inclusive, and also to include the surviving widows of such officers and enlisted men. March 3, 1881, a law was passed making pension laws applicable to survivors of the Nez Perce Indian war in Montana. The pension for survivors and widows under the above acts is $3 a month. By the act of April 19, 1908, the rate for widows was raised to $12 a month. Under the act of May 30, 1908, the provisions of the acts relating to survivors of the Indian wars were extended to the surviving officers and enlisted men of the Texas volunteers who served in the defense of the frontier of that state against Mexican marauders and Indian depredations from 1855 to 1860, inclusive.

Mexican war—Under the act of Jan. 29, 1837, the secretary of the interior was directed to place on the pension roll the names of the surviving officers and enlisted men, including marines, militia and volunteers of the military and naval services of the United States, who actually served sixty days with the army or navy of the United States in Mexico, or on the coasts or frontiers thereof, or en route thereto, in the war with that nation, or were actually engaged in a battle in that war, and were honorably discharged, and such other officers and soldiers and sailors as may have been personally named in any resolution of congress for any specific service in that war, and the surviving widows of such officers and enlisted men: Provided, that every such officer or enlisted man or widow who is or may become 62 years of age, or who may become subject to any disability or dependency equivalent to some cause recognized by the pension laws as a sufficient reason for the allowance of a pension, shall be entitled to the benefits of the act. The pension under this act was $8 a month. Under the act of March 3, 1903, the rate was increased to $12 a month for survivors and under the act of April 19, 1908, the pension for widows was also made $12 a month. Under the act of Feb. 6, 1907, any person who served sixty days in the war with Mexico, who has reached the age of 62 years or over, is entitled to receive a pension as follows: In cases in which such person has reached the age of 62 years, $12 per month; 70 years, $15 per month; 75 years or over, $20 per month.

Civil war—General law: Under the acts of July 14, 1862, and March 3, 1873, every person specified in the several classes herewith enumerated who has been since March 4, 1861, or who is hereafter disabled under the conditions stated, is placed on the list of invalid pensioners of the United States and is entitled to receive for a total disability, or permanent specific disability, such pension as is provided in such cases; and for an inferior disability, an amount proportionate to that provided for total disability, to continue during the existence of the disability.

1. Any officer of the army, including regulars, volunteers and militia, or any officer in the navy or marine corps or any enlisted man, however employed, in the military or naval service of the United States, or in its marine corps, whether regularly mustered or not, disabled by reason of any wound or injury received or otherwise incapacitated or disease contracted while in the service of the United States and in the line of duty.

2. Any master serving on a gunboat, or any pilot, engineer, sailor or other person not regularly mustered serving upon any gunboat or war vessel of the United States, disabled by any wound or injury received, or otherwise incapacitated, while in the line of duty, from procuring his subsistence by manual labor.

3. Any person not an enlisted soldier in the army, serving for the time being as a member of the militia of any state, under orders of an officer of the United States, or who volunteered for the time being to serve with any regularly organized military or naval force of the United States, or who otherwise volunteered and rendered service in any engagement with rebels or Indians, disabled in consequence of wounds or injury received in the line of duty in such volunteer service.

4. Any acting assistant or contract surgeon disabled by any wound or injury received or disease contracted in the line of duty while actually performing the duties of assistant surgeon or acting assistant surgeon with any military force in the field, in transit or in hospital.

5. Any provost marshal, deputy provost marshal or enrolling officer disabled by reason of any wound or injury received in the discharge of his duty from procuring a subsistence by manual labor.

Acts have been passed extending the pension laws to the Missouri state militia (March 3, 1873); David Beatty's company of independent scouts (July 14, 1870); officers and seamen of the revenue cutter service wounded or disabled while co-operating with the United States navy (April 18, 1874); masters, mates, pilots and engineers in the merchant marine when drafted into the service of the United States (May 28, 1896).

Section 4702 of the United States revised statutes provides that if any person embraced within the classes enumerated above has died since March 4, 1861, or hereafter dies by reason of any wound, injury or disease under conditions which would have entitled him to an invalid pension had he been disabled, his widow, or if there be no widow, or in the case of her death without payment to her of any part of the pension hereinafter provided, his child or children under 16 years of age, shall be entitled to receive the same pension as the husband or father would have been entitled to had he been totally disabled, to begin from the death of the husband or father, to continue to the widow during her widowhood and to the child or children until they are severally 16 years of age; and if the widow remarries, the child or children shall be entitled to the pension from the date of remarriage.

By special acts of Congress, the provisions of the pension laws are extended to include the widows and children of colored and Indian soldiers (March 3, 1873); of officers and privates of the Missouri state militia (March 3, 1873); of soldiers murdered by guerrillas at Certralia, Mo., in 1864 (March 3, 1875); of members of Missouri state militia murdered at same place (March 3, 1875); of the members of the Jeannette expedition who died on the retreat from the wreck of that vessel in the Arctic seas (Jan. 3, 1887); of those who were lost in the wreck of the United States steamer Ashuelot (Jan. 29, 1887); of masters, mates, pilots or engineers of merchant vessels drafted into the service of the United States (May 28, 1896), and of officers and privates of the militia in the service of the United States (Jan. 21, 1903).

Under section 4703 the pensions of widows are increased at the rate of $2 per month for each child under the age of 16 years. In cases where the children are orphans or where the mother has married again, the pension of such children is increased to the same amount per month as would be allowed to the widow if living and entitled to a pension.

Section 4707 provides that if any person entitled to an invalid pension under the general law dies without leaving a widow or child, but leaves a relative or relatives dependent upon him in whole or in part at the time of his death, such relative or relatives shall be entitled to receive his pension in the following order of precedence: First, the mother; secondly, the father; thirdly, orphan brothers and sisters under 16 years of age, who shall be pensioned jointly. The provisions of this section have been extended by special acts to cover dependent relatives in the Jeannette, Ashuelot and other cases enumerated in preceding paragraphs.

Civil war—Act of June 27, 1890, and amendments: Section 1 of the act of June 27, 1890, provides that dependent parents need only show that they are without other means of support than their own manual labor or the contributions of others not legally bound for their support. Section 2 provides that all persons who served ninety days or more in the military or naval service of the United States in the civil war, who have been honorably discharged and who are now or may hereafter be suffering from a mental or physical disability of a permanent character, not the result of their own vicious habits, which incapacitates them from manual labor in such a degree as to render them unable to earn a support, shall be entitled to receive a pension not exceeding $12 a month and not less than $5 a month, proportioned to the degree of disability. Section 3 provides that a widow without other means of support than her daily labor, or with a net income of less than $250 a year, shall be put on the pension roll without having to prove that her husband's death was the result of his army service. She is to receive $8 a month and $2 a month additional for each minor child. In case a minor child is insane or permanently helpless the pension shall continue during the life of such child. An amendment adopted May 9, 1900, provides that in determining the inability of a pensioner to earn a support, each and every disability shall be duly considered and the aggregate of the disabilities shall be rated. The pension bill of April 24, 1906, provided that the age of 62 years and over should be considered a permanent, specific disability within the meaning of the law.

Civil war—Pension to army nurses: Under the act of Aug. 5, 1862, all women employed by the surgeon-general of the army as nurses, under contract or otherwise, during the civil war, or who were employed or recognized as nurses by the war department, and who rendered actual service in attendance upon the sick and wounded in any regimental post, camp or general hospital of the armies of the United States for a period of six months or more, and who were honorably relieved from such service, and who are unable to earn a support, shall be entitled to a pension of $12 a month.

Civil War—Act of Feb. 6, 1867: Be it enacted, etc., that any person who served ninety days or more in the military or naval service of the United States during the late civil war, or sixty days in the war with Mexico, and who has been honorably discharged therefrom, and who has reached the age of 62 years or over, shall, upon making proof of such facts according to such rules and regulations as the secretary of the interior may provide, be placed upon the pension roll and be entitled to receive a pension as follows: In case such person has reached the age of 62 years, $12 per month; 70 years, $15 per month; 75 years or over, $20 per month. Rank in the service is not considered in applications filed under this act.

Civil War—Act of April 19, 1903: Be it enacted, etc., that from and after the passage of this act the rate of pension for widows, minor children under 16 years and helpless minors, as defined by existing acts, now on the roll or hereafter to be placed on the pension roll and entitled to receive a less rate than hereinafter provided, shall be $12 a month; and nothing herein shall be construed to affect the existing allowance of $2 per month for each child under 16 years and for each helpless child. If any officer or enlisted man who served ninety days or more in the army or navy of the United States during the late civil war and has been honorably discharged therefrom has died or shall hereafter die leaving a widow, such widow shall, upon due proof of her husband's death, without proving his death to be the result of his army or navy service, be placed on the pension roll at the rate of $12 per month during her widowhood, provided she shall have married the said soldier or sailor prior to June 27, 1890.

War with Spain and Insurrection in Philippines—The provisions of the acts of July 14, 1862, and March 3, 1873, also apply to those who served in the war with Spain in 1898 and to the subsequent insurrection in the Philippine islands, including widows, minor and helpless children and dependent relatives.

Regular Army and Navy—The provisions of the acts of July 14, 1862, and March 3, 1873, are applicable to soldiers and sailors in the regular army and navy who have served at any time since March 4, 1861, and to those at present in the army and navy. There is also a naval pension fund, derived from certain penalties and forfeitures, and from prizes taken in war, by means of which persons disabled by age or infirmity from sea service may be retired on half pay at the end of twenty years' service, or receive aid after ten years' service.

Pension Rates—Since the original invalid pension rates were established by the acts of July 14, 1862, and March 3, 1873, there have been numerous changes, chiefly in the rate of increases. Some of these have been noted in the preceding paragraphs. The expenditures for pensions were greatly increased by the so called arrears act of Jan. 25, 1879. This provided that all pensions which had been granted or might hereafter be granted should begin from the date of the death or discharge from the service of the person on whose account the claim has been or shall hereafter be granted. The following tables will show the various kinds and rates of pensions now paid:

Note.—The act of March 2, 1895, provides that all pensioners on the rolls receiving less than $6 per month for any degree of pensionable disability shall have their pensions increased to $6 per month; and that thereafter whenever any applicant for pension would, under existing rates, be entitled to less than $6 per month for any single disability or several combined disabilities, such pensioner shall be rated at not less than $6 per month.

WIDOWS.

The widow of a soldier or sailor who died of a disability incurred while in the service and in the line of duty is entitled to the rating to which he would have been entitled for total disability, as shown in table I., and the pensionable rank of the soldier is determined by the rank held by him when the death cause was incurred, without regard to subsequent promotions. The widow of a private or of a noncommissioned officer is entitled to $12 a month with $2 additional for each minor child of the soldier or sailor in her care and custody.

MINORS.

Same rates and increase as in widows' claims, except that in cases of children of fathers below the rank of a commissioned officer the rate is increased to $12 per month from March 19, 1886, without regard to date of soldier's or sailor's marriage.

MOTHERS, FATHERS AND BROTHERS AND SISTERS.
Same rates as provided in minors' and widows' claims in cases of commissioned officers, and $3 per month to March 19, 1886, and $12 thereafter in other cases.

NURSES.

HISTORICAL.

There are now no pensioners on account of the revolutionary war on the roll. Mrs. Phoebe M. Palmeter, who was pensioned by a special act of congress as the daughter of Jonathan Wooley, who served in a New Hampshire company, died at Brookfield, N. Y., April 25, 1911, aged 96 years. The last widow pensioner of that war was Esther S. Damon of Plymouth Union, Vt., who died Nov. 11, 1906, aged 92 years. The last survivor of the revolution was Daniel F. Bakeman, who died at Freedom, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., April 5, 1869, aged 109 years 6 months and 8 days.

The last surviving pensioned soldier of the war of 1812 was Hiram Cronk of Ava, N. Y., who died May 13, 1905, aged 105 years and 16 days. The names of 279 widows of the war of 1812 remained on the pension roll June 30, 1911.

Mrs. Britannia W. Kennon, who died Jan. 11, 1911, at Tudor place, N. W., in Washington, D. C., probably drew a pension as a widow longer than any other person. She was married to Beverly Kennon in Georgetown, D. C., Dec. 8, 1842. Her husband was a captain in the navy, and was killed Feb. 28, 1844, by the bursting of a cannon on the S. S. Princeton, two members of the cabinet of President Tyler having been killed at the same time. She was granted a pension under the laws existing at that time at the rate of $50 per month from the date her husband was killed, and she received such pension from that time until her death, a period of almost sixty-seven years. She was a great-granddaughter of Martha Washington, wife of the first president of the United States. She was born Jan. 28, 1815, and was 96 years of age at the time of her death.

The number of survivors of the civil war on the pension roll at the close of the fiscal year was 529,884. The number of survivors whose names were dropped from the roll during the year on account of death was 35,243. There were more than 2,000 certificates issued during the year to survivors of the civil war who had never been pensioned before. The net reduction during the year in the number of survivors on the roll was only 32,731. The number of individuals in the military and naval service of the United States during the civil war is estimated at 2,213,365. It is believed that only about 25 per cent of those who rendered service in the civil war are now living. The death rate of the survivors is now slightly in excess of 6 per cent per annum. The average age of the survivors is about 70 years.

LAKES-TO-GULF DEEP-WATERWAY PROJECT.

ACTION BY ILLINOIS.

Oct. 16, 1907, the legislature of Illinois passed a joint resolution providing for the submission to the electors of the state of an amendment to the constitution permitting the general assembly to provide for the construction of a deep waterway from Lockport to Utica and to authorize the issue of bonds to the amount of $20,000,000 for this purpose. At the election of Nov. 3, 1908, the people approved the proposed amendment by a vote of 692,522 to 195,177 against. At the regular session of the legislature in 1909 the waterway project was considered, but no agreement could be reached as to the question of going ahead immediately with the work or waiting for federal aid and no bill was passed. The matter was included in the list of subjects to be considered at the extra session of the legislature in the winter and spring of 1909-1910, but no action was taken.

At the regular session in 1911 a waterway bill was passed by the senate, but in the house Speaker Charles Adkins prevented any action being taken. Gov. Deneen called an extra session of the legislature, which began June 14, but adjourned without taking final action.

WATERWAY CONVENTION.

The sixth annual convention of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway association was held in Chicago Oct. 12-14, 1911. Addresses were made by Gov. O. A. Eberhart of Minnesota, Gov. H. S. Hadley of Missouri, ex-Gov. Joseph W. Folk, O. P. Austin of the bureau of statistics in Washington, Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida, R. R. McCormick of Chicago and others. Resolutions were adopted reaffirming the declaration of principles and purposes adopted at the convention in St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 26, 1910. "We reiterate our demand on the legislative and executive branches of the federal government for the speedy completion of the deep waterway connecting the great lakes with the Gulf of Mexico, as the main commercial artery of the country, and we declare our fixed determination to procure this inestimable source of natural prosperity, regardless of all opposition and despite the antagonism based on obsolete and ancient standards and ideals."

The convention will be held in Little Rock, Ark., in 1912.

FEDERAL CENSUS OF RELIGIOUS BODIES (1906).

There were in the United States in 1906, the period of the fifth United States census of the religious bodies in this country, according to census bulletin No. 103, issued in September, 1909, 136 religious denominations, 212,230 local religious organizations, 32,936,445 church members and $1,257,575,867 invested in church edifices.

MEMBERSHIP BY SEX.

The census of 1906 collected for the first time statistics of the membership by sex. Of the total number of members returned by sex, 43.1 per cent were male and 56.9 per cent female. For the protestant bodies as a whole the difference was greater, 39.3 per cent being male and 60.7 per cent female. For the Roman catholic church the membership was nearly equally divided between the sexes, 49.3 per cent being male and 50.7 per cent female. This is true also for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, which reports 48.6 per cent male. The largest percentage of males shown for any denomination was that for the Greek Orthodox church, 93.9, which is due to the fact that practically all the Greek immigrants have been males; The Lutheran bodies showed 46.1 per cent males; Disciples, 40 per cent; Methodist and Baptist bodies, 33.5 per cent each; Presbyterian bodies, 37.9 per cent; and Protestant Episcopal church, 35.5 per cent. The denominations showing the smallest percentage of males were the Christian Scientists, 27.6, and the Shakers, 21.3.

The total value of church property reported in 1906 for all denominations was $1,257,575,867, of which $395,942,578 was reported for protestant bodies, $292,638,787 for the Roman catholic church and $28,994,502 for all the remaining bodies. The property includes the buildings owned and used for worship by the organizations reporting, together with the value of their sites and of their furniture, organs, bells, etc. It does not include the value of rented buildings or halls, nor of parsonages, parochial school buildings, theological seminaries, monasteries, convents or the like. The statistics, it may be added, are not complete, as some of the bodies were only partially represented. For example, for the Jewish congregations only 747 organizations, or considerably less than one-half the entire number, reported the value of church property owned by them, and, similarly, for the Church of Christ, Scientist, only 401 organizations, or not much more than three-fifths of the entire number, made a report. For the Roman catholic church only a little more than four-fifths of the total number of organizations made any report of property owned, while the eastern orthodox churches as a whole show a report for only about one-fifth of all their organizations.

The total value of the parsonages of 54,214 organizations reporting in 1906 was $143,495,853.

DEBT ON CHURCH PROPERTY.

The total amount of debt on church property reported in 1906 was $108,050,946, or 8.6 per cent of the value of the church property reported. Of the total amount of debt, $53,301,254 was reported by protestant bodies, $49,488,055 by the Roman catholic church, $4,556,571 by the Jewish congregations and $705,066 by the remaining bodies.
